Prices Frozen On Electrical Appliances For Homes

Set at March 30 Level for 44 Items; Ceiling Studied for All Consumer Goods

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

The Office of Price Administration, admittedly studying a plan for general price fixing of almost all consumer goods, last night blanketed 44 household electrical appliances under a price ceiling.

The order, which covered products ranging from hair curlers and cigarette lighters to flat irons and heaters, forbids retail prices in excess of those prevailing March 30.

Acting Administrator John E. Hamm declared that the order was issued to prevent runaway prices on the articles whose manufacture after May 31 has been forbidden by the War Production Board. Hamm said that rationing of the articles was not contemplated at this time, and that present supplies were expected to last a year.

General Freezing Considered

Meantime, informed sources in OPA indicated their concern with the rising trend of consumer goods prices and revealed that studies had been made of possible general "freeze" action on all finished commodities at the manufacturing, wholesale and retail levels.

They emphasized, however, that no decision on the sweeping proposal had been reached and that no such action would be immediately forthcoming.

Deputy Price Administrator J. K. Galbraith said that the price plan had been under study for three months along with a proposal to ration consumer goods and to license retailers. The proposals are due to be placed before OPA Chief Leon Henderson, who returned yesterday from a trip to Brazil.

Taxes May Obviate Plan

Officials said that if Congress approves the high tax rates recommended by the Treasury in the pending $7,600,000,000 war levy bill, retail price controls might not be necessary because the taxes would absorb a large portion of the country's increased purchasing power and would thus serve an anti-inflationary function.

Last night's freeze order forbade further price increases for the following commodities:

Biscuit and muffin bakers, bottle warmers, bread toasters, broilers, casseroles, chafing dishes, cigar and cigarette lighters, clothes dryers, coffee makers, corn poppers, curling irons, deep fat fryers, double boilers, dry shavers, egg cookers, fan-type heaters, fans, flat irons, food and plate warmers, food mixers, griddles, hair clippers, hair dryers, hot plates and disc stoves, immersion heaters, juice extractors, massage vibrators, neckwear and trouser pressers, ovens, pads and blankets, percolators, portable air heaters, roasters, sandwich toasters, smoothing irons, table stoves, tea kettles, tea tables, unit radiator heaters, urns, vaporizers, waffle irons, water heaters and whippers.

Arrest of Eight Breaks Up Auto Tire Theft Ring

Police last night broke up a gang of tire thieves with the arrest of eight young men, 15 to 29 years old.

Detectives said the youths admitted the theft of seven automobiles and a large number of tires from parking lots within the past two months. The cars were stripped of tires and batteries which were later sold.

After weeks of investigation, Detective Sergt. J. O. Curtis and Detectives J. H. Hunt and Albert Embrey made the arrests yesterday. Their probe led them to a garage which, they said, was used as a headquarters for storing and dismantling the cars.

U. S. Urges Paper Salvage, But Wastes 30% of Its Own

The Federal Government, which is urging everyone else to save waste paper for victory, is the most flagrant destroyer of waste paper in Washington.

Analysis of refuse delivered to the city incinerator shows that of the three general classes of trash collected—city, commercial and Government—only the trucks from the Government offices bring in notable amount of salvageable material, incinerator Supt. J. V. Wenzel told The Post last night.

Federal failure to cooperate fully in the waste-paper salvage drive was frankly admitted by Ferdinand Kaufholz, Public Building Administration's chief of building services. Although the Penn Paper Stock Co. has a contract to reclaim all usable waste from the Government buildings, Kaufholz said that hardly more than 70 per cent of the material is made available to the dealer.

The other 30 per cent of salvageable waste, mostly cardboard, is hauled in Federal Works Administration trucks to the incinerator, where it is burned.

"I simply can't explain why this 30 per cent is burned," Kaufholz said. "We have been meaning to do something about it, but the size of the Government activities got too much for us. We know what we have been doing, and we have been expecting criticism on it for a long time."

The arrangements with the Penn Company calls for all usable waste to be stuffed by charwomen or porters into sacks provided by the contractor, who sends trucks to the buildings every day to pick up the bags.

The contents of the bags are sorted, packaged and sold to mills to be reclaimed for industrial channels. Most of the large hotels and office buildings in town have similar arrangements with dealers.

There seems to be no question of the Penn company's ability to handle its Government contracts. Lieut. Richard Miller, chief of the Treasury Procurement Division's surplus material division, which supervises the contract, stated that the contractor gives two-hour service on delivering bags or making collection on special notice.

"We have never had complaints from any department that the Penn company has failed to live up to its part of the contract," said Miller. "I can't understand why there

Standard Oil Again Accused Of Obstruction

Foley Charges Firm Tried to Make Sale For Nazi 'Looted Gold'

By Windsor Booth
Post Staff Writer

Three high-ranking Federal officials told the Truman Defense Investigating Committee yesterday that the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey failed to cooperate in the defense effort and thwarted attempts to close Nazi airlines in South America before America entered the war.

Adolph A. Berle, jr., Assistant Secretary of State, testified that despite repeated requests Standard refused to stop supplying German and Italian airlines with gasoline until the State Department threatened to put Standard's Brazilian subsidiary on the "black list."

Edward H. Foley, jr., general counsel of the Treasury Department, testified that Standard Oil in 1941 sought to sell its Hungarian oil properties to I. G. Farbenindustrie, the German chemical trust, for 24 million dollars. Foley said the company officials were willing to make the deal, although they knew the money had been "looted" from the conquered countries of Europe, and the British blockade would have to be breached before they could get their funds. Foley said Treasury's Foreign Funds Control refused to sanction the arrangement.

Aviation Gasoline Sales

William La Varre, explorer, long-time resident of South America and now chief of the Commerce Department's Latin-American division, disputed Standard President W. S. Farish's testimony that Standard was required to furnish the Nazi-controlled "Lati" and "Condor" airlines with gas and oil because there was a contract with them. La Varre said his 3-year investigation disclosed there never was a contract. He also gave the committee a long list of Nazi agents who used the airlines to carry on propaganda in South America and the United States, and a list of strategic war materials transported to Berlin by air.

Berle told the committee that 89 per cent of American industry has cooperated "wholeheartedly" with the Government in refusing to

Bill Framed For Profit Curb Scaled to Jobs

2 to 10 Per Cent Would Be Fixed, in Inverse Proportion to Contract

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Sliding scale limitations on war profits ranging from 2 to 10 per cent, depending on the size of the contract, yesterday were tentatively accepted by a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee.

The graduated limitations were advanced as a substitute for the flat 6-per-cent-of-cost limit approved last week by the House.

The subcommittee ordered the graduated limitations embodied in a redraft of the more flexible profits formula recommended by the Army, Navy and War Production Board.

The original formula omitted any percentage limits, but left heads of war agencies power to renegotiate war contracts where profits were considered unreasonable or unreasonable bonuses were paid.

Sharp differences on methods to recapture excessive war profits still existed within the subcommittee, and today the whole controversy will be passed along to the full Appropriations Committee to decide.

Legislative draftsmen were told to whip together the two methods into one composite plan, and this will be dropped in the lap of the full committee.

The subcommittee meanwhile completed action on the $18,500,000,000 sixth supplemental defense bill, to which the House profits rider was attached. The Senate, embarked on nearly three weeks of Easter recesses, must return Easter Monday to thresh out the profits dispute, which all but overshadowed the big defense bill.

Up against public clamor for ceilings on profits, the House Saturday approved the rigid 6 per cent limit, which War Production Chief Donald Nelson condemned as unworkable. Legal counsel for the Army, Navy and WPB worked out a plan retaining flexible control of profits in the hands of the armed services. It was into a readaptation of this plan that the Senate subcommittee yesterday wrote the sliding scale limits.

Contractors would be assured of

Germ of Infantile Paralysis, Antiserum Reported Found

By the Associated Press

Boston, April 3.—A new concept concerning the cause of infantile paralysis, which would entirely revise its future treatment, was reported today by Dr. E. C. Rosenow, Mayo Foundation bacteriologist.

Rosenow said that after 25 years' work, he had obtained proof that the disease is caused by a minute form of visible streptococcus germs and not by an invisible virus, as science has long believed.

The way was now clear, he said, to apply an antiserum he has perfected not only for treatment of the disease in advanced stages but for "possible skin tests" to detect the disease before it can develop.

He declared he had been able to produce typical symptoms of the disease in monkeys by injecting a material derived directly from streptococcus germs, and said the powerful electron microscope had revealed in the injection material organisms that he definitely identified as minute forms of the streptococcus.

Proof that the cause of infantile paralysis was a bacterial factor and not a virus, he said, rested in the fact that an antiserum he had developed from streptococcus germs had been used with "striking results" among 2000 human patients over the years, reducing mortality as much as 90 per cent in certain groups.

British Quit Prome

American Flying Fortresses, reportedly led by Maj. Gen. Lewis H. Brereton, yesterday struck down out of India into the Bay of Bengal to blast a Japanese cruiser and three troopships.

It was, obviously, a bold effort to relieve pressure on Burma's British defenders who earlier had been driven northwestward out of Prome, western anchor of their lines, and it came simultaneously with an official British denial of a Chinese report that the Nipponese had occupied Akyab on Burma's western coast.

BRERETON

The Flying Fortresses, which, a United Press dispatch indicated were led personally by Brereton, fell upon the Japanese ships when an invasion fleet was intercepted at Port Blair in the Andaman Islands. The cruiser was set afire, one troopship was damaged and two others probably damaged, the communique said.

(War Department officials here doubted that Brereton led the raid and said they were without further knowledge of the communique announcing it.)

The American heavy bombers found the Jap ships in the harbor of Port Blair, on the east side of the Andamans, where they were believed massing for a thrust at the western Burma coast, possibly at Akyab itself. Port Blair is 500 miles south of Akyab and 200 miles off the coast of lower Burma.

Meet Fighter Planes

The communique said that the fortresses encountered enemy pursuit craft—indicating that the Japanese have already established an air base in the Andamans, which

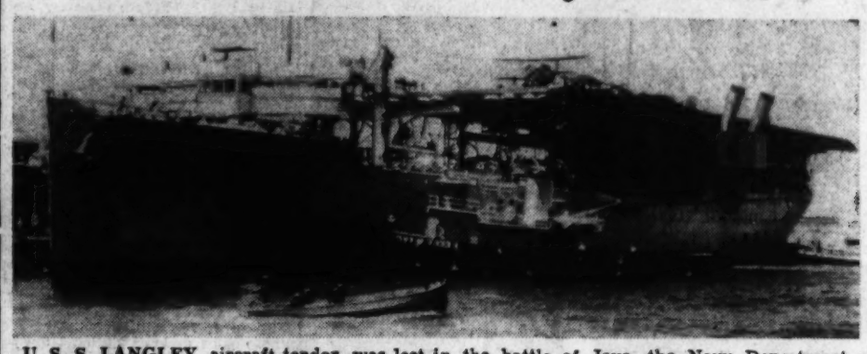
Aircraft Tender Lost in Java Battle



U. S. S. LANGLEY, aircraft tender, was lost in the battle of Java, the Navy Department announced last night

Two Warships, Naval Tanker Sunk a Month Ago in Pacific

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Three more United States vessels, including the aircraft tender Langley, were added yesterday by the Navy Department to the roll of ships lost in the bloody battle of the Southwest Pacific.

An unofficial estimate placed the loss of life at 700 of the 1156 officers and men normally carried on the three ships.

The Langley, "virtually smothered by bombs," went down February 27 south of Java with the loss of 14 of her crew. She had been claimed at least three times by the Japanese in the first month of the war.

Two days later the naval tanker Pecos, carrying survivors of the Langley, was sunk by Japanese dive bombers.

Peary Goes Down Fighting

The destroyer Peary, a World War four-stacker, was bombed in early March in the harbor at Darwin, Australia, her antiaircraft guns blazing until she sank under their crews.

Loss of the three vessels brings Navy sinkings so far in this war to 23 ships of all types.

Commander R. P. McConnell, captain of the Langley, revealed in San Francisco yesterday that after his ship had been abandoned her end was hastened by escorting destroyers to prevent her falling into enemy hands. The Langley was carrying supplies at the time, not serving as a tender for seaplanes.

Two attacks were made, McConnell revealed, the first from 15,000 feet by level bombers, causing no damage. Then another formation appeared shortly after noon.

"The second run of bombs was very effective," McConnell said. "The Langley was practically smothered by bombs. We were in the midst of the salvo and the damage forced us to leave the ship."

After shelling the veteran aircraft tender, the destroyers hovered about, picking up survivors. Next morning an effort was made to transfer them to the Pecos, which was about 30 miles away when the fight started, but this could not be accomplished because Jap bombers still flew over and a submarine was thought to be near.

Transfer Made Next Day

The ships kept moving and the Langley's survivors were transferred next day.

Commanding the Pecos was Commander Elmer Paul Abernethy, of Oklahoma City, Okla., who was stationed at the Washington Navy

Red Guerillas Slash at Vital Nazi Supplies

Smolensk Area Raid Destroys Equipment Needed for Big Push

By William B. King
Associated Press Writer

London, April 3.—Russian guerillas striking in the Smolensk sector 230 miles west of Moscow were declared officially tonight to have inflicted heavy losses on German troops, and to have destroyed 36 bridges and vital equipment needed for Hitler's spring push.

Announcements in Moscow indicated the sharpest fighting along the front still was in the northwest. A communique said one Red army detachment killed more than 450 Nazis in a single day's fighting in that area, presumably near Lake Ilmen.

The Germans also were reported thrown out of several populated places along the front, but these were not identified by the Russians who early today reported a 13-day toll of more than 25,000 German dead.

Official announcements in Moscow and Berlin indicated only sharp patrol forays elsewhere along the vast front where both sides are gathering huge reserves for the supreme 1942 test.

After days of reporting virtually unceasing Russian attacks, the German high command said that although "heavy local thrusts" were encountered, "on the whole a lessening of enemy activity in the east is noticeable." The Germans admitted "a fairly large number of

3 Round Trips

4 Destroyers Wreak Havoc In Jap Convoy

How four old World War destroyers made three round trips through a Japanese convoy in Macassar Strait, firing torpedoes from both sides and then firing their guns pointblank when the torpedoes were gone, was told here yesterday by the officer who commanded them.

Commander Paul Hopkins Talbot, 45, said darkness and heavy smoke from a burning Jap vessel and from oil wells ashore set afire by the Dutch concealed them from Japanese destroyers escorting the convoy. The battle took place early in the morning of January 24 off Balikpapan after the four destroyers had plowed through a monsoon to reach the spot.

"The engagement did a tremendous amount of good as far as morale was concerned," Talbot said. "The men came out of there the cocks of the walk."

He said his destroyer division had been ordered by Admiral Thomas C. Hart, commanding the Asiatic Fleet, to find the convoy which had been reported by Dutch airmen. He said it consisted of 40 to 50 transports and supply ships and 12 destroyers.

Found Convoy in Dark

His destroyers suddenly encountered the convoy in the darkness, he said, when a division of four Japanese destroyers loomed up "dead ahead, crossing from starboard to port about 1000 yards away."

"We altered course," Talbot said, "to pass astern and the Japs failed to open fire. A few moments later we found ourselves in the midst of the Japanese convoy with ships to right and left. Torpedo fire was opened. It was extremely difficult to identify targets due to the very poor visibility.

"They had apparently slowed down and the ships were headed in all directions. A few minutes after torpedo fire was opened one torpedo to the starboard connected with a ship close by and the ship appeared to evaporate. She definitely broke in two and went down. We were unable to identify her but I rather think she was a destroyer.

"We continued on through the convoy firing torpedoes and after passing through reversed our course and went through them again. We

Chiang Urges India's Leaders To Reconsider

Wavell Confers With Cripps, Makes Plans to See Azad and Nehru

By H. R. Stimson
Associated Press Staff Writer

New Delhi, India, April 3.—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, leader of free China, was understood today to have appealed to India's leaders to reconsider the formula by which Britain is seeking that sub-continent's full cooperation against the Axis in return for Indian independence after the war.

It was not disclosed whether he had urged India's acceptance of the most controversial point—Britain's insistence that she retain control of Indian defense for the emergency period.

He was said to have sent a special messenger to Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, perhaps the most powerful figure on the Indian side of the table, at a critical moment, for the All-India Congress and certain lesser bodies already had rejected the British plan, although leaving the way open for further negotiations.

Moslems Oppose Plan

(Of these groups were the Moslems, whose leader, Mohammed Ali Jinnah, declared in Allahabad today that his followers would never accept any proposals that would prevent their achievement of an autonomous Moslem state.)

The British commander in chief for India, Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, also entered the discussions, conferring with Sir Stafford Cripps, the British emissary, and arranged to talk also with Maulana Abul Kalan Azad, the president of the All-India Congress, and Nehru. This second projected conference raised intense interest, for in it the British commander would have opportunity both to outline the realities of the Indian defense problem and to determine whether some compromise toward giving the Indians partial responsibility could safely be made.

His Usefulness 'Ended'

Grattan Quits Economic Board And Says Voorhis Libeled Him

By the Associated Press

C. Hartley Grattan, saying that "libelous statements" made about him on the floor of the House by Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California, had ended his usefulness to the Government, resigned yesterday from his position as an economic analyst for the Board of Economic Welfare.

The implication left by Voorhis, Grattan said, "is that I am a Nazi sympathizer." Denying this flatly, he added:

"I challenge Mr. Voorhis to come out from behind his Congressional immunity and repeat the charges made in the Congressional Record. I shall then take suitable legal action so that the issue may be settled in the courts of law. My record as an opponent to fascism is crystal clear and I shall vindicate that record."

Grattan said Voorhis' speech "contained a flagrant untruth with regard to the contents of my foreword to a book published in 1940 by Howell, Soskin & Co. of New York."

"The untruth is found in Mr. Voorhis' charge that 'this foreword consists all the way through of a vigorous denunciation of this country's foreign policy of support of England and France.'"

Voorhis charged that Grattan had written the foreword to a 1940 German "white paper" which document attempted "to lay the blame for the invasion of Poland on certain American officials." The Representative noted that Grattan was one of the men mentioned by Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, in charging that 35 officials or employes of the Board of Economic Warfare had been linked with Communist-front organizations.

Grattan's statements were in his letter of resignation to Executive Director Milo Perkins of the board. Perkins accepted it with expressions of regret and concluded, "may I add that I have no question as to your integrity or loyalty to your country."

Meet Over France

British, Luftwaffe Again Trade Aerial Blows Across Channel

By the Associated Press

London, April 3.—The reawakened fury of the Western air war left flame and ruin tonight from the Seine to England's staunchly guarded southern coast.

Overnight battle and bombardment in the light of an April moon brought the fiercest exchange of blows in months as the R. A. F. delivered its third assault on the Matford Truck plant in Poissy, suburb of Paris, and the German air force gave a south coast British center one of its worst raids of the war. A dispatch from German-controlled Paris said there were 300 casualties in the Matford raid.

Apparently, there was to be no letup. This afternoon the R. A. F. again shuttled across the Channel blasting at Boulogne and Calais opposite Dover and at other areas farther north.

The Germans were over the southeast coast, one of last night's targets, again tonight but in considerable less force. Violent antiaircraft fire kept them high and there were no immediate reports of bombings.

Official announcements placed German losses since Thursday at four: one plane shot down over the south coast last night and two bombers and a German seaplane destroyed Thursday afternoon by coastal command Beaufighters.

In last night's blows, a southeast English town was hit. The English targets were identified by the Germans as Portland (south coast nav-

Roosevelt Opens A Name Contest; The Prize—Victory

President Roosevelt yesterday took a leaf out of the advertising agency book and started a name contest.

He wants a title for the present world conflict, which must be concise and carry the feeling of a fight for democracy and small nations.

At his press conference, Mr. Roosevelt explained that he did not care for "Second World War" or "World War II," but asked that the newspapers enlist the inventiveness of the American people.

Immediately names for the war broke out like rash all over the country.

"Liberty War," suggested by A. J. Greene, associate editor of the Paterson (N. J.) Evening News. Identical suggestions came from widely separated persons.

Bataan Defenders Easily Repulse Final Thrusts of Smashed Jap Offensive

Enemy Bombs Church on Good Friday

Powerful Japanese thrusts at the defenses of Bataan Peninsula have sputtered to a halt, the War Department reported yesterday, and American and Filipino defenders have easily beaten off light attacks "with considerable enemy losses."

Meanwhile, the Japanese celebrated Good Friday by bombing a church at Miral, on the island of Mindanao. Casualties were not reported.

After two savage attempts to break through the right and left center of Lieut. Gen. Jonathan Wainwright's line on Bataan, ground action Friday night was confined to minor attacks at several points along the front. All of these, Gen. Wainwright reported, were repelled with considerable losses to the enemy.

Air attacks on the Bataan line, which have marked the renewed offensive since Japanese Gen. Yamashita took over the unprofitable task of attempting to dislodge the American-Filipino defenders, continued Friday night and yesterday.

Corregidor and its buttressing forts across the mouth of Manila Bay were bombed again from the air and were shelled by Japanese shore batteries near Cavite. The forts returned the fire and suffered little damage despite Japanese claims that they have been battered into silence.

Two large-scale assaults on the Bataan line this week have resulted in nothing for the Japanese but bloody repulses. The first, against the right center of the line, thrust back a few outposts which were regained by sharp counterattacks. The second, directed Friday against the left center of the line, ended even more disastrously for the Japanese, who thrust a spearhead into the defenders' front and lost it when Americans and Filipinos closed in and cut it off. They were still mopping up yesterday.

Army Communique No. 174

Full text of the War Department communique issued as of 4 p. m. yesterday follows:

1. Philippine Theater—During the night of April 2 there were several light attacks by the enemy at various points along our front line. All of these assaults were repelled by our troops, with considerable enemy losses. Bombing of our front lines by the Japanese continued today.

There were several light air attacks on our harbor defenses today. These were accompanied by shelling from enemy batteries on the Cavite shore. Our forts returned the fire.

Good Friday was marked by a report of a Japanese air attack on a church at Miral, near Digos, on the island of Mindanao.

2. There is nothing to report from other areas.

Hell-Bent Yank Planes Bag 39-65 Jap Aircraft

By Don Caswell
United Press Staff Writer

Gen. MacArthur's Headquarters, Melbourne, April 3.—The United States Army added another chapter to the lengthening record of American exploits in the Pacific today, revealing that Maj. Charles A. Sprague's Yankee fighter squadron shot down 39 to 65 Japanese planes during the Netherlands East Indies campaign.

This, the "Hell Bent" Squadron, executed first the special assignment of breaking up a Japanese convoy of 30 barges off Java. Its official diary was replete with such notations as "another doll down" and "we loosed a lot of lead poison at Charlie."

American losses were "comparatively light." Fighting nearly always against heavy odds, the squadron numbered never more than 20 planes, once only eight. Spraque since has been listed as missing in action, but some of his men now are in Australia and carrying on as a unit.

"One Fighting Fool"

The squadron bagged 20 Japanese navy "zero" combat planes, 14 heavy bombers, 4 army 97s and 1 Messerschmitt 110 German-type twin-engined fighter. There also were 26 "probables" and an unestimated number destroyed on the ground.

The Army spokesman awarded the title of ace of squadron to Lieut. William J. Hennon, of Minnesota, whose guns downed at least three planes and accounted for a good share of the probable victories.

Hennon—"one fighting fool," the diary said—once chased 17 Japanese bombers more than 100 miles, finally bagging one. Again, after emerging unscratched from a furious dogfight he used up his remaining fuel and ammunition ranging alone over a Japanese landing operation on the shore of Sumatra, strafing boats and troops and oil tanks for four hours.

Jap Transports Attacked

Once the squadron joined United States dive bombers in an attack on 60 Jap transports and warships off Sourabaja and inflicted heavy damage and casualties.

The squadron members having at least two Japanese planes each to their credit included Lieut. James B. Moorhead, Clarksville, Tenn.; George E. Keiser, Joseph J. Kurzel, Nathaniel H. Blanton, Grant Mahoney and Ben S. Irvin.

The squadron once met six Japanese planes over Palembang, shot down four and routed the remainder. Again it tore into seven Japanese bombers escorted by as many fighters. Moorhead downed two, including the flight leader.

Lieut. Frank Adkins, engaged in a dogfight over Java, suddenly realized his plane was out of control and took to his parachute. Landing safely 200 yards from the beach where the Japanese troops were landing from several barges, he sprinted for the bush.

He found a native on a bicycle and promptly boarded the handlebars. When the native was worn out, Adkins traded places with him. He pedaled over jungle roads, through villages and across rice paddies until he was far inland, where he found a Dutch staff car and reached an air field. Now he is in Australia.

were firing both sides going through.

"In all, we made three trips through the convoy. Each leg was about 5 miles. We were undiscovered, or at least were not fired on for at least an hour. They didn't know what hit them, a sub, a mine or what."

Talbot said he saw one Jap ship go down and another list sharply to port and saw several torpedo explosions. Then the destroyers ran out of torpedoes and were ordered to open with their guns at 300 to 500 yards range.

"As soon as we opened up, of course, the Japs were aware of what was going on," he added, "and our fire was returned."

When the eastern sky began to lighten about 4 a. m., Talbot said, his little force broke off action and pulled away. One destroyer had been hit once and four men were wounded. No one was killed.

"We headed south at high speed," he said, "expecting to be chased, but if the Japs did chase us they never caught up with us. We also expected planes would catch up with us and give us a bombing, but they didn't."

A native of Willoughby, Ohio, where his family now lives, Commander Talbot was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1914. He served on destroyers six years after graduation and, after service ashore and in battleships and cruisers, returned again to destroyers, assuming command of the Helm in 1937. He took command of Destroyer Division 59 in May, 1941.

3 Sinkings Announced; 4th Reported

By the Associated Press

Three new ship sinkings in the Axis submarine campaign against American shipping were announced yesterday by the Navy. Seventeen men were missing from their crews.

Maritime sources in Havana said a fourth United States ship, a freighter, had been torpedoed and sunk somewhere north of Cuba.

[The newspaper Mundo, at Havana, according to the United Press, said two United States ships, carrying 80,000 bags of sugar, and a third ship believed to be a tanker, were torpedoed and sunk between Key West and Havana.]

The lost ships announced by the Navy included two medium-sized merchant vessels sunk several weeks ago in the Caribbean and a small tug, towing three barges, sunk with two of its train off the Atlantic coast.

Radioman Stuck to Post

Survivors of one of the freighters told in New York how the radio operator, Ignace Shoinacki, 24, of Brooklyn, N. Y., remained alone aboard his sinking vessel to send the ship's position. Then he leaped into the water holding his pet baby African bush monkey in his mouth.

Shoinacki said he knew the two lifeboats had left the ship with the crew and officers but "my job was to stay until I had sent S.O.S. reports." His six calls for help were heard in a British port and the entire crew of 35 was rescued after two torpedoes struck their ship.

The attack came at night and Shoinacki was pulled aboard one of the boats only because he took with him a fishlight to signal his companions from the water. The monkey died shortly before.

Sub Stays With Lifeboats

Survivors of the second freighter said in New York interviews that they spent six days in open boats and sailed 545 miles in shark-infested waters before they were rescued. One man was missing from the crew of 34.

They said that a U-boat, her name in black letters on the bow, surfaced within 10 feet of their boats and four members climbed out of the conning tower to question them. They said the submarine trailed life boats until shortly before they were picked up by a rescue vessel.

Sixteen men were missing from the attack upon the tug, but at Norfolk, Va., it was announced that the tug's master and engineer and nine members of the barge crews were rescued.

Navy officials said the barge men reported the submarine was so near they could hear orders given for loading and firing the raider's deck gun.

Lieut. and Mrs. Martin, Now

WED QUIETLY—Lieut. William McChesney Martin, jr., former president of the New York Stock Exchange, and Cynthia Davis, daughter of former Secretary of War Dwight F. Davis, were married yesterday in a quiet ceremony at Baltimore. Davis, now director general of the Army specialist corps, was his daughter's only attendant. Martin resigned his $48,000-a-year job when he was called April 9, 1941, to serve in the Army as a $21-a-month buck private

Rails Move Record Volume Of Oil to East

By the Associated Press

The railroads, called upon to help meet the oil emergency caused by tanker ship sinkings and war diversions, moved a record volume of 506,025 barrels of petroleum daily into the East last week, Petroleum Coordinator Harold L. Ickes reported yesterday.

The record was attained by the use of 33,750 tank cars, which transported the volume equivalent of approximately 100 tanker ships. The Eastern States used approximately 1,700,000 barrels of oil daily.

The previous record of 464,561 barrels was set in the week ended March 21. Oil sources pointed out that in January, 1941, before a tanker shortage developed, only about 700 barrels of oil were moved into the East by rail during the entire month.

Ickes reported also that three million barrels of heavy fuel oil would be saved annually for distribution to East Coast war industries by voluntary conversion already made to coal and other fuels.

Responding to a request that as many consumers of fuel oil as possible change immediately to other fuels, the coordinator said operators throughout the East each day were increasing the number of plants that have been converted. Conversions have been made by medical schools, warehouses, apartment houses, department stores, power companies, silk mills and other industries.

Young Bataan Officer Sees Victory for U.S.

A young Washingtonian, lieutenant in the Philippine Scouts, has written from Bataan that he expects to come home safely since "they have come as close to me as possible with everything they have."

ROUTH

The letter, from Lieut. James W. Routh, jr., was received by his father and mother, who reside here at 2511 Q Street Northwest, and was the first word they had had from him since a Christmas telegram.

"When they cut your food over there think of us eating two meals a day—tomatoes and salmon," Lieut. Routh said. His concluding line was:

"We will take these boys yet."

Lieut. Routh was graduated from the University of California a year ago and immediately became a reserve officer, sailing for the Philippines June 1. His father has resided here for three years as director of research and statistics, United States Housing Authority.

Routh's letter was dated February 12 and mentioned that he had been promoted to the rank of first lieutenant and had been named for a citation. He spoke of a slight wound, insufficient for hospitalization. Routh said he hadn't missed a day of the war.

villages was taken."

A late German radio report indicated the heaviest fighting of the day was going on northeast of Lake Ilmen, where violent Russian attacks under artillery cover were said to have been repulsed, and on the Central Front, where German dive bombers attacked Red army communications in waves, purportedly destroying six supply trains and damaging 18.

Nazis Use Fresh Troops

The Russian communique spoke of attacks by "infantry freshly arrived from Germany" and said there was "no essential change" in frontline positions.

Although it seemed from this that the thousands of fresh units drained from every corner of Germany and her satellites had begun scattered attacks, observers in London regarded these as only preliminary activity to consolidate jumping off places for the big assault.

The Russians appeared to be centering their efforts on harassing these preparations as much as possible by raids to blow up ammunition dumps and knock out artillery batteries.

U. S. Is Worst Paper-Waster

should be any failure by the Public Buildings Administration to do its share."

The major defense departments are the worst offenders, the established departments the most cooperative. Between Wings Eight and Nine of the Navy Building there is a trash shed, which yesterday afternoon was packed almost to the roof with papers and cardboard cartons—many of the precious corrugated board—waiting to be taken to the fire. There was a similar pile in the Munitions Building.

In many buildings some of the extravagance is due to poor supervision over custodial help. The charwomen and janitors find it much easier to empty trash into the large refuse bins than to sort it and fill the salvage bags.

This, Kaufholz said, was due to the shortage of labor; the cleaners have too much territory to cover without taking short cuts. The same shortage prevents close supervision.

But Kaufholz admitted that these problems also confront managers of private buildings, which have had high salvage records.

To prove the Government interest, however belated, in the salvaging of waste paper, Kaufholz said that a conference between representatives of the Public Buildings Administration and the Procurement Division had been called for Monday morning. On Tuesday the refuse contractor and a representative from the District Salvage Committee will meet with them to work out better coordination between the building custodians, the Government trucks and the contractors' trucks.

They Hoard It, Too

The Government not only destroys paper—it hoards it, too.

In the basements of most Federal buildings there are stacks of old records, outdated and useless. But they can't be destroyed until Congress gives its approval. Then when Congress acts, the records must be taken to the National Archives where the weeding out and evaluating process, already once done in the departments, is repeated.

The lower corridors of the Procurement Building, for example, are lined with hundreds of filing cabinets awaiting reprocessing in the machine shops there. The cabinets cannot be emptied of their tons of discarded papers, however, until the cumbersome Congressional rules are compiled with—and this may not be for a year.

Secret and highly confidential Government documents may not be salvaged at all, but must by law be burned. These papers are handled separately, though, and are not included in the incinerator manager's appraisal of the high salvagable content of Federal refuse.

Neither of the two city incinerators—one at Thirty-first and K Streets Northwest, and one at First and O Streets Southeast—is equipped to do any salvaging on the premises. Incoming trucks dump their loads into long pits behind the loading platforms, and grapples on traveling cranes lift the refuse up into the maws of hoppers that feed it into the furnaces.

There are five furnaces at the Southeast incinerator, and two at the Georgetown plant, each able to consume 85 tons of trash every 24 hours. Of the 595 tons burned per day, about 50 tons is Government material—and of these 50 tons the greater part might be saved for defense.

Temporary Surplus Admitted

Reports that a surplus of paper has resulted from the salvaging campaign were affirmed in part by the War Production Board's Bureau of Industrial Conservation, but it was stated emphatically to be only temporary.

"There are certain regions in the country, especially on the West Coast, where the mills have all the paper stock they can handle, but other parts of the country are still paper-hungry," a spokesman for the bureau said.

"By next fall, however, there will be no stock on hand in any place. Therefore, persons who have been doing their part in salvaging their paper are urged not to slacken their efforts because of the reports of some dealers that paper is no longer wanted."

The bureau admitted that there is more selectivity in the purchase of scrap paper than at the beginning of the drive. In January any kind of paper was accepted. Now mills will not buy stock that is obviously useless or poor in quality. Many dealers, the bureau reported, had been wetting their bales or stuffing them with rocks to add weight.

which Britain seeks to make India a willing war partner in return for a promise of postwar dominion status.

There also was talk of giving an American or Chinese guarantee to the Indian people that Britain would fulfill her promises after the war.

Many Chinese feared the Japanees might consider the attitude of Indian political leaders in opposing the British plan as an "invasion invitation."

Fire Guts Buildings At Fairgrounds

Detroit, April 3 (AP).—A fire swept two buildings at the Michigan State fairgrounds today, causing damage estimated at $200,000. The flames originated in a building now devoted to National Youth Administration projects and jobless boys. Firemen said the fire was caused by a careless cigarette smoker who used the paint room to sneak a forbidden puff.

they occupied ten days ago—and intense antiaircraft fire. No damage was sustained and all the American planes returned safely, it was added.

The Associated Press reported that extreme Japanese pressure in a night-long battle in the jungle country along the Irrawaddy River forced the British to withdraw from Prome.

British headquarters said the imperial "covering force in Prome" had pulled back northward to "the main defense" Thursday.

Prome at the moment apparently was unoccupied, a military spokesman saying that the Japanese had advanced only to the outskirts, although they held the heights south of the town.

The present British main line was not specified, but probably was between Prome and the Maton River, 20 miles north.

A spokesman denied the reports from Chungking that the Japanese had landed at Akyab.

(A Chinese army spokesman at Chungking said that his report Thursday of a Japanese landing at Akyab March 27 was based on intelligence reports from American sources, but the New Delhi announcement now showed this report was incorrect.)

The British announced that on the Sittang front, on the east side of the Burma defenses, Japanese vanguards at Toungoo were advancing west of the railway and had reached a point southwest of Yedashe, a town 15 miles north of Toungoo.

(A Chinese communique said the Chinese on April 1 attacked the Japanese south of Kyungon, which is 10 miles north of Toungoo, and captured a great deal of booty. Kyungon was recaptured by the Chinese on March 29.)

The Chinese hold that section of the line and were declared to retain command of the railway from Yedashe to just north of Toungoo.

Broke, Hotel Guest Leaves by Window —Of Tenth Floor

Atlanta, April 3 (AP).—Unable to pay his bill after a night in a tenth-floor room at an Atlanta hotel, a young Ohioan crawled out the window and started down the side of the building.

A startled onlooker saw the human-fly, suitcase in hand, and called police. They got him at the third floor.

Magistrate T. J. Kelly told him to forget the bill but for Heaven's sake to quit crawling around on walls like that.

American People 'Losing Battle of Washington,' Senator Bunker Charges

Wind Imperils Defense Plant, Probers Told

Durable and costly materials have gone into the construction of buildings at the 27-million-dollar ordnance plant at Minden, La., but there is some doubt about their ability to withstand a wind storm, a House investigating committee was told yesterday.

As a special House Military Affairs Committee delved further into documented stories of extravagance at Minden—and in one instance directed that notification be made to the Federal Bureau of Investigation—Senator Bunker (Democrat), of Nevada, startled the Senate with what he called an "amazing scandal of war profiteering."

Basic Magnesium, Inc., of Cleveland, declared Bunker, "stands to make a profit of 4280 per cent, or $2,140,000 in one year on an admitted investment of not more than $50,000."

"Losing Washington Battle"

"The people of America are losing the battle of Washington," Bunker declared.

The Cleveland firm, he said, has 43 men who are paid from $3900 to $36,000 a year from funds advanced by the Government. Defense Plants Corporation, he pointed out, is financing a 63 million dollar magnesite refining plant at Las Vegas, Nev., for Basic Magnesium, Inc.

Data for Bunker's statements were uncovered by the Truman Investigating Committee in the Senate. A committee spokesman said that Bunker had called attention only to the top-salaried men on B. M. I.'s payroll. One hundred and forty more would have been included, if Bunker had chosen to list those men receiving $150 and $200 a month.

Not Doing "Spade Work"

B. M. I., it was pointed out, is not performing the actual construction work on the plant at Las Vegas. The "spade work," the spokesman said, is being done by the McNeil Construction Co., of California, while B. M. I. is to received a $400,000 fee for engineering the 70-million-dollar project.

Gordon K. Miller, investigator, who Thursday gave the House committee more than a score of examples of excessive construction costs, read into the record yesterday a report from Capt. George N. Kiler, assistant Army engineer for the Minden area, which said that "severe complications" might arise at the plant "due to failure of some structures to withstand wind."

Report But No Action

Miller, who found the cost of some of these structures comparable to the cost per cubic foot of the Supreme Court Building, declared:

"As far as I know, no action has been taken on that report."

The Minden plant is being constructed—some structures have been completed—by the Silas Mason Co., of New York. The company also holds a cost-plus-fixed-fee contract for loading Army shells at the plant.

Because of the large quantities of explosives being handled there, extraordinary precautions, in design, equipment, and even in the clothing of workers, must be taken to guard against explosion caused by sparks generated by static electricity.

Engineers Complaints Cited

"Without exception, every safety engineer of the company, the men who will be responsible if anything happens, has complained at the lack of safeguards against electric current," Miller declared.

Miller charged that "tons of steel were wasted" at Minden, and stated that in one ramp, costing $216,000, "at least" 50 per cent of the material was wasted.

But one story so aroused the committee and its chairman, Representative Thomason (Democrat), of Texas, that H. Ralph Burton, counsel, was directed to send a full report on the case to the FBI and Brig. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, Army construction chief.

$9361.05 Truck Rent

That was the story of how, according to Miller, $9361.05 was paid in rentals on a 25-ton truck that cost its owner $4500. Thomason said the Army would want to know about the transaction so it could stop further rental payment. The FBI, he said, might wish to investigate further.

Miller said the truck was owned by Arthur J. Cote, of Brooklyn, former superintendent of transportation at Minden, although its "alleged" owner was Amanda Elliott, whom the investigator identified as Cote's wife.

Miller cited the case of the truck which, he said, was found to be unsuitable for work on the plant, as one of numerous instances" of excessive rental charges for equipment. On one list of rental alone, he said, the excess was $36,000.

More Men Than Needed

As evidence of the employment of workers in greater numbers than needed, Burton read the committee a report from J. W. Grant, jr., field auditor for the War Department. The report said that not only were there "entirely too many" mechanics, welders and helpers in comparison with the quantity of equipment to be maintained, but the contractor seemed to be unable to control the situation.

The union, said Grant, appeared to be in control of employment. He declared that in one instance a foreman laid off three mechanics and, when he came to work the next day, found not only those mechanics back on the job, but three more.

Navy Asks Public Not to Inquire About Casualties

By the Associated Press

In connection with announcement of the sinking of the aircraft tender Langley, the destroyer Peary and the tanker Pecos, the Navy asked last night that the public "refrain from initiating individual inquires regarding casualties."

The Navy's communique regarding the loss of those ships and the naval tanker Pecos said that the next of kin of all persons lost in the Pecos have been notified and "the next of kin of those lost in the Langley and Peary either already have been notified or will be notified as soon as information is available."

The Gallup Poll

Overwhelming Vote Favors Limiting Profits Of Industry and Labor From War Contracts

By George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., April 3.—The American public's idea of the way to fight an all-out war is to get hard-boiled with both industry and labor.

The average American is interested above all else in winning the war, and he is not prepared to put up with any obstructions whether they come from labor, from business or from Government. He wants to make sure that labor is held in line, but he also wants to be sure that business isn't getting away with anything either.

While it is true that business has enjoyed more popular favor than organized labor in the past few years, nevertheless the public is still in favor of imposing strict regulations on business profits.

With the Naval Affairs Committee releasing testimony charging that some firms with war contracts are making 100 per cent profit or more, the American public's reaction is revealed in the following study of the views of citizens from coast to coast:

"It has been suggested that Congress pass laws regulating business firms and profits to a much greater extent. Would you approve or disapprove of this?"

The vote of those with opinions on the question is as follows:

Approve	77%
Disapprove	23

Only about one person in every ten (11 per cent) was without an opinion on the question.

Business leaders will find little solace in those results. But neither will labor leaders find solace in the fact, as reported in earlier surveys, that the public wants a law against strikes in war industries, a law requiring unions to register with the Federal Government, and a workweek by which time and one-half pay for overtime does not begin until after 48 hours.

The truth is that the American public wants an all-out war effort in which everybody from the topmost business executive to the lowest worker is required to make whatever sacrifices are needed—no matter how much it may interfere with cherished principles.

In addition to business and labor, the third factor in the war effort is the public itself, including the farmers. What are the people—the average men and women—themselves willing to do for the war effort?

A report showing what restrictions and impositions the common people would place on themselves will be published tomorrow.

British Dissatisfied With War Production

By British Institute of Public Opinion

London, April 3.—With American public opinion demanding a more vigorous war production effort, the man in the street in Britain is also complaining that factory production in Britain could go much faster than at present.

His impatience and his desire to speed things up are reflected in a British Institute of Public Opinion poll of the opinions of average Britons on the following question:

"Complaints have been made that factories are not turning out all the war supplies they might. Do you believe that these complaints are justified or unjustified?"

Results are:

Justified	57%
Unjustified	16
Don't know	27

The poll was conducted after the cabinet shake-up in which Lord Beaverbrook, who had been in charge of production, was replaced. The change apparently failed to stem public criticism of the war production effort.

Those voters in the survey who said that complaints were justified were asked what they believed to be the main reason for the slowness.

They laid blame about equally on management, labor and government. The chief reasons given were: inefficient management, work improperly organized between factories, and workers slacking off.

Stimson Lauds Armed Forces; Plane Exhibit Set for D. C.

U. S. Combat Craft To Be Displayed At National Airport

Trim fighter planes, attack bombers and four-engined Flying Fortresses will be shown to the public at National Airport tomorrow and Monday, the War Department announced yesterday.

The 'open house" exhibition of late-type combat planes was ordered by Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, commander of the Army Air Forces, in observance of Army Day Monday.

Many of the craft will be flown in by pilots of the Air Forces' Ferrying Command, men who fly planes from factory to battlefronts of the world.

They will begin landing at 9 a. m. and remain on display until late afternoon, when they will be flown across the Potomac to Bolling Field for the night. Again on Monday, the ships will land to be seen by the public from noon until late afternoon.

The warplanes will be identified and described through the airport loud speaker system. The Army Air Forces' Band, stationed at Bolling Field, will give a concert at the National Airport Monday afternoon.

Army Day Message Tells of Nation's Pride in Services

By the Associated Press

Secretary of War Stimson and other leaders of the war effort yesterday told the armed forces on the eve of a three-day observance of Army Day that the Nation was proud of the American soldier.

The War Secretary said in a statement that the annual occasion possessed particular significance this year and would permit an expression of "the respect and the affection which we all feel for our armed forces and the pride which we all share in the Army of the United States."

To this Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, added that the Army held a "sacred trust" to justify the national confidence.

Army Day, observed annually on April 6 with parades, "open house" displays and various patriotic exercises, occurs this year exactly a quarter century after the entrance of the United States into the first World War.

To prevent interruption to war production the observance will be held on Saturday in many communities. Others, notably Jefferson Barracks, Mo., where a parade of approximately 12,000 troops has been arranged, will observe Sunday.

In numerous large cities the Army, with the sanction of President Roosevelt, is to take time off from war preparations on Monday to stage large-scale reviews. A detachment of West Point cadets is to march with other Army units down Fifth Avenue in New York City, and in Baltimore the entire Twenty-ninth Division, including tanks and combat cars, will parade.

French, Nazis Mark Birth of Charlemagne

Vichy, April 3 (AP).—Simultaneous celebrations were held yesterday in Germany and occupied France commemorating the 1200th anniversary of the birth of Charlemagne, the last monarch under whom France and Germany were one country.

(Charlemagne was born April 2, 742.)

The German festival was held at Aachen and the French celebration at St. Denis, northern Paris suburb, where he was crowned.

Woman, Shot As 2 Majors Duelled, Dies

By the Associated Press

Santa Barbara, Calif., April 3. Mrs. Evelyn Wenstrom, widowed in a revolver duel between two retired Army majors, died today of a wound suffered as an innocent bystander.

Her husband, Maj. William H. Wenstrom, 45, was shot six times and killed last night in the point-blank battle with Maj. Buell Hammett, 44.

The gun-play, police said, grew out of a quarrel over whether the Santa Barbara Home Guard unit should be trained as a guerilla force or integrated into the State Guard.

Mrs. Wenstrom, mother of two children, suffered a head wound from which she failed to regain consciousness. It has not been determined with which gun she was shot.

Hammett was shot in the hip. He will recover.

Hammett told police Wenstrom fired first, adding:

"I don't know how many times he fired, but the reason I was shot down low in the groin, I think, was because I pushed his hand down. Then I started to shoot . . . I don't know how many times I fired. I tried to hit him in the shoulder so that he couldn't use his gun to shoot me any more. I can't understand how Mrs. Wenstrom was injured. I never saw her until it was all over, and then I saw her lying on the floor."

The men are socially prominent. Hammett is president of the city's Museum of Art. Wenstrom was a recognized Army weather authority. His new book, "Weather and the Ocean of Air," appeared on bookstands only yesterday.

Pending further investigation, Hammett is held without charges.

Officials Deny Jap Aliens Get Lavish Care

"All wet!" said officials of the War Relocation Authority yesterday, are rumors of lavish provision for interned Japanese who are being moved out of defense areas, like the Pacific Coast.

Reports that enemy aliens were faring better than American soldiers led Milton S. Eisenhower, head of the relocation setup, and Lieut. Gen. John L. DeWitt, Pacific Coast commander, to issue a statement which deplored "distortion" of plans for providing for the Japanese.

Congress has appropriated money to care for the Japanese, these officials said, but no schedule of payments has been drawn up.

Japanese at the Owens Valley, Calif., evacuation center are paid WPA wages, from which their subsistence charges are deducted. The Japanese have to work for this money. Officials said the problem of dealing with Japanese refusing to work has not arisen. The prisoners have behaved well, it was said, and have done their work.

Meanwhile the Government is under an obligation to pay the salaries of captured Japanese officers, and Japan is supposed to pay the salaries of American officers, if they are taken prisoner.

This is under Article 23 of The Hague Treaty of July 27, 1929, which provided that a captor government must pay a captured officer a salary equal to the salary of its own officers of corresponding rank. However, a captured officer may not under the treaty draw a higher salary that he did from his own army.

State Department officials said a proposal is being drafted to replace this arrangement with a fixed scale, by which an army captain or navy senior lieutenant taken prisoner by either Japan or America would draw $25 a month. The pay of other ranks would be based on this scale.

Axis Diplomats Now Interned In North Carolina

Asheville, N. C., April 3 (AP).—Two special trains of 11 cars each brought Axis diplomats and their retinues here from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., today and they were interned at Grove Park Inn, swank resort hotel here, for the duration of the war or until an exchange can be arranged.

The party of 242 included Italian, Bulgarian and Rumanian officials and their families and servants.

They were met at the station by buses which took them immediately to the hotel. Baggage followed in trucks. Only a handful of spectators was on hand when the trains arrived.

The United States marshal's office here and railway police aided Federal officials who brought the foreigners here in getting them transferred and established in their quarters. No interviews were allowed newsmen.

Baby Is Burned To Death in D.C. Rooming House

A 4-month-old Negro girl was burned to death late yesterday afternoon in a fire at a three-story brick rooming house at 217 G Street Northwest.

Firemen found the body in the child's crib in a third-floor back room after extinguishing the blaze, which they had confined to the one room.

Other residents said that the baby and four other children ranging to 12 years in age were in the room when the fire started, apparently from an oil burner. The children's mother, Mrs. Marie Walker, was out hunting work. The four older children ran out when the blaze began.

8 Army Fliers Killed as 2 Planes Crash

By the Associated Press

Columbia, S. C., April 3.—Three occupants of an Army plane were killed today in a crash at the Lexington Airport, 5 miles southeast of here.

Public relations officers at the field said the plane was piloted by Lieut. G. F. Hayman, jr., with Lieut. A. C. Darden, first cousin of Gov. Darden of Virginia, and Sergt. O. D. Fischer as copilot and mechanic. They were killed instantly.

The plane crashed and burned shortly after it had taken off for a return flight to Augusta, Ga., about 9 a. m.

The three Air Corps members had arrived here earlier this morning from Augusta, where they were stationed.

Five Fliers Killed When Bomber Explodes

West Greenwich, R. I., April 3 (U.P.). Five Army fliers, including two officers, died today when a medium bomber on a routine flight crashed, exploded and burned on wooded Hopkins Hill.

The charred and broken bodies were recovered from the wreckage by soldiers who learned of the tragedy from farmers in the isolated area.

The detonation resulting from exploding gasoline tanks was heard throughout ten surrounding townships and flaming bits of the plane were hurled over a 200-yard area. The main section of the fuselage was tangled in trees several feet off the ground.

The victims:

Lieut. George L. Dover, 24, pilot, Shelby, N. C.; Lieut. N. W. Frame, 24, copilot, of California; Staff Sergt. R. H. Trammel, 21, radio operator, Brunswick, Ga.; Private R. R. Meredith, 21, bombardier, Memphis, Tenn.; Private T. J. Rush, 27, gunner, Philadelphia.

The flier, a long-time personal friend of Henry Ford, will devote his time to aeronautical and engineering research.

Car Care

By Ed Carl

THIS IS NO TIME FOR AN "AILING" CAR

A car defect, like a human defect, is not isolated—it frequently transfers its "poison" to other parts; gradually wearing down your car's vitality. Sailor Joe Keeps New York Crowd Agasp As He Gambols High Above Times Square

By the United Press

New York, April 3.—Joseph Debrowski, 25, able seaman from Michigan, probably won't be decorated for it, but anyway he got a big hand from about 10,000 New Yorkers in Times Square.

Joe alternately terrified and delighted a crowd which quickly gathered early today when word got around that he was hopping nimbly about in the hundreds of gaudy lights of a sign dangling 100 feet above Times Square. The sign marked the Dixie Lane Danceland and "50 Girls."

Harry Miller, newsstand operator, claimed he discovered Tarzan Debrowski. Harry's terrified scream, "don't jump" was superfluous. Joe showed no intention of jumping. He just gazed at "50 Girls."

Harry's yell, however, brought the crowd, firemen, naval police, and two other sailors who tried to "rescue" Joe.

Joe had his audience with him, all through his singing, his agile leaping and swinging, right up to a hair-raising leap through space to the top of a fire ladder.

Standing on the letter E, three floors above the street, Joe obliged the crowd with a passing fair baritone rendition of "Deep in the Heart of Texas."

He sat down to smoke a cigarette and enjoy the applause. He leaned far out, the better to see the words "50 Girls."

When two shipmates clambered to the second floor windows Joe led sailors and police through a Keystone Cop chase amid the braces and bars of the sign—Joe well in the lead, but always keeping "50 Girls" in sight.

When police and shipmates quit Joe repeated "Deep in the Heart of Texas," took a bow and thumbed his nose at his pursuers.

The fellow sailors who said they lost Joe to a glamorous red head, one of the "50 Girls," early in the evening, gave up. Then the firemen hoisted the ladder.

When it was still more than 6 feet from the lower crosspiece of the sign Joe jumped. The crowd gasped and then applauded as he grabbed the top rung and swung monkey-like right into the patrol wagon.

Somebody started the ugly rumor that Joe had been drinking. "Oh, no," said Joe. "I just got tired of jitter-bugging and stepped out to get some air."

20 Planes Downed In Malta, Libya

Cairo, April 3 (U.P.).—British fliers and antiaircraft gun crews have shot down 20 more planes over Malta and Libya while a British column has driven back, without a battle, an Axis force, including tanks and medium artillery, in the heart of the Libyan desert, it was announced today.

An R. A. F. communique said it is now known that five enemy fighter planes and 12 bombers were brought down over Malta. Many others were damaged.

Nazi Planes Hunt For Norse Ships

London, April 3 (U.P.).—Reports of widespread German bomber flights over the North Sea tended tonight to substantiate belief that some of 11 Norwegian merchantmen were successful in their attempt to escape from the Swedish port of Goteborg.

The ministry of information announced earlier that the attempt was believed to have been partially successful, apparently meaning that at least some of the four ships unaccounted for had broken through the German blockade.

Union-Busting Ban Is Offered By La Follette

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, joined yesterday with Chairman Thomas of the Senate Labor Committee in lighting a backfire against antilabor legislation by introducing a bill providing stiff criminal penalties for "oppressive" employers.

Moving as Congress entered a "cooling off" period on the labor issue, La Follette told the Senate that the measure, aimed at restricting union-breaking practices of employers, would promote efficiency in war industries by bulwarking existing machinery for mediation and arbitration of labor disputes.

Referring specifically to the House-passed Smith bill, La Follette declared that the same interests which fought legal recognition of the right of collective bargaining now seek "to remove and relax the gentle restraint of the National Labor Relations Act so that union-busting may proceed apace under cover of the war effort."

Would Extend Unions

By restraining union-breaking employers, LaFollette proposed to extend unionization to war industries which, he said, "are now only about 30 or 40 per cent" organized.

"Many of our vital plants are lacking in the employer-employe machinery conducive to an avoidance of or a settlement of disputes that may, regardless of any law, lead to work stoppages or inefficiency," he asserted.

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, meanwhile, announced a proposal for solution of the controversy over payment of overtime for work beyond 40 hours a week. Departing from his former position in favor of labor legislation, George proposed voluntary action by both labor and industry.

George said he would suggest to President Roosevelt, either by letter or in person, that labor work a six-day week, the sixth day to be known as "victory day," when payment would be made at regular rates with war industries rebating overtime savings to the Government.

Longer Hours Wanted

He told reporters that the war emergency should not be made the occasion for "enactment of vindictive labor legislation."

"The country wants longer hours worked in war industries and it will achieve that purpose one way or another," he said. "If a voluntary agreement of this nature could be reached the country would be satisfied and labor would still retain its basic 40-hour week after the war ends."

La Follette and Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, both firm supporters of Administration labor policies, timed their move with the pending Congressional showdown over labor. If Congress and the Nation has time for consideration of "any labor legislation," La Follette reasoned, his bill "by all means" should be "carefully weighed."

"Hours and days of the time of Congress and its committees are consumed with discussions of labor legislation," he said. "Proposals are pending before the Senate designed to treat labor relations with both emergency and permanent measures. In such a situation, we would be derelict in our responsibilities if we did not request a studied consideration of the 'Oppressive Labor Practices Act of 1942'"

Extends 1940 Measure

In effect, the La Follette-Thomas bill is merely an extension of "oppressive practices" legislation which passed the Senate in May, 1940, but which the House Labor Committee failed to report before the end of the Seventy-sixth Congress.

The new bill defines 11 forms of oppressive labor practices. The first four were carried in the earlier measure. These define oppressive practices as the use of labor spies, employment of strikebreakers or strikebreaking agencies, the hiring of armed guards except for the protection of company property and use or possession of "industrial munitions"—machine guns, sawed-off shotguns, tear gas—about a place of employment.

Also covered by the new bill are such practices as organized interference with lawful union activities "and other forms of vigilantism;" blacklisting; negotiation of employer agreements to refuse to engage in collective bargaining; the "yellow dog" practice of barring employes from union activities as a condition of emloyment; intimidation of employers to prevent collective bargaining; conspiracy to engage in oppressive practices, a definition aimed at "belligerent employer associations," and failure of employers to supply certain information to the National Labor Relations Board.

Imprisonment or Fine

The measure would provide maximum penalties of $10,000 fine or six months imprisonment for engaging in oppressive practices which affect commerce or utilize the mails.

Referring to four years of study of civil rights and interference with organized labor during which a labor subcommittee of which he is chairman, compiled an 80-volume record, La Follette said:

"I venture the assertion that no legislation has ever been presented to this body with any more substantial factual record grounding the propriety and necessity of the legislation proposed."

Records of the subcommittee, he said, show that "it is a habit, indeed a function, of certain types of employer groups to kindle fires by propaganda and other devices, thereby lighting the way for legislative restriction of labor's rights."

Since adoption of the National Labor Relations Act and its approval by the Supreme Court, La Follette continued, "these subversive conspiracies" have attempted not only to avoid and violate the law, but to "direct hysteria against trade unions and collective bargaining."

Hits "Clamorous Minority"

La Follette called for reassurance for labor "that the Nation is not going to yield to that clamorous minority, which in Congress and out, for the past six years, has been seeking to subvert, eliminate or substantially weaken the Federal guarantee of collective bargaining."

Passage of his bill, he said, would lessen labor demands for "union security"—major strike cause—and would convince many employers "that there was no further point in preserving their economic opportunities by using oppressive labor practices to shake off collective bargaining."

Seaman's Wife Is Red Cross Center's 10,000th Blood Donor

The District Red Cross Blood Donor Center at Twenty-third Street and Constitution Avenue Northwest received its 10,000th blood contributor at 11 a. m. yesterday.

The volunteer, 10,000th to appear at the generally crowded center since last June 1, was Mrs. Marvin L. Rice, of 3812 Benton Street Northwest. This was her second donation. Her husband is a pharmacist's mate in the Navy.

Mrs. Dorothy M. Walton, director of the blood donor service for the District, emphasized yesterday that donors should remember the Red Cross requirement for the elapsing of eight weeks between blood donations. The age limits for donors are 21 to 60. Persons between 18 and 21 who desire to donate must have the consent of parents or guardian.

Volunteers have come to the center at the rate of about 150 a day, it was said.

President Urged to Set Up War Plants in Hard-Coal Area

By Joseph A. Loftus
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Federal Anthracite Commission told President Roosevelt yesterday that the Government, in prosecuting the war, had failed to utilize sufficiently the industrial resources of the Pennsylvania hard coal area. The board strongly recommended the establishment of war plants in the area.

"It seems to us," it told the President in a letter accompanying a report of its recent investigation, "that the productive power of more than a million people in the midst of the chief manufacturing section of the country should not be neglected when in so many areas overcrowding and labor shortages deter the expansion of war production."

The commission submitted two sets of recommendations, one for immediate improvement of the area, and another for long-term improvement.

No. 1 recommendation for immediate improvement aid, in part:

"At a time when most manufacturing areas of the Nation are striving desperately to meet shortages of man power and to build new housing and other community facilities, it is in the national interest that the industrial resources of the anthracite area be utilized . . .

"It is strongly recommended that the war agencies of the Federal Government give careful consideration to the suitability of the area for the location of necessary war plants, particularly those for the production of aluminum, zinc, synthetic ammonia, explosives, castings, forgings, armor plate, machine parts, aircraft parts, tank parts, and ammunition."

The letter to the President summarized the national-defense phase of the report and said the area's facilities are "underutilized." Thousands of workers trained in war occupations have been forced to seek jobs outside the area, aggravating problems of transportation and congestion, it pointed out.

Depression has continued there and relief rolls are heavy, despite teeming industrial activity in the country generally; no Government-financed war plants have been located there and no major Government supply contracts have been placed there, the commission asserted.

Although the anthracite area is closer than 200 miles to the coast, a condition regarded unfavorably in general by the military in the placement of important war industries, the commission expressed belief that "in the application of the strategic-zone rule, inadequate weight has been given to the fact that the anthracite area is well-protected on all sides by mountains and is at all points more than 100 miles from the Atlantic Coast."

The commission's recommendations were substantially the same as those of the original, tentative draft. There are seven proposals for immediate improvement: Establishment of war industries, creation of a State engineering organization, maintenance of the vocational training program, drainage tunnels to reduce mining hazards and pumping costs, further development of stokers and other equipment, investigations to expand industrial uses for anthracite, and an operators' program to aid consumers in converting domestic equipment to the use of anthracite.

Four recommendations for long-term improvement are: Establishment of a research station in the region, an investigation to find means of reducing production costs through the application of the most modern and efficient methods, a program of reforestration, and establishment of an agency to concern itself with long-range problems of economic adjustment in the area.

therapeutic possibilities" in the treatment of tuberculosis was reported today to the American Association of Pathologists and Bacteriologists.

Dr. William H. Feldman, of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., presented results of laboratory experiments in which 16 tubercular guinea pigs were treated with the drug, which he calls promin.

At the end of 224 days, he said, 13 still were alive, although 31 untreated animals in a control group which had been given tuberculosis at the same time all were dead.

Promin, he emphasized, did not cure the guinea pigs but reduced the severity of the infection and in most cases prevented its spread.

Capital Man Quits Canadian for U. S. Army

Camp Lee, Va., April 3 (AP).—Avery Ashwood, who quit the United States Army after ten years service and joined Canadian forces in May, 1940, because he "wanted to see action," has given up a sergeancy to get back into the United States Army.

He obtained a discharge from the Canadian army while on furlough at his home in Washington and is now at the recruit reception center here awaiting assignment to the Air Corps.

Labor's War Board Meets With President

By the Associated Press

The A. F. L.-C. I. O. labor war board met with President Roosevelt yesterday, and its members said a number of "very important matters" were discussed, but declined to disclose what they were.

They did say there was some discussion in a general way of the question of mobilization of man power for war production, but they indicated no decision had been reached by the President on the subject. They said their recommendations still stood that this mobilization be entrusted to the Labor Department.

The board will meet with Mr. Roosevelt again next Friday.

Senators Map Profits Curb Scaled to Job

On contracts up to $100,000—10 per cent.

Contracts over $100,000 and up to $500,000—8 per cent.

Contracts over $500,000 and up to 1 million dollars—6 per cent.

Contracts over 1 million dollars and less than 5 million dollars—5 per cent.

Contracts over 5 million dollars and less than 20 million dollars—4 per cent.

Contracts over 20 million dollars and less than 50 million dollars—3 per cent.

Contracts over 50 million dollars—3 per cent on the first 50 million dollars and 2 per cent on all over the first 50 million dollars.

Profits would be determined on gross proceeds, before taxes.

The graduated plan, submitted by Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, directed the heads of the War and Navy departments and the Maritime Commission to withhold 20 per cent of the contract price, until the contractor had certified itemized costs, and these had been verified by the agency.

Final payment would then be made, first of the balance due on the costs, and second, of profits determined by the sliding scale rule.

Administration spokesmen, from War Production Chief Nelson to Randolph Paul, Treasury tax adviser, have repeatedly opposed the percentage yardstick on profits.

Nelson told the House Naval Committee only last week that the percentage rule "leaves entirely out of consideration such important matters as return on capital investment, turnover, the time required to fill the contract, and the financial structure of the contracting firm."

An alternative compromise amendment earlier was presented by Senators O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and Overton, of Louisiana (Democrats). This tightened the flexible controls recommended by Government counsel. Under the subcommittee agreement the Thomas scale would be combined with the O'Mahoney-Overton amendment.

The latter formula directs the heads of the three agencies to write a renegotiation clause into all new contracts. Whenever in their opinion excessive profits appeared likely on any contracts, the contractor could be required to renegotiate the price and the war agencies could withhold any amount deemed to represent excessive profits, or recover excessive profits paid, by court action if necessary.

These powers would extend to all contracts, whether or not they carry a renegotiation clause, so long as final payment had not been made.

The O'Mahoney-Overton redraft further provides that in determining excessive profits no allowance should be made "for any salaries, bonuses or other compensation paid by a contractor to its officers or employes in excess of a reasonable amount, nor shall they make allowance for any excessive reserves set up by the contractor."

Persons holding contracts of $500,000 or more could be required to make a sworn statement on actual costs of production and other financial data, subject to a $10,000 penalty or two-year jail sentence for willful refusal.

Except for the sliding scale profits rule, the substitute offered by Senator Thomas covered largely the same ground embodied in the O'Mahoney-Overton proposal. It slapped at big bonus and salary payments by directing the war agencies to use present powers of audit to determine whether unreasonable compensation was paid, or excessive reserves set up.

The Thomas plan directed the Secretary of War, acting jointly with the Secretary of the Navy and the chairman of the Maritime Commission, to set up an interdepartmental agency selected from existing personnel of the three departments to impose the profits limitations.

Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, ranking member of the committee, would not predict whether the composite plan would run the gantlet of the full committee, which until yesterday was believed favorable to vesting full say as to profits with the war agencies themselves. High Administration officials have warned against any rigid rule of thumb and have urged that profits be left to the tax bill. A Senate floor controversy was brewing which some Senators privately predicted would extend the war profits row deep into the Easter holidays.

Officials Link Standard Oil To Looted Gold

trade with Axis-dominated firms in South America enrolled on the State Department's black list. He said that Standard Oil, of New Jersey and Sterling Products, Inc., the pharmaceutical house owned jointly by Standard and I. G. Farben industries, are not among the 89 per cent.

"Standard Oil became something of a headache to us," he said.

Berle testified that on October 21, 1941, representatives of Standard notified him 'ts board of directors had rejected the State Department's request that oil and gas be denied the Nazi companies.

"I got irritated and said the department would have to take what steps were open to it to prevent deliveries," Berle said.

"Do you mean they placed a pre-existing contract above the interests of the United States?" Senator Burton (Republican), of Ohio, asked.

"They did," Berle said.

"And that it came from the board of directors?" Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, asked, incredulously.

"Yes," Berle said.

Berle proceeded with steps to blacklist Standard's Brazilian subsidiary—the organization that directly supplied the petroleum products—on October 22.

"News of the department's action traveled fast," Berle said, and next day, October 23, Standard notified the State Department it was ready "to cooperate with the department wholeheartedly."

No more oil and gas reached Condor and Lati, and a short time later they shut up shop.

Before leaving the stand Berle cautioned the committee that he did not seek to "enter into a blanket indictment of Standard on the basis of facts I have." He said the company may have wanted the Government to use compulsion to escape liability for breaking its contracts.

Secretary Berle's testimony retracted in part a statement issued by the State Department last Wednesday night. The statement said that the department asked Standard Oil "in 1941" to restrict its sales of fuel to Condor and Lati.

Berle's testimony confirmed that after October 23, 1941, when the department threatened to blacklist Standard's subsidiary in Brazil, the company complied with every request of the State Department. Prior to October 23, the company resisted attempts to restrict its sales.

Farish Gives Approval

Farish issued a statement last night which said:

"While I have not seen Mr. Berle's statement made to the Senate committee this morning, if I am correctly advised concerning its contents, I have no quarrel with what he said. I have been informed that this afternoon he denied that our Brazilian company had been put on the black list.

"We wished to be under some actual compulsion by the State Department before breaching the Condor contract. This compulsion was provided by the blacklist threat in October, 1941, mentioned by Mr. Berle. In fact, limited deliveries to Condor continued under the instructions of Ambassador Caffery in Rio until stopped by his direction some time later."

Foley told the committee that had the Treasury acceded to Standard's request for permission to sell its Hungarian business to the Germans, it would have involved the United States in a breach of the British blockade, would have given Germany the right to make concessions to one American company and not to others, and would have involved Government purchase of gold stolen by the Nazis.

Approval of "New Order"

"It would not merely have facilitated Germany's program of economic domination of Europe," Foley said, "but it would have been tantamount to an approval of Germany's "new order" in Europe.

Foley said it is a fundamental policy of the Treasury "to prevent Germany from acquiring the assets of overrun countries or from being able to make use of any such assets that it may have looted. To have permitted Germany to use 24 million dollars of looted gold or other foreign exchange assets to pay for the oil property in Hungary would have been a direct contradiction of the purpose of our freezing control. It would have exposed us to the charge of being willing to accept the spoils of looting to help preferred American companies. Mr. Farish admitted in his testimony that his company had no way of knowing where and from whom Germany acquired the gold that was being offered in payment."

Foley said the United States "had much more to gain in terms of retaining the confidence and good will of overrun European peoples and subjugated governments by maintaining the high moral principle of preventing Germany from acquiring or making use of looted assets than was lost in not permitting the Standard Oil Co. to sell its Hungarian properties for funds looted by Germany."

Nazi Crews on Tankers

La Varre told the committee that although the Commerce Department tried for three years to stop the flow of gas and oil to the Axis controlled Lati and Condor air lines, they received fuel in "tremendous quantities" from Standard Oil until October, 1941. Oil was stored in depots all the way from Natal to Rio de Janeiro. It was transported in Standard Oil tankers manned by German crews, he said.

Over Lati and through the British blockade, La Varre said, there traveled between 1939 and 1941 a steady stream of Axis propaganda and propagandists, bound for South American countries and the United States, as well as valuable war materials for Germany.

Westward from Europe, and usually free of charge, came books, films, Gestapo agents, spies, loot from occupied countries, and occasionally even German medals for Nazi sympathizers in the Americas. On the return trips the line carried diamonds, platinum and especially mica, important war material.

The committee recessed until Tuesday morning at 10:30, when Jesse Jones, Secretary of Commerce and Reconstruction Finance Corporation chairman, will testify on the rubber situation.

Dances, Tours On Tap for Men on Leave

Dances, special entertainments, sightseeing tours and other functions are on tap for soldiers, sailors and marines visiting Washington this week-end.

The District Defense Council's new Washington recreational and hospitality committee meanwhile prepared to continue its census of visiting service men to determine the extent of the shortage of lodging facilities for them.

Some relief will be provided, it was announced, by the addition of 100 beds available to soldiers on leave at the Washington recreation area camp just across Memorial Bridge in Arlington, Va. The camp is now able to provide lodging for some 500 men, according to Lieut. Col. Walter H. Long, commandant.

Events scheduled for uniformed visitors include:

Today

2 p. m.—Sightseeing tour with hostesses and guide service, sponsored by Washington Federation of Churches, followed by picnic supper and singing. Meet at National Art Gallery rotunda, Constitution Avenue and Sixth Street Northwest. Late comers may join party up to 3 p. m.

Nichols Renamed To D. C. Park Post

Frederic A. Delano, chairman, yesterday announced that President Roosevelt has appointed J. C. Nichols, of Kansas City, to his fourth term as a member of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. The term expires in 1948.

"This is particularly pleasing to me," said Delano, "because Mr. Nichols and I are the only two members left who were appointed when the commission was organized by Act of Congress in 1926."

Cooperative School Trains Skilled Men

Flint, Mich.—To help meet the demand for trained men for the war effort, the General Motors Institute here has started a new class in cooperative industrial and product engineering.

Preference is given young men from cities in which General Motors plants are located, although men from any locality with good high school records and recommended by their school authorities will receive every consideration.

More than 1100 students are now taking part in the cooperative program. Students spend one month in school and one month in the plant, alternately.

U. S. S. Langley And Destroyer Admitted Lost

Yard three years gao. He said he had been ordered to meet the destroyers at a small island near Java, but a formation of enemy bombers appeared and drove the destroyers away.

The transfer, Abernethy said, was finally made by the Pecos' motor launch, which made several trips to the destroyers to bring off survivors. The Pecos then turned toward Australia shortly after 8 a. m. March 1 and soon Japanese aircraft appeared.

"I felt we were in for serious trouble," Abernethy said. "About noon a formation of six dive bombers launched a round of bombs at us and our ship was hit. One explosion knocked the crew from a gun but another crew was able to take up actron.

"These same six bombers then loosed another round at us. Then a second flight of six planes came over and cut loose but we remained afloat and kept shooting. On their third flight there were nine dive bombers and some other planes. The damage to the Pecos was progressive and she finally sank by the bow a little over four hours after the start of the battle.

Men Strafed in Water

"We estimated that about 50 men were killed and about 100 wounded by the dive bombers but the exact numer never will be known. The last bomber strafed our men who were in the water and on the after deck. Lieut. L. J. McPeake, my executive officer, manned the aft machine gun to the last and drove it off."

Abernethy said one enemy plane was seen to be smoking and he believed several were hit.

Chief Storekeeper Saxton, wounded in the arm by a bomb fragment while manning the gunnery control post on the bridge, refused to leave the Langley when the order was given to abandon until he had retrieved the men's pay records. He dived overboard with them, clung to them in the water and then lost them while he was being hoisted aboard a rescuing destroyer.

Survivors of the Langley and the Pecos were rescued by a destroyer which stood by for two hours taking men from the water although a submarine was known to be near. On the way to Australia a submarine was attacked.

Built as a collier, the Langley was converted to use as an aircraft carrier in July, 1919, and was placed in commission in 1922, the Navy's first carrier. She was converted to a seaplane tender in 1937.

The Peary, which took her commander, Lieut. John M. Bermingham, of New York City, down with her, had escaped a number of bombings before Jap airplanes finally got her in Darwin Harbor. She was damaged at Cavite early in the war and was attacked several times on her way from the Philippines to Australia, where she was repaired and placed in convoy service.

Meets a Proud End

Her end will go down in Navy tradition. While she slowly sank under the pounding of Japanese bombs, her crew remained at their battle stations, pumping shells at the enemy until they were driven off, gun by gun.

"No officer or man," said the Navy's communique, "left the ship until it sank under him."

Then they swam through blazing oil until other ships picked them up. A number of survivors were rescued.

Next of kin of those lost on the three ships have been notified or will be notified as soon as possible, the Navy Department said.

Navy Communique No. 65

"Southwest Pacific:

"1. The United States aircraft tender Langley, the naval tanker Pecos and the destroyer Peary were sunk by the enemy in the vicinity of northern Australia and waters south of Java in late February and early March.

"2. A number of survivors from these ships were rescued and reached port safely. The next of kin of all personnel lost in the Pecos have been notified. The next of kin of those lost in the Langley and Peary either already have been notified or will be notified as soon as information is available.

"3. Official reports from Tokyo claimed the sinking of the Langley at least three times during the first month of the war, during which period the Langley was not damaged. She was sunk after a prolonged attack by the enemy south of Java in late February. Except for about a dozen men, all Langley personnel survived the attack and were transferred to the Pecos, which was itself sunk a few days later.

"4. The Pecos, a small tanker, employed in supplying fuel to units of our fleet in the Far East, was sunk in early March.

"5. The Peary, a World War destroyer which received minor damage in the Japanese bombing attacks on Cavite immediately after the outbreak of the war, was sunk in the harbor at Darwin about February 19. The Peary had participated in many of the offensive actions of our destroyers in the Far East. Observers who witnessed the last engagement of the Peary described the conduct of her crew as beyond all praise. Gun crews remained at their battle stations continuing their fire until they were forced by rising water to leave their stations. No officer or man left the ship until it sank under him. A number of survivors were later rescued.

"6. War conditions in the southwest Pacific have greatly complicated and delayed reports of casualties, and the public is urged to refrain from initiating individual inquiries regarding casualties. The next of kin of all casualties are always notified by telegram as soon as possible.

"7. There is nothing to report from other areas."

Red Cross To Collect Scrap Wool

The American Red Cross yesterday was assigned a wool-gathering task that is expected to bring between one and two million dollars annually into the treasuries of local chapters.

The organization will collect from clothing stores and wool clipped from trousers legs under the War Production Board's no-cuffs edict and sell it into the proper channels for repossessing.

Proceeds from such sales should total one or two million dollars annually, it was estimated by Irving Squires, head of WPB's men's clothing section.

Squires and Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, volunteer services director of the Red Cross, agreed to make the Red Cross the central collecting agency for scrap wool.

Hotels' Floral Funds Sent to Red Cross

The managements of two local hotels took seriously the recently published article on the failure of the District Red Cross to meet its quota in the war fund drive, and did something about it.

The D. C. Chapter of the American Red Cross received a letter yesterday from George D. Johnson, manager of the Wardman Park Hotel, which said in effect: "This year the amount we normally spend on Easter floral decorations for the lobby of the Wardman Park Hotel, is being donated to the American Red Cross to further the war effort."

The same type of letter was sent by Frank Swadley, manager of the Carlton Hotel.

al base adjacent to Weymouth) and Dover, southeast England's "hell corner" on the narrow strait.

Portland is one of the bases from which the recent British commando raids on St. Nazaire and Bruneval may have been launched.

Nazis Caught Coming Home

So closely locked were the opposing air forces that German bombers returning from England were engaged and damaged by British fighters hovering over airdromes in German-occupied territory. One R. A. F. squadron leader reported hits on two Nazi planes which approached their base with landing lights ablaze.

Although they ranged from Belgium to Brittany, the R. A. F. lost but two planes compared to Wednesday night's 15. Pilots reported heavy new damage to the Matford plant, which is producing trucks for the Germans. Vichy reports said one child was killed and six persons wounded at Poissy and that bombs also fell at Andresy and Marly in the Paris area.

Docks at Le Havre again were raided and R. A. F. fighters swept a number of Nazi airdromes.

Casualties were heavy and civilian property considerably damaged in the British south coast town, authorized reports said. R. A. F. night fighters prevented heavier casualties.

Traffic Drops 3 to 7 Per Cent Here in March

A 3 to 7 per cent decrease in general traffic here last month as compared with March, 1941, and a 5 per cent decrease in gasoline consumption in February were reported yesterday by the director of District highways.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director, told members of the highways committee of the Washington Board of Trade that this is the first time since 1934 that the gas consumption in any one month has shown a decrease over the corresponding month of the previous year. At the same time, Whitehurst estimated that due to restrictions on tires and gasoline, there will be a 30 per cent overall decline in the use of automobiles next year.

In reporting on projects now under way, Whitehurst said three of the four Potomac River approaches will be let in a few weeks. On April 15 temporary detours will have to be made around the Fourteenth Street and Maine Avenue intersection to permit construction to continue. But, he cautioned, all of the proposed highway plans may not be completed due to lack of vital materials.

It was disclosed that reconstruction of the railroad bridge over the Potomac will begin in a few weeks. When work is finished it will permit carrying heaviest loads at 45 miles an hour against the present limit of 15 miles for freight trains and 20 miles for passenger trains.

Meanwhile, William A. Van Duzer, traffic director, announced that he had granted permission to M. I. O'Boyle & Son, petroleum haulers, to operate 60-foot tank trucks across the city for the duration. The trucks are 10 feet in excess of the limit.

Nazis Reported Balked by British Antiraid Device

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, April 3.—A dispatch from Madrid quotes a German spokesman as saying that Britain's defenses against night raids are so highly developed as to render mass night raids by the Luftwaffe "most unprofitable."

The Nazi, the dispatch says, was explaining the failure of the Luftwaffe to take reprisals for recent British raids.

"Night bombardments adopted after the heavy losses suffered in daytime bombing in the autumn of 1940 have become increasingly costly because of the British electromagnetic plane detector," he said.

"This is used either from the ground or from new two-seater pursuit planes, in which it has now been installed. These detectors render anything like mass night attacks very vulnerable to British night fliers, who know where the Germans are, whereas the reverse is not the case."

Triple Killing 'Merely a Brawl,' Not a Race Riot

Fort Dix, N. J., April 3 (AP).—Authorities said today the killing last night of a white military policeman and two Negro soldiers, and the wounding of five Negro soldiers, in a gun battle was "merely a brawl" without racial significance.

The incident, as reconstructed by Maj. Aage Woldike, post public relations officer, occurred after a score of military police laid siege to a Negro barracks from which gunfire answered a bullet "fired over the head" of a Negro soldier.

The Negro had fled from nearby Pointville, Woldike said, after grappling with an M. P., who intervened in an argument among soldiers waiting to use a telephone.

The dead are Private Manie W. Strough, white, of Honeycamp, Va.; Private Isaac W. Brown, Negro, of Henderson, Tenn., and Corpl. W. E. Hall, Negro, of Conyers, Ga.

A board of inquiry is investigating. There were no arrests.

Navy Will Train 20,000 Men at Tome Institute

By the Associated Press

The Navy has taken over the Jacob Tome Institute, formerly a boys' preparatory school at Port Deposit, Md., for use as a naval training center for 20,000 men at a time.

Reporting this yesterday, the Navy said the institute properties would be used as a recruit training station, technical school and receiving station. Existing facilities will be expanded with temporary structures, construction of which will be expedited so that the station may be in operation by August 1, 1942.

The Navy said it had taken possession of the property under an order issued March 30, that the property was now being appraised and that "a declaration of taking" soon would be filed to vest title in the United States.

Hankin Lauds Joint Call-Box Setup for Cabs

Approximately 1800 calls have been handled successfully on the new "cooperative call box" system now being employed by five major District taxi companies, Commissioner Gregory Hankin announced last night.

The system, whereby the combined call boxes of Arrow, Bell, Premier, Yellow and Checker companies are placed under a central switchboard, is designed to simplify the heretofore complicated business of calling a cab. Commissioner Hankin said that the new plan would "prove a splendid response to our accelerated wartime transportation needs."

Under the plan, a taxicab, a member of the five participating companies, would be able to deliver a passenger, and instead of returning to a call box of his own company, stop at one of the cooperating stands in the neighborhood and wait for another call. This, Hankin added, would also save tires.

D. C. Refuses Auto Tag Refund To Selectee

No refunds on Washington automobile tags even though the plates have never been used are being allowed by the District auditor unless the license application was made before Apr 1.

A decision of Arthur R. Pilkerton, city auditor, was revealed yesterday in the case of Warren B. Dell, 27, of 1927 Lamont Street Northwest, who was ordered into the Army a short time after buying his tags. He was denied a refund when he attempted to return the unused tags.

Dell said he bought his plates April 1 and when he returned home found an induction order. He returned to the New Municipal Center and asked for his money back. Pilkerton said he was too late.

A few refunds will be made on applications filed before April 1, Pilkerton said.

D. C. Moves to Get Land for Widening Of Mt. Olivet Road

Condemnation proceedings were instituted at District Court yesterday by the District government in an effort to acquire land for a proposed widening of Mount Olivet Road Northeast.

The stretch of highway to be broadened was described as that between Bladensburg Road and the east boundary of the Columbia Institute for the Deaf—approximately at Corcoran Street.

The petition for condemnation, which will involve portions of 32 lots on the street, was filed in the name of the District Commissioners by Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech and two assistants, James W. Lauderdale and Stanley De Neale.

WPB's Estimate May Sidetrack Sugar Rationing

The long-heralded sugar rationing program, now tentatively set to get under way with a nationwide registration May 4 to 7, may be scrapped if estimates of current sugar supplies, completed by the War Production Board, prevail over the insistence of the Office of Price Administration to go ahead with the rationing plan.

According to the WPB's information approximately 1 million tons more of Cuban sugar will be available for United States consumption requirements than originally estimated. This is due to the speed-up in the production of industrial alcohol from grain and corn in the Middle West to replace and augment the stocks of alcohol usually produced from black strap molasses.

Engine Trouble Delays Departure Of Norfolk Boat

The steamer District of Columbia was delayed three and one-half hours last night in sailing for Norfolk, Va., from Washington.

Capt. E. H. Eaton, port captain of the Norfolk & Washington Steamboat Co., said the delay was due to engine trouble. The boat, with 150 aboard, was scheduled to leave at 6:30 p. m. but did not get away until shortly after 10.

Two weeks ago the same steamer was held up at Norfolk for two days when members of the fireroom crew failed to report in a dispute with the management.

First-Aid Pupil Praised for Saving Woman

Commendations were widely distributed yesterday as a result of the quick action of Roy E. James, Treasury Department employe, in applying a tourniquet to an injured woman on Thursday and probably saving her life.

James had taken six lessons in a Red Cross first-aid course and used his belt as a tourniquet on Mrs. Mildred Navin, of 549 South Edgewood Street, Arlington, after she had been hit by a truck and seriously injured.

Her right leg was partially torn off and amputation was necessary at Emergency Hospital. Her condition was reported as "fair."

Brig. Gen. F. R. Keefer, chairman of the District Red Cross, yesterday wrote Treasury Secretary Morgenthau in appreciation of the Treasury's cooperation in the Red Cross first-aid program. This wholehearted cooperation, he stated, was responsible for James' ability to aid the injured woman.

Expresses His Appreciation

James yesterday expressed appreciation for his six lessons.

"I feel," he said, "that every hour any one of us in the Treasury has spent learning first aid has been worthwhile. I feel quite sure, also, that all other Red Cross courses are equally valuable in different lines, and I think we will all appreciate that fact more and more."

Then Otto Lund, chapter manager, sent a congratulatory telegram to James and a letter of commendation to his instructor, Charles Clark, assistant chief, Division of Mails and Files, Bureau of Customs, Treasury Department. The telegram said:

"The District of Columbia Chapter of the American Red Cross extends congratulations to you for the efficient way you rendered first aid to Mrs. Mildred Navin. Your application of first aid teaching shows the value of lessons learned since we understand you have not yet completed your first aid course."

Instructor Cammended

The letter to the instructor said:

"It is gratifying to note in The Washington Evening Star of April 2 the effective first aid given by Mr. Roy E. James of the Treasury Department to Mrs. Mildred Navin, who was injured by a truck.

"The fact that Mr. James has not completed his course shows excellent application of what he has learned so far, which was the means of saving a life.

"Since Mr. James is receiving his first aid instruction under you we wish to commend you and your thorough method of teaching. Thanks to many volunteer instructors, like yourself, giving freely of their time, the lives of thousands of men, women and children may be saved."

Capital Lawn Gets the Eggs This Easter

Observing the old Easter custom called "egg rolling," an expected 100,000 children and adults will give the egg its annual and massed scrambling with their shoe soles Monday, but the Capitol's west lawn will get the resulting jaundice instead of the White House backyard.

Exigencies of war, closing the White House gates to the rollers this Easter, will send the hordes principally to the Capitol's west lawn and to the Zoo grounds. At the latter place, Director Dr. William M. Mann expects 50,000. Forty-eight thousand were there last Easter.

As usual, the animal buildings will be closed all day to keep the rollers from throwing eggs at animals and the interior walls. Experience is guiding the management. Gates will open at 7:30 a. m. and close at 8 p. m.

The Capitol's west lawn will be open from 8 a. m. to dusk, it was announced. Ordinarily, about 3000 rollers and tramplers have favored the sloping lawn at the Capitol. The number is expected to be larger Monday with suspended activities on the White House grounds.

Nearly two score city playgrounds also will welcome the rollers Monday.

Kindergarten and day school children from Barney Neighborhood House and Friendship House settlements will have a joint egg roll at 1:30 p. m. today at Friendship House, 619 D Street Southeast. The Boys' Club of Washington will sponsor egg hunts at 11 a. m. Monday at Eastern Branch, and at 1 p. m. Tuesday at Central Branch.

Egg rolling attendancies at the White House in the past six years were recorded as follows: 1936, 48,528; 1937, 53,180; 1038, 40,000; 1939, 52,259; 1940, 30,495 and 1941, 53,258—or 277,720 hen eggs if each person only brought one. This was exclusive of the eggs rolled elsewhere in the city those days.

Luebeck Raid Damage Reported 'Catastrophic'

Bern, April 3 (AP).—Photographs of the damage inflicted on Luebeck by the R. A. F. last Saturday night show "without exaggeration that the effects were catastrophic," the Berlin correspondent of the Tribune de Geneve reported today.

"Some hundreds of properties were demolished like castles of cardboard and some streets were entirely blasted by explosions," the correspondent wrote.

Earlier reports from Berlin were that the raid was "the heaviest British air attack on German territory since the beginning of the war."

Over 200 bodies have been recovered. The Trbune said the total losses were not yet known, but that women and children must be evacuated from Luebeck.

Defense Bond Sales Show March Decline

The Treasury announced yesterday that sales of defense savings bonds in March totaled $557,892,000 as compared with a total of $703,300,000 during February, a decline of 20.7 per cent. The Treasury said the drop was anticipated because of income-tax payments which fell due on March 16. Tax receipts last month exceeded three billion, the largest on record.

Hankin Says Hostelries Violate Antitrust Act on Phone Rates

District of Columbia hotels, apartment houses and clubs which make special "service" charges for telephone calls above the tolls fixed by the telephone companies may be violating the Clayton Antitrust Act, in the opinion of Gregory Hankin, chairman of the District Public Utilities Commission.

At a joint Federal Communications Commission and P. U. C. hearing on these extra tolls, Hankin asserted that the charges could not be legally made unless the hotels and other places were acting as agents of the telephone company. If they were, in effect, telephone company agents, then their extra tolls would be subject to regulation by the F. C. C. and the P. U. C., he said.

Representatives of hotels, clubs and apartment houses have testified at the hearing and maintained that their charges were beyond the jurisdiction of the two commissions because they were charging for "special service to tenants," rather than telephone operation. These charges are already "frozen" under the District rent law, they maintain. Crux of the hearings is this jurisdiction question.

Hankin explained his position on the Clayton Act after F. Brooke Price, counsel for the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., objected to a previous request by Hankin that he submit a brief on the point.

Operation of telephone switchboards in 38 "representative" District apartment houses resulted in a loss of 33 per cent, Rufus S. Lusk, secretary of the Building Owners and Managers Association, testified at the hearing. Because these apartment houses are now operating under the District rent law, regulation and reduction of extra telephone charges will result in rent increases, Lusk said.

Previous testimony showed that hotels follow the practice of charging 10 cents for local calls and varying additional amounts for long distance calls.

Lusk presented the results of a survey of 38 District apartment buildings to the two bodies. Operating telephones in these apartments during 1941 cost the apartment operators $236,813.63 including telephone bills totaling $155,658.45 and salaries to operators totaling $81,155.18, he said, while tenants were charged $182,275.11 by the apartment operators.

Most apartment houses charge tenants $1 a month for the use of a telephone and 5 cents for each local call, Lusk said. A 25-cent optional directory listing charge is also made in many cases, he said. No extra charge is made for long-distance calls, he said.

Operation of switchboards involves considerable additional service, including the taking of messages when the tenants are out, and wake-up service in the morning, he said. Arousing tenants often requires several calls, he said.

Others testifying yesterday were E. E. Martin, manager of the Army-Navy Club; Frank Davies, manager of the University Club; L. Gardiner Moore, Shoreham Hotel; Charles L. Hutchinson, Capital Park Hotel, and Arthur J. Harnett, executive secretary of the Hotel Association of Washington.

Four D. C. Officers In Medical Class

Four Washington men were among 22 first lieutenants graduated yesterday from the Army's Medical Field Service School at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., in the school's first all-Negro class.

The Washingtohians, who completed a special four-week course to prepare them for duty with a Negro Army division now being organized, are First Lieuts. Harold H. Whitted, 1315 Girard Street Northeast; Roger G. Thurston, 1414 Montello Avenue Northeast; Lincoln W. Shumate, 920 Forty-fifth Street Northeast, and Charles L. Lomack, 2911 Sherman Avenue Northwest, all of the Medical Corps.

Union-Busting Ban Is Offered By La Follette

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, joined yesterday with Chairman Thomas of the Senate Labor Committee in lighting a backfire against antilabor legislation by introducing a bill providing stiff criminal penalties for "oppressive" employers.

Moving as Congress entered a "cooling off" period on the labor issue, La Follette told the Senate that the measure, aimed at restricting union-breaking practices of employers, would promote efficiency in war industries by bulwarking existing machinery for mediation and arbitration of labor disputes.

Referring specifically to the House-passed Smith bill, La Follette declared that the same interests which fought legal recognition of the right of collective bargaining now seek "to remove and relax the gentle restraint of the National Labor Relations Act so that union-busting may proceed apace under cover of the war effort."

Would Extend Unions

By restraining union-breaking employers, LaFollette proposed to extend unionization to war industries which, he said, "are now only about 30 or 40 per cent" organized.

"Many of our vital plants are lacking in the employer-employe machinery conducive to an avoidance of or a settlement of disputes that may, regardless of any law, lead to work stoppages or inefficiency," he asserted.

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, meanwhile, announced a proposal for solution of the controversy over payment of overtime for work beyond 40 hours a week. Departing from his former position in favor of labor legislation, George proposed voluntary action by both labor and industry.

George said he would suggest to President Roosevelt, either by letter or in person, that labor work a six-day week, the sixth day to be known as "victory day," when payment would be made at regular rates with war industries rebating overtime savings to the Government.

Longer Hours Wanted

He told reporters that the war emergency should not be made the occasion for "enactment of vindictive labor legislation."

"The country wants longer hours worked in war industries and it will achieve that purpose one way or another," he said. "If a voluntary agreement of this nature could be reached the country would be satisfied and labor would still retain its basic 40-hour week after the war ends."

La Follette and Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, both firm supporters of Administration labor policies, timed their move with the pending Congressional showdown over labor. If Congress and the Nation has time for consideration of "any labor legislation," La Follette reasoned, his bill "by all means" should be "carefully weighed."

"Hours and days of the time of Congress and its committees are consumed with discussions of labor legislation," he said. "Proposals are pending before the Senate designed to treat labor relations with both emergency and permanent measures. In such a situation, we would be derelict in our responsibilities if we did not request a studied consideration of the 'Oppressive Labor Practices Act of 1942'"

Extends 1940 Measure

In effect, the La Follette-Thomas bill is merely an extension of "oppressive practices" legislation which passed the Senate in May, 1940, but which the House Labor Committee failed to report before the end of the Seventy-sixth Congress.

The new bill defines 11 forms of oppressive labor practices. The first four were carried in the earlier measure. These define oppressive practices as the use of labor spies, employment of strikebreakers or strikebreaking agencies, the hiring of armed guards except for the protection of company property and use or possession of "industrial munitions"—machine guns, sawed-off shotguns, tear gas—about a place of employment.

Also covered by the new bill are such practices as organized interference with lawful union activities "and other forms of vigilantism;" blacklisting; negotiation of employer agreements to refuse to engage in collective bargaining; the "yellow dog" practice of barring employes from union activities as a condition of emloyment; intimidation of employers to prevent collective bargaining; conspiracy to engage in oppressive practices, a definition aimed at "belligerent employer associations," and failure of employers to supply certain information to the National Labor Relations Board.

Imprisonment or Fine

The measure would provide maximum penalties of $10,000 fine or six months imprisonment for engaging in oppressive practices which affect commerce or utilize the mails.

Referring to four years of study of civil rights and interference with organized labor during which a labor subcommittee of which he is chairman, compiled an 80-volume record, La Follette said:

"I venture the assertion that no legislation has ever been presented to this body with any more substantial factual record grounding the propriety and necessity of the legislation proposed."

Records of the subcommittee, he said, show that "it is a habit, indeed a function, of certain types of employer groups to kindle fires by propaganda and other devices, thereby lighting the way for legislative restriction of labor's rights."

Since adoption of the National Labor Relations Act and its approval by the Supreme Court, La Follette continued, "these subversive conspiracies" have attempted not only to avoid and violate the law, but to "direct hysteria against trade unions and collective bargaining."

Hits "Clamorous Minority"

La Follette called for reassurance for labor "that the Nation is not going to yield to that clamorous minority, which in Congress and out, for the past six years, has been seeking to subvert, eliminate or substantially weaken the Federal guarantee of collective bargaining."

Passage of his bill, he said, would lessen labor demands for "union security"—major strike cause—and would convince many employers "that there was no further point in preserving their economic opportunities by using oppressive labor practices to shake off collective bargaining."

The District Red Cross Blood Donor Center at Twenty-third Street and Constitution Avenue Northwest received its 10,000th blood contributor at 11 a. m. yesterday.

The volunteer, 10,000th to appear at the generally crowded center since last June 1, was Mrs. Marvin L. Rice, of 3812 Benton Street Northwest. This was her second donation. Her husband is a pharmacist's mate in the Navy.

Mrs. Dorothy M. Walton, director of the blood donor service for the District, emphasized yesterday that donors should remember the Red Cross requirement for the elapsing of eight weeks between blood donations. The age limits for donors are 21 to 60. Persons between 18 and 21 who desire to donate must have the consent of parents or guardian.

Volunteers have come to the center at the rate of about 150 a day, it was said.

President Urged to Set Up War Plants in Hard-Coal Area

By Joseph A. Loftus
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Federal Anthracite Commission told President Roosevelt yesterday that the Government, in prosecuting the war, had failed to utilize sufficiently the industrial resources of the Pennsylvania hard coal area. The board strongly recommended the establishment of war plants in the area.

"It seems to us," it told the President in a letter accompanying a report of its recent investigation, "that the productive power of more than a million people in the midst of the chief manufacturing section of the country should not be neglected when in so many areas overcrowding and labor shortages deter the expansion of war production."

The commission submitted two sets of recommendations, one for immediate improvement of the area, and another for long-term improvement.

No. 1 recommendation for immediate improvement aid, in part:

"At a time when most manufacturing areas of the Nation are striving desperately to meet shortages of man power and to build new housing and other community facilities, it is in the national interest that the industrial resources of the anthracite area be utilized . . .

"It is strongly recommended that the war agencies of the Federal Government give careful consideration to the suitability of the area for the location of necessary war plants, particularly those for the production of aluminum, zinc, synthetic ammonia, explosives, castings, forgings, armor plate, machine parts, aircraft parts, tank parts, and ammunition."

The letter to the President summarized the national-defense phase of the report and said the area's facilities are "underutilized." Thousands of workers trained in war occupations have been forced to seek jobs outside the area, aggravating problems of transportation and congestion, it pointed out.

Depression has continued there and relief rolls are heavy, despite teeming industrial activity in the country generally; no Government-financed war plants have been located there and no major Government supply contracts have been placed there, the commission asserted.

Although the anthracite area is closer than 200 miles to the coast, a condition regarded unfavorably in general by the military in the placement of important war industries, the commission expressed belief that "in the application of the strategic-zone rule, inadequate weight has been given to the fact that the anthracite area is well-protected on all sides by mountains and is at all points more than 100 miles from the Atlantic Coast."

The commission's recommendations were substantially the same as those of the original, tentative draft. There are seven proposals for immediate improvement: Establishment of war industries, creation of a State engineering organization, maintenance of the vocational training program, drainage tunnels to reduce mining hazards and pumping costs, further development of stokers and other equipment, investigations to expand industrial uses for anthracite, and an operators' program to aid consumers in converting domestic equipment to the use of anthracite.

Four recommendations for long-term improvement are: Establishment of a research station in the region, an investigation to find means of reducing production costs through the application of the most modern and efficient methods, a program of reforestration, and establishment of an agency to concern itself with long-range problems of economic adjustment in the area.

Paralysis Germ Reported Found

therapeutic possibilities" in the treatment of tuberculosis was reported today to the American Association of Pathologists and Bacteriologists.

Dr. William H. Feldman, of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., presented results of laboratory experiments in which 16 tubercular guinea pigs were treated with the drug, which he calls promin.

At the end of 224 days, he said, 13 still were alive, although 31 untreated animals in a control group which had been given tuberculosis at the same time all were dead.

Promin, he emphasized, did not cure the guinea pigs but reduced the severity of the infection and in most cases prevented its spread.

Capital Man Quits Canadian for U. S. Army

Camp Lee, Va., April 3 (AP).—Avery Ashwood, who quit the United States Army after ten years service and joined Canadian forces in May, 1940, because he "wanted to see action," has given up a sergeancy to get back into the United States Army.

He obtained a discharge from the Canadian army while on furlough at his home in Washington and is now at the recruit reception center here awaiting assignment to the Air Corps.

Labor's War Board Meets With President

By the Associated Press

The A. F. L.-C. I. O. labor war board met with President Roosevelt yesterday, and its members said a number of "very important matters" were discussed, but declined to disclose what they were.

They did say there was some discussion in a general way of the question of mobilization of man power for war production, but they indicated no decision had been reached by the President on the subject. They said their recommendations still stood that this mobilization be entrusted to the Labor Department.

The board will meet with Mr. Roosevelt again next Friday.

On contracts up to $100,000—10 per cent.

Contracts over $100,000 and up to $300,000—8 per cent.

Contracts over $300,000 and up to 1 million dollars—6 per cent.

Contracts over 1 million dollars and less than 5 million dollars—5 per cent.

Contracts over 5 million dollars and less than 20 million dollars—4 per cent.

Contracts over 20 million dollars and less than 50 million dollars—3 per cent.

Contracts over 50 million dollars—3 per cent on the first 50 million dollars and 2 per cent on all over the first 50 million dollars.

Profits would be determined on gross proceeds, before taxes.

The graduated plan, submitted by Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, directed the heads of the War and Navy departments and the Maritime Commission to withhold 20 per cent of the contract price, until the contractor had certified itemized costs, and these had been verified by the agency.

Final payment would then be made, first of the balance due on the costs, and second, of profits determined by the sliding scale rule.

Administration spokesmen, from War Production Chief Nelson to Randolph Paul, Treasury tax adviser, have repeatedly opposed the percentage yardstick on profits.

Nelson told the House Naval Committee only last week that the percentage rule "leaves entirely out of consideration such important matters as return on capital investment, turnover, the time required to fill the contract, and the financial structure of the contracting firm."

An alternative compromise amendment earlier was presented by Senators O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and Overton, of Louisiana (Democrats). This tightened the flexible controls recommended by Government counsel. Under the subcommittee agreement the Thomas scale would be combined with the O'Mahoney-Overton amendment.

The latter formula directs the heads of the three agencies to write a renegotiation clause into all new contracts. Whenever in their opinion excessive profits appeared likely on any contracts, the contractor could be required to renegotiate the price and the war agencies could withhold any amount deemed to represent excessive profits, or recover excessive profits paid, by court action if necessary.

These powers would extend to all contracts, whether or not they carry a renegotiation clause, so long as final payment had not been made.

The O'Mahoney-Overton redraft further provides that in determining excessive profits no allowance should be made "for any salaries, bonuses or other compensation paid by a contractor to its officers or employes in excess of a reasonable amount, nor shall they make allowance for any excessive reserves set up by the contractor."

Persons holding contracts of $500,000 or more could be required to make a sworn statement on actual costs of production and other financial data, subject to a $10,000 penalty or two-year jail sentence for willful refusal.

Except for the sliding scale profits rule, the substitute offered by Senator Thomas covered largely the same ground embodied in the O'Mahoney-Overton proposal. It slapped at big bonus and salary payments by directing the war agencies to use present powers of audit to determine whether unreasonable compensation was paid, or excessive reserves set up.

The Thomas plan directed the Secretary of War, acting jointly with the Secretary of the Navy and the chairman of the Maritime Commission, to set up an interdepartmental agency selected from existing personnel of the three departments to impose the profits limitations.

Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, ranking member of the committee, would not predict whether the composite plan would run the gantlet of the full committee, which until yesterday was believed favorable to vesting full say as to profits with the war agencies themselves. High Administration officials have warned against any rigid rule of thumb and have urged that profits be left to the tax bill. A Senate floor controversy was brewing which some Senators privately predicted would extend the war profits row deep into the Easter holidays.

Officials Link Standard Oil To Looted Gold

trade with Axis-dominated firms in South America enrolled on the State Department's black list. He said that Standard Oil, of New Jersey and Sterling Products, Inc., the pharmaceutical house owned jointly by Standard and I. G. Farben industries, are not among the 89 per cent.

"Standard Oil became something of a headache to us," he said.

Berle testified that on October 21, 1941, representatives of Standard notified him 'ts board of directors had rejected the State Department's request that oil and gas be denied the Nazi companies.

"I got irritated and said the department would have to take what steps were open to it to prevent deliveries," Berle said.

"Do you mean they placed a pre-existing contract above the interests of the United States?" Senator Burton (Republican), of Ohio, asked.

"They did," Berle said.

"And that it came from the board of directors?" Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, asked, incredulously.

"Yes," Berle said.

Berle proceeded with steps to blacklist Standard's Brazilian subsidiary—the organization that directly supplied the petroleum products—on, October 22.

"News of the department's action traveled fast," Berle said, and next day, October 23, Standard notified the State Department it was ready "to cooperate with the department wholeheartedly."

No more oil and gas reached Condor and Lati, and a short time later they shut up shop.

Before leaving the stand Berle cautioned the committee that he did not seek to "enter into a blanket indictment of Standard on the basis of facts I have." He said the company may have wanted the Government to use compulsion to escape liability for breaking its contracts.

Secretary Berle's testimony retracted in part a statement issued by the State Department last Wednesday night. The statement said that the department asked Standard Oil "in 1941" to restrict its sales of fuel to Condor and Lati.

Berle's testimony confirmed that after October 23, 1941, when the department threatened to blacklist Standard's subsidiary in Brazil, the company complied with every request of the State Department. Prior to October 23, the company resisted attempts to restrict its sales.

Farish Gives Approval

Farish issued a statement last night which said:

"While I have not seen Mr. Berle's statement made to the Senate committee this morning, if I am correctly advised concerning its contents, I have no quarrel with what he said. I have been informed that this afternoon he denied that our Brazilian company had been put on the black list.

"We wished to be under some actual compulsion by the State Department before breaching the Condor contract. This compulsion was provided by the blacklist threat in October, 1941, mentioned by Mr. Berle. In fact, limited deliveries to Condor continued under the instructions of Ambassador Caffery in Rio until stopped by his direction some time later."

Foley told the committee that had the Treasury acceded to Standard's request for permission to sell its Hungarian business to the Germans, it would have involved the United States in a breach of the British blockade, would have given Germany the right to make concessions to one American company and not to others, and would have involved Government purchase of gold stolen by the Nazis.

Approval of "New Order"

"It would not merely have facilitated Germany's program of economic domination of Europe," Foley said, "but it would have been tantamount to an approval of Germany's "new order" in Europe.

Foley said it is a fundamental policy of the Treasury "to prevent Germany from acquiring the assets of overrun countries or from being able to make use of any such assets that it may have looted. To have permitted Germany to use 24 million dollars of looted gold or other foreign exchange assets to pay for the oil property in Hungary would have been a direct contradiction of the purpose of our freezing control. It would have exposed us to the charge of being willing to accept the spoils of looting to help preferred American companies. Mr. Farish admitted in his testimony that his company had no way of knowing where and from whom Germany acquired the gold that was being offered in payment."

Foley said the United States "had much more to gain in terms of retaining the confidence and good will of overrun European peoples and subjugated governments by maintaining the high moral principle of preventing Germany from acquiring or making use of looted assets than was lost in not permitting the Standard Oil Co. to sell its Hungarian properties for funds looted by Germany."

Nazi Crews on Tankers

La Varre told the committee that although the Commerce Department tried for three years to stop the flow of gas and oil to the Axis controlled Lati and Condor air lines, they received fuel in "tremendous quantities" from Standard Oil until October, 1941. Oil was stored in depots all the way from Natal to Rio de Janeiro. It was transported in Standard Oil tankers manned by German crews, he said.

Over Lati and through the British blockade, La Varre said, there traveled between 1939 and 1941 a steady stream of Axis propaganda and propagandists, bound for South American countries and the United States, as well as valuable war materials for Germany.

Westward from Europe, and usually free of charge, came books, films, Gestapo agents, spies, loot from occupied countries, and occasionally even German medals for Nazi sympathizers in the Americas. On the return trips the line carried diamonds, platinum and especially mica, important war material.

The committee recessed until Tuesday morning at 10:30, when Jesse Jones, Secretary of Commerce and Reconstruction Finance Corporation chairman, will testify on the rubber situation.

Dances, Tours On Tap for Men on Leave

Dances, special entertainments, sightseeing tours and other functions are on tap for soldiers, sailors and marines visiting Washington this week-end.

The District Defense Council's new Washington recreational and hospitality committee meanwhile prepared to continue its census of visiting service men to determine the extent of the shortage of lodging facilities for them.

Some relief will be provided, it was announced, by the addition of 100 beds available to soldiers on leave at the Washington recreation area camp just across Memorial Bridge in Arlington, Va. The camp is now able to provide lodging for some 500 men, according to Lieut. Col. Walter H. Long, commandant.

Events scheduled for uniformed visitors include:

Today

2 p. m.—Sightseeing tour with hostesses and guide service, sponsored by Washington Federation of Churches, followed by picnic supper and singing. Meet at National Art Gallery rotunda, Constitution Avenue and Sixth Street Northwest. Late comers may join party up to 3 p. m.

Nichols Renamed To D. C. Park Post

Frederic A. Delano, chairman, yesterday announced that President Roosevelt has appointed J. C. Nichols, of Kansas City, to his fourth term as a member of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. The term expires in 1948.

"This is particularly pleasing to me," said Delano, "because Mr. Nichols and I are the only two members left who were appointed when the commission was organized by Act of Congress in 1926."

Cooperative School Trains Skilled Men

Flint, Mich.—To help meet the demand for trained men for the war effort, the General Motors Institute here has started a new class in cooperative industrial and product engineering.

Preference is given young men from cities in which General Motors plants are located, although men from any locality with good high school records and recommended by their school authorities will receive every consideration.

More than 1100 students are now taking part in the cooperative program. Students spend one month in school and one month in the plant, alternately.

Yard three years gao. He said he had been ordered to meet the destroyers at a small island near Java, but a formation of enemy bombers appeared and drove the destroyers away.

The transfer, Abernethy said, was finally made by the Pecos' motor launch, which made several trips to the destroyers to bring off survivors. The Pecos then turned toward Australia shortly after 8 a. m. March 1 and soon Japanese aircraft appeared.

"I felt we were in for serious trouble," Abernethy said. "About noon a formation of six dive bombers launched a round of bombs at us and our ship was hit. One explosion knocked the crew from a gun but another crew was able to take up actron.

"These same six bombers then loosed another round at us. Then a second flight of six planes came over and cut loose but we remained afloat and kept shooting. On their third flight there were nine dive bombers and some other planes. The damage to the Pecos was progressive and she finally sank by the bow a little over four hours after the start of the battle.

Men Strafed in Water

"We estimated that about 50 men were killed and about 100 wounded by the dive bombers but the exact numer never will be known. The last bomber strafed our men who were in the water and on the after deck. Lieut. L. J. McPeake, my executive officer, manned the aft machine gun to the last and drove it off."

Abernethy said one enemy plane was seen to be smoking and he believed several were hit.

Chief Storekeeper Saxton, wounded in the arm by a bomb fragment while manning the gunnery control post on the bridge, refused to leave the Langley when the order was given to abandon until he had retrieved the men's pay records. He dived overboard with them, clung to them in the water and then lost them while he was being hoisted aboard a rescuing destroyer.

Survivors of the Langley and the Pecos were rescued by a destroyer which stood by for two hours taking men from the water although a submarine was known to be near. On the way to Australia a submarine was attacked.

Built as a collier, the Langley was converted to use as an aircraft carrier in July, 1919, and was placed in commission in 1922, the Navy's first carrier. She was converted to a seaplane tender in 1937.

The Peary, which took her commander, Lieut. John M. Bermingham, of New York City, down with her, had escaped a number of bombings before Jap airplanes finally got her in Darwin Harbor. She was damaged at Cavite early in the war and was attacked several times on her way from the Philippines to Australia, where she was repaired and placed in convoy service.

Meets a Proud End

Her end will go down in Navy tradition. While she slowly sank under the pounding of Japanese bombs, her crew remained at their battle stations, pumping shells at the enemy until they were driven off, gun by gun.

"No officer or man," said the Navy's communique, "left the ship until it sank under him."

Then they swam through blazing oil until other ships picked them up. A number of survivors were rescued.

Next of kin of those lost on the three ships have been notified or will be notified as soon as possible, the Navy Department said.

Navy Communique No. 65

"Southwest Pacific:

"1. The United States aircraft tender Langley, the naval tanker Pecos and the destroyer Peary were sunk by the enemy in the vicinity of northern Australia and waters south of Java in late February and early March.

"2. A number of survivors from these ships were rescued and reached port safely. The next of kin of all personnel lost in the Pecos have been notified. The next of kin of those lost in the Langley and Peary either already have been notified or will be notified as soon as information is available.

"3. Official reports from Tokyo claimed the sinking of the Langley at least three times during the first month of the war, during which period the Langley was not damaged. She was sunk after a prolonged attack by the enemy south of Java in late February. Except for about a dozen men, all Langley personnel survived the attack and were transferred to the Pecos, which was itself sunk a few days later.

"4. The Pecos, a small tanker, employed in supplying fuel to units of our fleet in the Far East, was sunk in early March.

"5. The Peary, a World War destroyer which received minor damage in the Japanese bombing attacks on Cavite immediately after the outbreak of the war, was sunk in the harbor at Darwin about February 19. The Peary had participated in many of the offensive actions of our destroyers in the Far East. Observers who witnessed the last engagement of the Peary described the conduct of her crew as beyond all praise. Gun crews remained at their battle stations continuing their fire until they were forced by rising water to leave their stations. No officer or man left the ship until it sank under him. A number of survivors were later rescued.

"6. War conditions in the southwest Pacific have greatly complicated and delayed reports of casualties, and the public is urged to refrain from initiating individual inquiries regarding casualties. The next of kin of all casualties are always notified by telegram as soon as possible.

"7. There is nothing to report from other areas."

Red Cross To Collect Scrap Wool

The American Red Cross yesterday was assigned a wool-gathering task that is expected to bring between one and two million dollars annually into the treasuries of local chapters.

The organization will collect from clothing stores and wool clipped from trousers legs under the War Production Board's no-cuffs edict and sell it into the proper channels for repossessing.

Proceeds from such sales should total one or two million dollars annually, it was estimated by Irving Squires, head of WPB's men's clothing section.

Squires and Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, volunteer services director of the Red Cross, agreed to make the Red Cross the central collecting agency for scrap wool.

Hotels' Floral Funds Sent to Red Cross

The managements of two local hotels took seriously the recently published article on the failure of the District Red Cross to meet its quota in the war fund drive, and did something about it.

The D. C. Chapter of the American Red Cross received a letter yesterday from George D. Johnson, manager of the Wardman Park Hotel, which said in effect: "This year the amount we normally spend on Easter floral decorations for the lobby of the Wardman Park Hotel, is being donated to the American Red Cross to further the war effort."

The same type of letter was sent by Frank Swadley, manager of the Carlton Hotel.

Portland is one of the bases from which the recent British commando raids on St. Nazaire and Bruneval may have been launched.

Nazis Caught Coming Home

So closely locked were the opposing air forces that German bombers returning from England were engaged and damaged by British fighters hovering over airdromes in German-occupied territory. One R. A. F. squadron leader reported hits on two Nazi planes which approached their base with landing lights ablaze.

Although they ranged from Belgium to Brittany, the R. A. F. lost but two planes compared to Wednesday night's 15. Pilots reported heavy new damage to the Matford plant, which is producing trucks for the Germans. Vichy reports said one child was killed and six persons wounded at Poissy and that bombs also fell at Andresy and Marly in the Paris area.

Docks at Le Havre again were raided and R. A. F. fighters swept a number of Nazi airdromes.

Casualties were heavy and civilian property considerably damaged in the British south coast town, authorized reports said. R. A. F. night fighters prevented heavier casualties.

Traffic Drops 3 to 7 Per Cent Here in March

A 3 to 7 per cent decrease in general traffic here last month as compared with March, 1941, and a 5 per cent decrease in gasoline consumption in February were reported yesterday by the director of District highways.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director, told members of the highways committee of the Washington Board of Trade that this is the first time since 1934 that the gas consumption in any one month has shown a decrease over the corresponding month of the previous year. At the same time, Whitehurst estimated that due to restrictions on tires and gasoline, there will be a 30 per cent overall decline in the use of automobiles next year.

In reporting on projects now under way, Whitehurst said three of the four Potomac River approaches will be let in a few weeks. On April 15 temporary detours will have to be made around the Fourteenth Street and Maine Avenue intersection to permit construction to continue. But, he cautioned, all of the proposed highway plans may not be completed due to lack of vital materials.

It was disclosed that reconstruction of the railroad bridge over the Potomac will begin in a few weeks. When work is finished it will permit carrying heaviest loads at 45 miles an hour against the present limit of 15 miles for freight trains and 20 miles for passenger trains.

Meanwhile, William A. Van Duzer, traffic director, announced that he had granted permission to M. I. O'Boyle & Son, petroleum haulers, to operate 60-foot tank trucks across the city for the duration. The trucks are 10 feet in excess of the limit.

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, April 3.—A dispatch from Madrid quotes a German spokesman as saying that Britain's defenses against night raids are so highly developed as to render mass night raids by the Luftwaffe "most unprofitable."

The Nazi, the dispatch says, was explaining the failure of the Luftwaffe to take reprisals for recent British raids.

"Night bombardments adopted after the heavy losses suffered in daytime bombing in the autumn of 1940 have become increasingly costly because of the British electromagnetic plane detector," he said.

"This is used either from the ground or from new two-seater pursuit planes, in which it has now been installed. These detectors render anything like mass night attacks very vulnerable to British night fliers, who know where the Germans are, whereas the reverse is not the case."

Triple Killing 'Merely a Brawl,' Not a Race Riot

Fort Dix, N. J., April 3 (AP).—Authorities said today the killing last night of a white military policeman and two Negro soldiers, and the wounding of five Negro soldiers, in a gun battle was "merely a brawl" without racial significance.

The incident, as reconstructed by Maj. Aage Woldike, post public relations officer, occurred after a score of military police laid siege to a Negro barracks from which gunfire answered a bullet "fired over the head" of a Negro soldier.

The Negro had fled from nearby Pointville, Woldike said, after grappling with an M. P., who intervened in an argument among soldiers waiting to use a telephone.

The dead are Private Manie W. Strough, white, of Honeycamp, Va.; Private Isaac W. Brown, Negro, of Henderson, Tenn., and Corpl. W. E. Hall, Negro, of Conyers, Ga.

Navy Will Train 20,000 Men at Tome Institute

By the Associated Press

The Navy has taken over the Jacob Tome Institute, formerly a boys' preparatory school at Port Deposit, Md., for use as a naval training center for 20,000 men at a time.

Reporting this yesterday, the Navy said the institute properties would be used as a recruit training station, technical school and receiving station. Existing facilities will be expanded with temporary structures, construction of which will be expedited so that the station may be in operation by August 1, 1942.

The Navy said it had taken possession of the property under an order issued March 30, that the property was now being appraised and that "a declaration of taking" soon would be filed to vest title in the United States.

Hankin Lauds Joint Call-Box Setup for Cabs

Approximately 1800 calls have been handled successfully on the new "cooperative call box" system now being employed by five major District taxi companies, Commissioner Gregory Hankin announced last night.

The system, whereby the combined call boxes of Arrow, Bell, Premier, Yellow and Checker companies are placed under a central switchboard, is designed to simplify the heretofore complicated business of calling a cab. Commissioner Hankin said that the new plan would "prove a splendid response to our accelerated wartime transportation needs."

Under the plan, a taxicab, a member of the five participating companies, would be able to deliver a passenger, and instead of returning to a call box of his own company, stop at one of the cooperating stands in the neighborhood and wait for another call. This, Hankin added, would also save tires.

D. C. Refuses Auto Tag Refund To Selectee

No refunds on Washington automobile tags even though the plates have never been used are being allowed by the District auditor unless the license application was made before Apr 1.

A decision of Arthur R. Pilkerton, city auditor, was revealed yesterday in the case of Warren B. Dell, 27, of 1927 Lamont Street Northwest, who was ordered into the Army a short time after buying his tags. He was denied a refund when he attempted to return the unused tags.

Dell said he bought his plates April 1 and when he returned home found an induction order. He returned to the New Municipal Center and asked for his money back. Pilkerton said he was too late.

A few refunds will be made on applications filed before April 1, Pilkerton said.

D. C. Moves to Get Land for Widening Of Mt. Olivet Road

Condemnation proceedings were instituted at District Court yesterday by the District government in an effort to acquire land for a proposed widening of Mount Olivet Road Northeast.

The stretch of highway to be broadened was described as that between Bladensburg Road and the east boundary of the Columbia Institute for the Deaf—approximately at Corcoran Street.

The petition for condemnation, which will involve portions of 32 lots on the street, was filed in the name of the District Commissioners by Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech and two assistants, James W. Lauderdale and Stanley De Neale.

WPB's Estimate May Sidetrack Sugar Rationing

The long-heralded sugar rationing program, now tentatively set to get under way with a nationwide registration May 4 to 7, may be scrapped if estimates of current sugar supplies, completed by the War Production Board, prevail over the insistence of the Office of Price Administration to go ahead with the rationing plan.

According to the WPB's information approximately 1 million tons more of Cuban sugar will be available for United States consumption requirements than originally estimated. This is due to the speed-up in the production of industrial alcohol from grain and corn in the Middle West to replace and augment the stocks of alcohol usually produced from black strap molasses.

Engine Trouble Delays Departure Of Norfolk Boat

The steamer District of Columbia was delayed three and one-half hours last night in sailing for Norfolk, Va., from Washington.

Capt. E. H. Eaton, port captain of the Norfolk & Washington Steamboat Co., said the delay was due to engine trouble. The boat, with 150 aboard, was scheduled to leave at 6:30 p. m. but did not get away until shortly after 10.

Two weeks ago the same steamer was held up at Norfolk for two days when members of the fireroom crew failed to report in a dispute with the management.

First-Aid Pupil Praised for Saving Woman

Commendations were widely distributed yesterday as a result of the quick action of Roy E. James, Treasury Department employe, in applying a tourniquet to an injured woman on Thursday and probably saving her life.

James had taken six lessons in a Red Cross first-aid course and used his belt as a tourniquet on Mrs. Mildred Navin, of 549 South Edgewood Street, Arlington, after she had been hit by a truck and seriously injured.

Her right leg was partially torn off and amputation was necessary at Emergency Hospital. Her condition was reported as "fair."

Brig. Gen. F. R. Keefer, chairman of the District Red Cross, yesterday wrote Treasury Secretary Morgenthau in appreciation of the Treasury's cooperation in the Red Cross first-aid program. This wholehearted cooperation, he stated, was responsible for James' ability to aid the injured woman.

Expresses His Appreciation

James yesterday expressed appreciation for his six lessons.

"I feel," he said, "that every hour any one of us in the Treasury has spent learning first aid has been worthwhile. I feel quite sure, also, that all other Red Cross courses are equally valuable in different lines, and I think we will all appreciate that fact more and more."

Then Otto Lund, chapter manager, sent a congratulatory telegram to James and a letter of commendation to his instructor, Charles Clark, assistant chief, Division of Mails and Files, Bureau of Customs, Treasury Department. The telegram said:

"The District of Columbia Chapter of the American Red Cross extends congratulations to you for the efficient way you rendered first aid to Mrs. Mildred Navin. Your application of first aid teaching shows the value of lessons learned since we understand you have not yet completed your first aid course."

Instructor Commended

The letter to the instructor said:

"It is gratifying to note in The Washington Evening Star of April 2 the effective first aid given by Mr. Roy E. James of the Treasury Department to Mrs. Mildred Navin, who was injured by a truck.

"The fact that Mr. James has not completed his course shows excellent application of what he has learned so far, which was the means of saving a life.

"Since Mr. James is receiving his first aid instruction under you we wish to commend you and your thorough method of teaching. Thanks to many volunteer instructors, like yourself, giving freely of their time, the lives of thousands of men, women and children may be saved."

Capital Lawn Gets the Eggs This Easter

Observing the old Easter custom called "egg rolling," an expected 100,000 children and adults will give the egg its annual and massed scrambling with their shoe soles Monday, but the Capitol's west lawn will get the resulting jaundice instead of the White House backyard.

Exigencies of war, closing the White House gates to the rollers this Easter, will send the hordes principally to the Capitol's west lawn and to the Zoo grounds. At the latter place, Director Dr. William M. Mann expects 50,000. Forty-eight thousand were there last Easter.

As usual, the animal buildings will be closed all day to keep the rollers from throwing eggs at animals and the interior walls. Experience is guiding the management. Gates will open at 7:30 a. m. and close at 8 p. m.

The Capitol's west lawn will be open from 8 a. m. to dusk, it was announced. Ordinarily, about 3000 rollers and tramplers have favored the sloping lawn at the Capitol. The number is expected to be larger Monday with suspended activities on the White House grounds.

Nearly two score city playgrounds also will welcome the rollers Monday.

Kindergarten and day school children from Barney Neighborhood House and Friendship House settlements will have a joint egg roll: 1:30 p. m. today at Friendship House, 619 D Street Southeast. The Boys' Club of Washington will sponsor egg hunts at 11 a. m. Monday at Eastern Branch, and at 1 p. m. Tuesday at Central Branch.

Egg rolling attendancies at the White House in the past six years were recorded as follows: 1936, 48,528; 1937, 53,180; 1038, 40,000; 1939, 52,259; 1940, 30,495 and 1941, 53,258—or 277,720 hen eggs if each person only brought one. This was exclusive of the eggs rolled elsewhere in the city those days.

Luebeck Raid Damage Reported 'Catastrophic'

Bern, April 3 (AP).—Photographs of the damage inflicted on Luebeck by the R. A. F. last Saturday night show "without exaggeration that the effects were catastrophic," the Berlin correspondent of the Tribune de Geneve reported today.

"Some hundreds of properties were demolished like castles of cardboard and some streets were entirely blasted by explosions," the correspondent wrote.

Earlier reports from Berlin were that the raid was "the heaviest British air attack on German territory since the beginning of the war."

Over 200 bodies have been recovered. The Trbune said the total losses were not yet known, but that women and children must be evacuated from Luebeck.

Defense Bond Sales Show March Decline

The Treasury announced yesterday that sales of defense savings bonds in March totaled $357,892,000 as compared with a total of $703,300,000 during February, a decline of 20.7 per cent. The Treasury said the drop was anticipated because of income-tax payments which fell due on March 16. Tax receipts last month exceeded three billion, the largest on record.

Hankin Says Hostelries Violate Antitrust Act on Phone Rates

District of Columbia hotels, apartment houses and clubs which make special "service" charges for telephone calls above the tolls fixed by the telephone companies may be violating the Clayton Antitrust Act, in the opinion of Gregory Hankin, chairman of the District Public Utilities Commission.

At a joint Federal Communications Commission and P. U. C. hearing on these extra tolls, Hankin asserted that the charges could not be legally made unless the hotels and other places were acting as agents of the telephone company. If they were, in effect, telephone company agents, then their extra tolls would be subject to regulation by the F. C. C. and the P. U. C., he said.

Representatives of hotels, clubs and apartment houses have testified at the hearing and maintained that their charges were beyond the jurisdiction of the two commissions because they were charging for "special service to tenants," rather than telephone operation. These charges are already "frozen" under the District rent law, they maintain. Crux of the hearings is this jurisdiction question.

Hankin explained his position on the Clayton Act after F. Brooke Price, counsel for the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., objected to a previous request by Hankin that he submit a brief on the point.

Operation of telephone switchboards in 38 "representative" District apartment houses resulted in a loss of 33 per cent, Rufus S. Lusk, secretary of the Building Owners and Managers Association, testified at the hearing. Because these apartment houses are now operating under the District rent law, regulation and reduction of extra telephone charges will result in rent increases, Lusk said.

Previous testimony showed that hotels follow the practice of charging 10 cents for local calls and varying additional amounts for long distance calls.

Lusk presented the results of a survey of 38 District apartment buildings to the two bodies. Operating telephones in these apartments during 1941 cost the apartment operators $236,813.63 including telephone bills totaling $155,658.45 and salaries to operators totaling $81,155.18, he said, while tenants were charged $182,275.11 by the apartment operators.

Most apartment houses charge tenants $1 a month for the use of a telephone and 5 cents for each local call, Lusk said. A 25-cent optional directory listing charge is also made in many cases, he said. No extra charge is made for long-distance calls, he said.

Operation of switchboards involves considerable additional service, including the taking of messages when the tenants are out, and wake-up service in the morning, he said. Arousing tenants often requires several calls, he said.

Now For A Clean-Up

The Senate's acceptance of the conference report on the Lanham bill means that Washington may soon be building houses for war workers on a large scale, instead of merely talking about them. That is most encouraging. Even an inadequate bill, as this is, is preferable to further delay. It is four months since Congress began to work on this vital problem. The bill has shuttled back and forth between the Senate and House as if no emergency existed, and in all that time few major amendments have been made.

Originally it was decided that at least 10,000 additional dwellings would have to be built with public funds to avoid an acute shortage of war-agency personnel in Washington. Both the House and Senate accepted that proposal. But the Senate also added 20 million dollars to the 50-million-dollar House bill so as to provide a larger sum for essential hospitals, water and sewer improvements, schools and so forth. In the conference report 20 million dollars is set aside for necessary public works, but the bill as a whole authorizes an outlay of only 50 million dollars. This means a sharp cut in the number of dwellings that can be built. Fortunately, the type of housing to be ordered is left largely to the new National Housing Agency, so that adjustments can be made to fit the varied requirements of the community.

After Senate and House committees had spent weeks considering the Goodwillie plan for conversion of nine blocks of rotten slums in the Southwest into modern dwellings for war workers, the conferees eliminated all funds for that project. Of course, that does not dispose of it. Mr. Goodwillie's plan is certain to be revived after the war. In the meantime, the refusal of Congress to strike at the health menace lurking in these slums by means of the Lanham bill makes it the more essential to improve sanitary conditions in these areas by other methods. The reduction in the number of low-rent houses to be built will also inevitably mean greater concentration of people in vermin-infested hovels set in garbage-strewn alleys, unless temporary clean-up is ordered.

As a complement to the Lanham bill, therefore, attention should now be turned to the housing code worked out by the Washington Housing Association to compel landlords to put their houses in habitable condition before renting them. A code prescribing minimum standards of decency in housing has long been needed. In this period when slum clearance has had to be suspended and overcrowding is growing worse every day the adoption of such protective measures may reasonably be regarded as imperative.

No Need For CCC

Again the President reiterates his opposition to the winding up of the CCC. Director McEntee had already given the reason. He told the Senate Committee on Education and Labor that there is no relief need warranting continuation of the CCC, but added, "If the work we are doing is not of value in wartime I see no reason to oppose abandonment of the corps." The implication was that the CCC ought to be continued if it is doing defense work. Such a statement of the case begs the real issue. The question is simply whether the CCC ought to retain its present status as an independent organization after ceasing to be a civilian training and relief agency.

Useful work can no doubt be performed by CCC men around cantonments. No doubt, moreover, the physical vigor of young men undergoing CCC training will be improved by outdoor life and conditioned to some extent for Army service. But all this is beside the point. The original purpose of the CCC was to provide employment for needy young men and enable them to aid their families. It was primarily a relief organization. Special efforts, indeed, were made to avoid the appearance of military regimentation, and to stress training for civilian pursuits. Now the CCC has been stripped to pursue—strictly military objectives! Why, then, should it be allowed to cling to the outworn administrative trappings of the past?

Surely there would be a gain in operating efficiency and unquestionably there would be substantial savings in salaries paid to civilian officials if the CCC were to be abolished. Activities and equipment worth salvaging could then be transferred to other agencies engaged in training war workers or taken over by the Army.

Which France?

There are plain signs that even the magnificent patience of Gen. de Gaulle has at last reached its limit. In his forthright speech at London on Wednesday he declared, almost in so many words, that the time has come for the United Nations, and for the United States in particular, to choose between his cause and that of Vichy. He pointed out what has long been obvious to everybody outside the State Department; namely, that "Free France has only one justification for being in the camp of freedom—that of being the true France and of being treated as such by her cobelligerents." With that he demanded for the Free French equal status with representatives of other European nations now under German occupation.

Gen. de Gaulle's point seems unanswerable in logic. There must be many Americans who share his bewilderment concerning a policy which continues "to lean toward men who have deprived France of all forms of liberty and are trying to model their regime on fascism or its caricature rather than trust true Frenchmen who are fighting even to the death against the totalitarian enemy." There can be little doubt that the reference here is to our own Department of State.

It may or may not be mere coincidence that Gen. de Gaulle's speech came almost simultaneously with the announcement of the resignation of Admiral Emile Muselier as commander of the Free French navy. Here in Washington rumors were at once set afoot, possibly by Axis propaganda agents, of serious dissension among the Free French command. One even had it that the admiral had been placed under arrest in London. All these rumors were promptly denied by Gen. de Gaulle, who stated that Muselier had been relieved at his own request. The request itself remains unexplained. But if it were permissible to speculate, one explanation might be the admiral's disgust over the extraordinary diplomatic hanky-panky which followed the admiral's Christmas Day coup at St. Pierre and Miquelon. It was on that occasion that Gen. de Gaulle and his associates were regarded in an official bulletin of our Department of State as "the so-called Free French."

And yet this contemptuous phrase—afterwards repudiated by Secretary Hull—pretty well describes the ambiguous position the Free French have occupied in the anti-Axis coalition since the armistice—except, of course, on those occasions when their help was urgently needed, as, for example, in Syria, Africa and the South Pacific islands. At other times its leaders seem to have been crowded as far as possible into the background. Why? No one can doubt that the Free French have rendered great and vital services in this war. Had there been no Free French movement, for example, the present American lifeline to Australia could not have been established.

We are prone, however, to forget that what Gen. de Gaulle and his associates are fighting for primarily is not the defense of Britain or America but for the liberation of France. It is illogical to ask such men indefinitely to subordinate their cause to our qualms about the French fleet. For they know that with every American concession to Vichy, this cause is compromised in the eyes of their countrymen and of the world.

More Man Power

All through the discussions on labor in wartime one fundamental problem has been overlooked. That is that sooner or later there will have to be a mobilization of industrial labor as well as of fighting men. Our great struggle is far more than a total war in which, as the President said, we are all belligerents. It is a war between industrial machines. And in this respect we have a great deal of leeway to make up, for our reverses are traceable in the final analysis to a failure adequately to mobilize our productive labor.

Accordingly it is not surprising that a M-day labor plan for labor is under consideration within the Administration. Sidney Hillman, labor director of the War Production Board, gave an outline of the plan on Thursday to the Senate Committee on Education and Labor. Whether the plan has yet received the Presidential blessing was not vouchsafed. An opportunity at least to mention it will be provided for Mr. Roosevelt on Tuesday at the A. F. of L.-C. I. O. joint rally at Pittsburgh. But if the organization has not been perfected by that time, an announcement cannot be much longer delayed. For our war industries must put eight million more employes to work before the end of the year if we are to attain the President's sights. That means that side by side with Mr. Nelson there must be an administrator—working with a central board and sub-boards throughout the country—who will assure a flow of industrial labor wherever it is needed.

Clearly the naming of the administrator who would exercise powers in the labor field almost analogous to those of Mr. Nelson over industry is crucial. Indeed, we suspect that a plan would have been announced before this time but for the President's quest for the right man. For the post there are many contenders. One is Paul V. McNutt, who could plead in his own behalf that, as head of the Employment Service, the job should naturally fall to him. But his is a claim which could be supported only on fortuitous grounds. As we have said several times before, a person does not become an ideal war administrator merely because his peace-time office happens to have been converted to war work. A much stronger claimant is the man who now reveals the scope of the mobilization plan, Sidney Hillman. But the trouble with Mr. Hillman is that his war service seems to have dimmed his prestige in the organized labor movement. Whoever is appointed must have the confidence of labor, since the task, to be done successfully, must call for the abridgment of union restrictions which at present retard the maximum utilization of our man power.

For instance, a labor mobilization plan requires the recruitment of women and Negroes into our factories, the smooth transfer of labor from plant to plant and from town to town, more upgrading of workers, over-all supervision of labor working in the war plants. How all these necessities can be squared with modern union practices is difficult to understand. There will have to be some abatement of those practices if we are to add to our labor force, make it mobile, and put it on new jobs expeditiously. Such a reconciliation, no doubt, cannot be effected without legislation. But the problem is so complicated, so dependent upon the good will of the workers, that even legislation would not dispense with the need of wisdom and understanding on the part of an administrator.

Farewell To Lords?

It used to be said that your true-blue Briton "dearly loves a lord." Apparently this is no longer so. Anyway, a report comes from London that the British government, under pressure of public opinion, is seriously considering a plan to abolish the whole House of Lords.

Nowadays, of course, this would make very little difference to government. For the lords three decades ago were deprived of virtually all legislative functions. The house has since been described as an exclusive club whose members are expected to maintain a certain academic interest in public affairs. Presumably the club under the proposed dispensation would be turned into a democratic but nevertheless high toned debating society chosen on some basis of competitive examination. A sort of House of Mandarins, as it were. The argument is that the debates in this transformed chamber, while quite as innocuous politically as the present debates in the House of Lords, would be on a higher intellectual plane—comparable to, say, that of a summer seminar at Columbia Teachers' College.

While it is not, strictly speaking, any business of ours what the British do with their Parliament, we cannot but deplore any such innovation. Intellect no doubt has its place in government. But so has ornament, and what is more ornamental than a British lord chancellor or a lord bishop or an elected Irish peer? We ought to have more of it in our country. It is not for us, of course, to criticize the founding fathers, but it seems to us there might be fewer of those jokes about the office of our Vice President if the Constitution had seen fit to provide him with a wig and woolsack.

Silver For Industry

The silver purchase program is again in the limelight. While the senselessness of the policy of purchasing silver at inflated prices, only to bury it in the ground, has long been apparent, efforts to repeal this foolish legislation have encountered the unyielding opposition of Congressmen and Senators from the silver-mining States. They have no mind to deprive their constituents of the subsidies resulting from Treasury purchases of domestic silver at grossly inflated prices. They have remained impervious to the repeated urgings of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Governor Eccles of the Reserve Board for repeal of the Silver Purchase Act.

Now the war has brought forth new and exceptionally strong arguments in favor of a change in policy. There is a rapidly rising demand for silver as a substitute for various scarce metals such as tin used in solder, copper, etc. And the Government possesses a vast silver hoard exceeding three billion ounces, most of which could be made immediately available for industrial use if it were not for restrictive legislation. Accordingly, those who oppose utilization of these idle silver reserves are not merely trying to perpetuate a discredited monetary policy which benefits only a few silver producers. They are actually obstructing our war effort. When the public awakens to that fact, the Congressional silver bloc may find its defenses swept away by a wave of popular indignation.

Spartan Virtues

Mr. Walter Lippmann's column of March 28 entitled "The Rebirth of a Nation" deserves an answer. We need today a great deal of patriotism and of willingness by all to sacrifice for victory and a bettter life for all in the future. Mr. Lippmann, essentially, was calling for such patriotism and sacrifice. But neither he nor anyone else will get it from the American people by moonshine, even when distilled in Mr. Lippmann's elegant phrases.

Mr. Lippmann assumes that all of us have gotten fat—materially and spiritually. This is not true of those of us toward the bottom of the economic ladder. American wage earners and small salaried people didn't really get much out of the great prosperity era—as they can testify and as statistics of real wages show. The farmer's depression began in 1921. We all went through the debacle of 1929-'33—and many people and groups never recovered from it. Those who did, achieved a measure of decency primarily as a result of New Deal policies which Mr. Lippmann would take away from those of us who never experienced the pleasant type of degeneration into fatness. The promise of a secure American standard of living will call forth more from us than will the false assumption that we need to be cleansed of the personal sins of "our betters."

I am amazed that Mr. Lippmann should address us in terms of the Spartan virtues. My impression has been that Mr. Hitler was their champion and that in fighting him we fight them. As Mr. Lippmann once knew there is another alternative to the Spartan virtues and the bourgeois vices: functioning democracy. Let me remind him of the words of a gentleman who beat the Spartans—one Pericles:

"The Spartans from their childhood are laboriously drilled to be brave; we are free to live as we please, but are no less ready to face the same dangers . . . We set no store on wealth except as a means to an end. We consider it essential that public men should be ordinary citizens and that every ordinary citizen should play a part in the life of the community; for we differ from other people by regarding those who take no part in public life not as 'quiet,' but useless. Our method of government is government by discussion, for we believe that failure in action is not caused by discussion, but by precipitate action not based on the knowledge that only discussion can give. The strongest hearted are those who, with the clearest vision of both the pleasant and unpleasant things in a situation, do not shrink from facing it. Finally, we have a standard of generosity peculiar to ourselves; we do good to our neighbors, not from calculations of self-interest, but from a fearless trust in freedom."

In this spirit—not in the spirit of the Spartan—Nazi "virtues"—the American people will do battle. A confidence that an abundant life for all, in things material and spiritual, awaits them, will create more fighting power than will sales taxes, labor conscription and high-toned talk of Spartan virtues.

Red Tape

In the April 2 issue of The Post appeared an article about a trailer made of salvaged junk containing a portable radio transmitter and receiving set made by boys of the South Charleston (W. Va.) NYA, being contributed to the District's civilian defense. The story states:

"Negotiations for the trailer were begun in January, but were delayed because the Civilian Defense legal division held the District could not accept an indefinite loan, and the NYA lawyers contended that the NYA could not make a gift. A compromise was worked out last week whereby the District has the machine definitely for the duration, but the title remains in West Virginia."

In other words it required little legal minds from 60 to 90 days to work out a solution to a simple technical problem. What a display of unnecessary delay and red tape, and how fortunate a desperate need for the trailer failed to arise while a battery of lawyers dawdled over the ownership of a license tag! The District's population seriously needs air raid shelter protection, but if this is a sample of what to expect, heaven help us!

District Public Health

Merlo J. Pusey's constructive analysis of local social welfare problems are decidedly helpful to those of us who, professionally, are seeking their solution. We have many sincere allies, but sincerity alone is insufficient. It needs sound data and philosophy before it goes to bat, if it is to do any worthwhile hitting. Such articles as that by Mr. Pusey appearing March 21, with its apt use of the "too little and too late" theme, furnish the needed complement. Accept our appreciation, not merely for this single contribution, but also for the many that have preceded it.

RAY H. EVERETT.
Washington, April 1.

The dissatisfaction expressed concerning the indifference toward financing good public health practices for the protection of Washington's population by Merlo Pusey in the March 31st Washington Post is most timely.

Certain forward-looking cities in this country have the facts and figures to demonstrate not only that "public health is purchasable" but that it is also a sound financial investment. It is to be noted, however, that the public officials in these cities in the development of their health department budgets are responsive to an informed public interest and they adhere to well-established scientific principles governing good public health procedure.

Protecting the public health is a complex and scientific job.

Adequate and economical public health protection for Washington cannot be obtained by over-simplifying and understating its requirements.

Neither vacillation, nor making decisions on health department budgets based on intuition rather than scientific principles, is compatible with sound public health procedure or the public welfare.

PAUL D. GUERNSEY.

Sixth Columnists

The "Sixth Columnists" so glibly spoken of by the Administration and in the advertisement of the American Federation of Labor which appeared in certain of the newspapers on March 30, are, in my opinion, mostly unorganized middle class people, for whom neither the Administration nor union labor cares a hoot, except when it comes to paying taxes, increased costs for food, clothing and homes, and shelling out promptly in the name of charity.

The advertisement in question attested that it was paid for by five million members of the federation, but I have my doubts that anyone of the lay members of that organization knew that it was even in the making. The American people paid for it, just as they are paying to maintain union leaders in mansions, yachts and vacations in Florida, and the increased costs of living and of war facilities, due to the unreasonable demands of organized labor and its unrestrained and Administration-backed acts, including highway robbery. Witness the New York truck drivers' performance just recently upheld by the New Deal Supreme Court.

"Sixth Columnists" are the direct result of the continued "boondoggling" on the part of the Administration, with its emergency after emergency brainstorms and misuse of the public funds over the past ten years. They are also the result of the unpunished criminal and near criminal acts of union labor, with a roof on everything except the Administration's squanderings and union wages.

The demands of the "Sixth Columnists," if such they be, are the result of an awakening of this middle class majority, who are beginning, in self-defense, to think over the state of affairs of the past ten years and going from bad to worse from day to day. They have been disillusioned by the fraudulent and hypercritical preelection condemnation of the Hoover regime (the 4 billion dollar cost of the Government, for instance) and the promises of better things that were never meant to be kept.

Yes, some of us want a new administration—an American administration, if you please, and a placing of restraint and responsibility on both big business and union labor. We are being called upon to give of our sons, our own services, and our money to conduct the war against foreign foes, and this we will and shall do, but we are not going to continue to pay through the nose to maintain boondoggles of the Administration, with its fads, fancies and crackpot ideas, nor the increases in the cost of living, homes, food, clothes, etc., being forced upon us by union labor. Put union labor in uniform and let the sacrifices be shared equitably between all.

As the great Lincoln said: "You can fool all of the people some of the time; some of the people all of the time; but not all of the people all of the time." Let us have a restoration of the Government of our founders—of the people, for the people, and by the people, collectively, one for all and all for one.

Convert Mellett's Building

May I suggest that the new Mellett Building now under construction, would be an ideal spot for an emergency hospital. Due to the shortage here of hospitals and the likelihood of an epidemic to say nothing of an air-raid, this is a golden opportunity to "beg" for this "Information Bureau" and have something we actually need.

The Post Impressionist

Stamp Acts

People nowadays are taking their defense stamps seriously, and of course they should, but this was not entirely true during the last war. Then, people purchased defense stamps (or thrift stamps as they were called in those days) with the same air of indulgent abandon as they bought kisses from beautiful girls at a society benefit. It was all for the cause. Nobody thought much about the stamps afterwards.

Everybody at our house had a book for thrift stamps. But we didn't worry about them. We just took them for granted, like sulphur and cream of tartar in the spring. When mother completed her first book she discovered that it was exactly the right thickness to slip under the short leg of the china closet. This piece of dining room equipment had been uneven for years, and nothing had ever seemed to level it. The thrift stamps were just the thing, and mother was as pleased as could be to have the cabinet steady and secure at last, and to be able to get down a cup without the accompanying rattle of many dishes. I think probably the stamps are still there, but she has long since forgotten them.

I don't know what father did with his books. He had several, and pasted them up regularly each Sunday morning. He used to keep his in a stack, with a rubber band around them, in the top drawer of the library table. Whenever he won a case in court he would bring home a sheet of stamps as a kind of family celebration. During Christmas week he won a particularly important case and brought home a sheet of 100 stamps, of the $5 variety. Earlier in the day mother had told Goodie, the cook, that she might have the Tuberculosis seals which came in the morning's mail, to trim her Christmas cards. Goodie sent out her cards that evening with father's thrift stamps generously sprinkled fore and aft. He could never bring himself to scold her about it (father's heart is as soft as a bowl of Goodie's hominy grits), but the next day he moved his stamp books to his bureau drawer, and no one ever saw them again. Not even father.

It was a little more difficult for us children to feel the surge of patriotic zeal which our parents tried to instill into us. Father gave us each a quarter every Saturday to purchase stamps, and we always intended to do so. We generally bought them at the postoffice substation in our neighborhood, which was unfortunately situated next to the corner drug store. During the winter months we were fairly good about doing our share for Uncle Sam, but throughout the summer there was many a vacant space in our stamp books which should rightly have been labeled "ice cream soda," or "four bags of jelly beans and a package of licorice sticks."

I think I had filled out all but the last page of my book when my assets were suddenly liquidated. I had gone down to the postoffice one Saturday morning, bought my stamp, and settled myself at a table on the side porch for the serious ceremony of mounting it. About that time our old white goat, Norah, came snooping around and spied the bright colored book. In two seconds Norah had gobbled up the book and chased it with half a bag of jawbreakers. My morale was shattered. I never saved another stamp.

Norah wasn't at all well the next day, and father said that he had often heard of success turning people's heads, but this was the first time he had known of thrift turning anyone's stomach. Mother thought that was a pretty dull joke, but we liked it.

Sister swapped her whole book to George Mason, who lived up the street, for a German helmet that a soldier brought him. George didn't like helmets. He liked guns. He had wanted a Luger pistol and wouldn't settle for anything else. Father said sister was a pretty good trader, but I never liked the thing. I used to wake up at night and see its terrible spike sticking up in the dark, and bury my head under the pillow. Sister was older and braver than I, and she liked to keep it sitting on the post at the foot of the bed to prove that she wasn't scared of anything. I was scared and didn't care who knew it!

Brother's stamps were always all over the house. He never got around to mounting them. There were usually two or three in each of his pockets, and they were constantly falling out of his schoolbooks. Once when he brought home his report card father couldn't tell a thing about his grades because nearly every one of them was stuck up with thrift stamps. In attempting to remove them, father also removed the figures from the grades column. Brother appeared to be distressed by the situation, but I saw the way father looked at mother, and how he put his tongue in his cheek when he signed his name below the line which said, "I have read the above report and found it satisfactory."

Aunt Tolly was always starting a book and then losing it. She would get a new book about once a month, mount a few stamps in it every day or so, then suddenly it would disappear. Once or twice we found that one had slipped into the crevices of an arm chair, or fallen down behind the sideboard, but more often than not they simply vanished, never to be seen again. Aunt Tolly was so extremely tidy about everything else that we felt she must be putting them somewhere for safekeeping and forgetting where. Father always said that Aunt Tolly did away with more defense stamps than Catherine the Great did lovers. But Aunt Tolly said that making fun of thrift stamps was downright indecent, like swearing on Sunday, or voting for Teddy Roosevelt.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Ay, There's The Rub

ALTHOUGH it is very necessary to take large views of the strategy and the objectives of the war as a whole, the acid test is applied when men have to make specific practical decisions to act.

LIPPMANN

We all deplore wishful thinking and insist on realistic thinking. The vital difference is that wishful thinking is concerned with what is desirable whereas realistic thinking is concerned with what human beings can manage to do with the materials that they command.

FOR THAT REASON, the paramount American problem in this phase of the war is how to promote practical decisions in Washington, how to get the men selected who can best make the practical decisions, how to remove the obstructions to effective administration. This is not the glamorous aspect of the war. Indeed it is tedious and intricate, and, since it often involves the criticism of loyal and likable men, it is a disagreeable and invidious business. But it is the most important aspect for us at this moment. For there is nothing the matter with our grand strategy and our general objectives. There is nothing that the people are not now willing to do if they believe it will contribute to the war. But it is a fact that although by any standard of comparison, that of any other country in this war or of our own country in any other war, the results achieved in the same time are gigantic, the results are still short of what they must and can be.

The results are short because in some cases the responsible men are inadequate, and in more cases the methods of reaching decisions and carrying them out. What we who are here at home can do for Wainwright, MacArthur, Wavell, Chiang Kai-shek, what American power can do in Russia, the Middle East, Western Europe, and in the Atlantic, turns upon how effectively the Nation can be mobilized from Washington.

CONCRETE CASES, it seems to me, reveal more sharply than a general argument where the real difficulties lie, and how they can be overcome. Let us take the question of providing gas masks for civilians living in regions which may be bombed. Congress has appropriated money applicable for civilian gas masks and the Office of Civilian Defense is charged with deciding how to distribute them. This seems simple enough. But in fact it presents a very difficult and, as it happens, a fairly typical problem in war administration.

For the manufacture of enough gas masks for all the civilians who might be bombed is an enormous undertaking. Probably it can be carried out only by depriving the fighting forces of equipment they need. Moreover, there are experts in gas warfare who say that a gas mask offers protection only if it is put on correctly within one minute after poison gas is in the air. Now it is highly probable that if gas is used, it will be in a surprise raid. This means that the wearers of gas masks must be as well trained as disciplined troops—trained to carry their masks, trained not to damage them or lose them, trained to put them on quickly, trained to respond immediately to signals and commands.

The question, then, is whether men, women and children can be trained, assuming the masks are manufactured. For if the civilians are not trained properly, not only will the materials have been wasted but the civilians will have been given a false sense of security that might, in an emergency, lead to panic. Yet it is equally true, and this shows how hard is the decision, that if no gas masks are provided for civilians, the enemy may be specially tempted to use gas just in order to make the people feel that the Government refused to give them protection.

CLEARLY, in a matter of this sort the easier decision for an official to make is to provide the gas masks. Then if gas is used, he at least will not be blamed. Even if, as might well be the case, the masks were no protection because the people had not been trained to use them, the official could point to the gas masks to show that he did his duty. It would not be quite true, because in fact masks without the training are a kind of fraud. But that crucial consideration would not be an easy one for the official to make clear to every one.

All this is not intended to lead up to a solution of the gas mask problem but to a suggestion as to how problems of this kind could be handled. Dean Landis ought not, as head of the OCD, make the decision on his own personal judgment. He would do much better if he asked a commission consisting of an Army officer who knows chemical warfare, one or two scientists selected by the National Academy of Sciences, and a representative of the War Production Board to make the decision, and to state publicly the reasons for the decision. If the decision is for civilian gas masks, then we shall know from the commission what kind of civilian training is required. If the decision is against the gas masks, the civilians will know why.

Boards and commissions are bad for action but for decisions on a general policy, especially when the question is both technical and popular, a disinterested commission is far better than a hurried and nervous officeholder. We have suffered a great deal from boards where there ought to be a single chief executive. But we suffer also when an executive officer has to decide a question of policy that would better be based on the findings of a board of experts. The gas masks are one example. The rubber problem is another. The case of the Sea Otter ships, which poses the question of inventions, is still another.

IN ALL these cases we have had the views of officeholders, politicians, Congressional committees, laymen, business interests. What we have not had is an inquiry which led to a finding of facts and recommendations by men who were at once disinterested and expertly qualified. There is a vacuum here, and in this vacuum there are generated the controversies which delay action and confuse the public mind. There is generated also the nervous affliction which was described by one witty and highly competent official in Washington as "galloping frustration."

The vacuum exists because we have not learned sufficiently to call in, before decisions are taken and at the point where they can be of the greatest use, scholarly and scientific men. Yet in any total effort, as Fortune magazine makes so vividly clear in its current issue, scientifically trained men have a part to fill which no one else, no soldier, no statesman, no businessman—can fill.

Md. Dual Highway Completion Seen

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hagerstown, Md., April 3.—City and county officials here, who have been urging completion of the Hagerstown-Frederick dual highway this year, have been informed that the proposed project has been approved by the Third Corps Area of the Army as a defense highway and that in all probability the remaining 17 miles of the highway will be completed this year.

It was also learned that the State roads commission is negotiating with Federal officials for the allocation of funds for that section of the highway from Myersville to a point west of Frederick, where the new highway intersects Route 40. Funds already have been allocated for the 7-mile section to Myersville from here.

The base of the highway and 3 miles of concrete highway have been completed for several years. Under the present plans a 22-foot concrete lane would be completed the remainder of the distance.

ABC Railroads

By Frank Henius

Expedite War Shipments

THE QUITE extensive railroad systems of South America are to a very great extent controlled by foreign, mostly British capital, although quite a number of adjustments and reversals of control and ownership have occurred since the war, when some of these European holdings were thus set free for purchase of necessary war materials and creation of the balances needed for that purpose. Britain led in this exchange of such assets, and the British generally held the major share in South American railway corporations, both as bond and stock owners.

As a matter of fact, it is really astonishing how many of the Argentinian railways, for example, had their headquarters and their directing offices in England, and again how many of the various railway administrations and therefore financial controls were interlocked. For example, the Buenos Aires & Pacific Railway Co., about 2800 miles long, includes the 1450 miles of the Argentine Great Western and the Villa Maria and Rufino roads. These as well as the following had headquarters in the City of London: The North Eastern (753 miles), the Transandine (as its name implies, the connecting link across the Andes between the Argentine and Chilean railway systems, forming the transcontinental route between Buenos Aires and Valparaiso or Santiago). The Buenos Aires Great Southern Railway (5082 miles) also works the only 109-mile-long Ensenada and South Coast Co. as well as the 784 miles of Bahia Blanca & Northwestern. London further managed the 322 miles of the Midland Railway, the 1930 miles of the Western, the 3442 miles of the Central Argentine Railway, whose suburban lines are electrified, as well as the 810 miles of the Entre Rios Co. The latter connects the province of the same name with Buenos Aires and with the northeastern part of the republic at Concordia, whence in turn it establishes the rail contact with Paraguay. The short (292 miles) Buenos Aires Central, going from that city to Zarate and 4 de Febrero, and the still shorter Correntino (155 miles), however, are controlled from Argentina. As the name implies, the Compagnie Francaise des Chemins de Fer de la Province de Santa Fe, 1188 miles of rail in the province of that name (Santa Fe) had its offices in Paris, at least up to the outbreak of the war. The government on the other hand, holds the reins for many and widely distributed lines, such as the Central Norte, with 4843 miles, north and west of Santa Fe and connecting with the Bolivian rail system; 657 miles of the San Antonio-Bariloche, and railways running through the following provinces of the immense country: Formosa Province (186 miles), Santa Cruz Province (178), Chubut Province (130), Santa Fe (a small supplementary line of 35 miles), and 34 miles only in Buenos Aires Province. In Chubut Province the National Government Lines have two roads; totaling 167 miles. Lastly, the extensive national net is further supplemented by two Bunos Aires provincial government roads, one of 345 and one of 790 miles, both starting from La Plata while a small private road, of 513 miles, indicates its purpose by its name: The Rosario to Puerto Belgrano Co.

BRAZIL, that huge South American republic, besides 20 minor railways, has a huge net, which also is partially British owned. Those with headquarters in London, England, are the short Mogyana, in the southern part of Minas Geraes; the more important 1092 miles of the Great Western; the short Leopoldina in the states of Rio de Janeiro, Minas Geraes and Espirito Santo; further the Paulista Railway, in the interior of the state of Sao Paulo and the San Paulo, totaling a little more than 150 miles, which serves the most important coffee-producing districts from Santos, via Sao Paulo, just as the state of Bahia, South Western, British controlled, is intended to handle the cocoa-producing area freight from the valley of the Rio de Contas. Both are important to us in our war effort, just as all these roads are most vital to the expediency and efficiency of the exports of Brazilian products. The formerly foreign-owned Madeira-Marmore Railway is reportedly already handed over to the government, which in the Portuguese-speaking republic controls vast mileages: the Central, from Rio de Janeiro to Sao Paulo, and suburban lines. This latter is now being electrified with the help of our Export-Import Bank loans. All of this will benefit us as well as the Brazilians and their neighbors eventually, for more and better railways mean more and better and quicker shipments and service. The raw materials and products which we will need for our war effort from all parts of the huge Brazilian territory will utilize every mile of road which can serve this purpose. Therefore, we can be glad and should fully appreciate that the British have done much, however indirectly, to benefit us as well as themselves by making some of this steel-born traffic possible. The Noro Este (Northeast) Railway, to the Paraguay River, and the Rede Este, to Central Bahia from Sao Felix, are also federal. In a country where the rights of the states, individually, are as recognized and as powerful as in Brazil, it is only natural that the states govern some of the railway systems which run through their territories. Thus we have the Rio Grande do Sul, the Sul-Mineira, the Sao Paulo and Rio Grande, the Sorocabana, the two roads in the state of Ceara, all controlled by their respective states.

Chile, the third of the A B C countries, has only six roads, running through that longstretched country, which parallels the Pacific to the southermost tip of our hemisphere. Of these, too, four have offices in London: the 1845 miles long Antofagasta and Bolivia Railway Co., which connects the nitrate ports of Antofagasta and Mejillones with the principal towns of Bolivia, operating under leases the lines of the Bolivia and the Aguas Blancas Railways. Then there is the Chilean end of the Transandine, to the Argentine frontier, and the Nitrate Railways company, true to its name connecting Tarapaca and the nitrate ports of Iquique and Pisagua, just as the Taltal Railway, with only 164 miles, connects the port of Taltal with Cachinal. But in addition to these roads, there is the so-called Inter-National, which runs partly in Bolivia and connects La Paz with Arica, further the Chilean State Railway line. This has its headquarters at Santiago and from that city 3100 miles of steel radiate longitudinally to Iquique and south to Calera, centrally to Valparaiso, Santiago and its branch lines, which are all electrified, and south also to Puerto Montt and the various side lines served from this main artery.

This more or less complete railway line through the three principal republics of South America is today of the greatest strategic importance to us and our allies. Few of our citizens, except those who through travel and other direct needs or requirements became acquainted with them, know of their importance and the strong British influence on their capitalistic and managerial structures. But today they mean much to our war effort, for with their help we will be able to actually get the raw materials and products from the interiors of these three mighty countries to their coastal shipping points. Thus the existence of these steel roads through Argentina, Brazil and Chile and all that has been done for their construction and development by the citizens of these countries as well as foreign capital and enterprise, will benefit us just as much as the latest extensions and renewals of or additions to equipment which were made with our help, our machinery, our supplies and our loans.

Cripps' Plan For India

By Eric Estorick

British Imperialism Ends In India

REGARDLESS of misapprehensions which may continue to prevail in circles friendly or inimical to Indian independence, Sir Stafford Cripps' proposals mark the end of traditional British imperialism in Asia and the culmination of Ghandi's life-long fight for Indian freedom.

Cripps' proposals may be subject to minor changes; the essential criticisms which followed the publication of his plan were directed less to specific codicils than to Britain's good will and intentions concerning Indian representation on the war council and the setting of a date to mark the beginning of India's new status. This latter point is specially relevant in view of the numerous Allied postwar plans which may delay the signing of a peace treaty for an indefinite period after the "end" of the war.

As it stands, in essence, Cripps' plan should be accepted by the people of India, for the advantages far outweigh the disadvantages.

ON THE POSITIVE side, an acceptance of the plan has five major advantages. First, it will swing India freely into the war without any reluctance or hesitation and immediately generate a common sense of purpose among all the varied groups, and may easily foster a spirit of unity which will help India in eventually becoming a united nation. If this does happen then India will have achieved unity in much less time than other nations have in the past. Second, India will gain tremendous prestige, and win the moral support of the United Nations who definitely feel that in spite of all previous internecine objections, the Indian Nationalist Congress, for example, is willing to compromise and thus contribute to the common fight against fascism everywhere. Third, the rejection of the plan at this time will accelerate the differences among the various Indian groups and each one will maneuver and jockey for position at present and in the post-war period. The effect of this will be to perpetuate the old system of imperialistic divide-and-rule. Fourth, all the energies which have hitherto been spent in opposition will be channelized for a constructive purpose. It will give the young people who have spent their energy in political opposition an opportunity to learn the art of fighting. Fifth, if the plan is rejected, Japan will strive to create a puppet provincial government in India. While this idea is abhorrent to most of the Indian political groups many people in India would accept it. This move by Nippon can be counteracted only by a unified Indian front.

The shortcomings of the plan are threefold. First, the Cripps proposals which declare that any province can stay out of the federation if it so chooses are an indirect recognition of Ali Jinnah's plan of dividing India along religious lines. In actual practice this will be overcome; no province will be able to stay out of the federation. Jinnah, leader of the Moslem League, claims the fealty of four provinces, Punjab, Bengal, Sindh and the Northwest Frontier. In Punjab, 53 per cent of the population is Moslem, 37 per cent Hindu and 12 per cent Sikh. Its four million Sikhs, strongly nationalist, would rather die than see Punjab out of any contemplated Indian federation. It is perfectly obvious that the Hindus and Sikhs would work out a working relationship which could provide effective pressure upon the Moslems, while recognizing Moslem numerical superiority. The Hindus and Sikhs could effectively demand Punjab's entrance into federation. In Bengal, Prime Minister Fazal Hug, a Moslem, does not see eye to eye with Jinnah. The Hindu minority in Bengal also happens to be the most militant and revolutionary in all India, and once before, in 1907, it fought Curzon's plan to partition Bengal along religious lines. In the third province, Sindh, the prime minister, Allah Kaksh, is a Moslem and a member of the Indian Nationalist Congress which so bitterly opposes the Jinnah Pakistan (division) plan. Baksh has never supported Jinnah. The Northwest Frontier, which is 92 per cent Moslem, also has a prime minister who is a member of the Indian Nationalist Congress, and is led by the younger brother of Abdul Gafar Kahn who is referred to as the Frontier Ghandi. Thus, it can be seen that while Cripps' proposals give theoretical recognition to Jinnah's plan there is little possibility that this plan will ever win sufficient support to endanger Indian unity. This is in no sense a betrayal of Ali Jinnah. Indeed, it puts the gentleman, and his alleged power, in a position where it can be tested by the democratic process.

THE SECOND shortcoming, concerning the Indian princes, is perhaps the most vital of all. The princes, who control approximately one-third of India, may also, according to the proposals, stay out of the Indian federation. Since the national feeling in the Indian states is not as acute as in British India, the princes will have, therefore, a better chance of staying out of federation if they so desire. That privilege may be a serious stumbling block to the general plan since pressure will not be as great on Indian states to join the federation as in the provinces. In case of a constituent assembly at the end of the war, two types of representation, inimical to the democratic process, may occur. The plan provides for elected members of provinces to come to the constituent assembly, but in the case of the princes it says that they may be represented. Thus, two types of representation, one elected, and the other nominated, may result. Any government which is two-thirds elected and one-third appointed will not work well—there will be a constant opposition, a nondemocratic cancer gnawing at the core of the assembly. On the other hand, nationalist agitation in the princely states is growing all the time, and if the present plan is accepted nationalists will from now on constantly interfere with the autocratic rulers of the various states. That might force the Indian princes to set up some kind of representative government in their areas.

The third shortcoming of Cripps' proposals—and the one which is arousing the brunt of opposition—is that it does not give control of the military to India. Since rumors are current that an Indian leader—possibly Nehru—may sit in the British war cabinet, that problem may be close to solution.

The success or failure of Cripps' mission, however, depends upon, first, how much unity the Indian elements can generate during the war which can be carried over to the postwar period to sustain a unified central government, and, second, how far the British are prepared to back up the progressive forces of India after the war rather than take advantage of any disunity which may prevail in India at that time.

The great question in the minds of Indian leaders is how far is the Cripps plan an exigency of war—how far does it represent a real willingness on the part of the British people to relinquish power in India and help the Indian people. India, on the other hand, will have to give a reasonable guarantee to protect British interests which it has recognized as legitimate.

IF THE CRIPPS plan is accepted India will have a form of government which England might have had in this country had it followed Burke's plan. Cripps' proposals reverse the process where formerly the central government delegated power to the provinces, on the model of the Canadian system, to a new form on the model of the American Constitution, where the component units will delegate power to the central body.

The Cripps plan, if effective, furnishes the cornerstone of a new world economic and political order whereby a subject nation, without bloodshed, is called upon to collaborate on a basis of equality, Britain and India are called upon to forget the bloody legacy of the past—without that, any plan, no matter how far reaching, is doomed to failure.

Fair Enough

Union Tyranny

EVERY NOW and again Mrs. Roosevelt flies a kite to test the wind or get us ready for something new. A few weeks ago Mrs. Roosevelt dropped a hint in her column which has been on my mind ever since.

"We had some very interesting discussions Sunday afternoon in the White House on the subject of what the general attitude of the people should be during this war period," Mrs. Roosevelt wrote. "I've come to one very clear decision, namely, that all of us, men and women in the services and men and women at home, should be drafted and told what is the job we are to do. The only way I can see to get the maximum service out of our citizens is to draft us all and to tell us where we can be most useful and where our work is needed."

Now surely this is not mere irresponsible babble like that of a child who drinks in the dinner chat of the family and then goes next door to blab to the neighbors what mamma and papa said about them. So I take this to be a preliminary presentation of a serious proposal.

But, assuming that such conscription of civilians does come, will each of us so drafted be compelled to join one or more of the unions and, in the jurisdiction of the A. F. of L. pay initiation fees of from $19 to $3000 for the privilege of serving under compulsion, plus special assessments, dues and other fees?

There is no reason to think otherwise because the Government for which Mrs. Roosevelt speaks with the feed-box authority of one who sells for personal profit "very interesting discussions" which take place in the privacy of the national palace, has bitterly fought those elected representatives of the people who have tried to adopt laws to protect the people from the bosses of the unions.

On the day of Pearl Harbor an arbiter appointed by the President deliever a decision which compelled a minority of coal miners in a certain area to join John L. Lewis' union, thus denying these men the right to be represented by bargaining agents selected by their own free choice. This is the same union from which Mrs. Roosevelt's Administration eagerly accepted a great contribution or loan of money in the 1936 campaign, well knowing that the rank and file members had not been consulted.

Now, I realize that the President has made a mess of union relations and that an abrupt reform which took the form of a hostile repudiation of his leadership in this field would harm us all and hearten the enemy. But, obviously, we cannot drift into total conscription without adopting guarantees that such conscripts would be subject to no authority but that of our lawful Government. In the lack of such guarantees, a man drafted to drive a truck, for example, and refusing to join the teamsters' union, would be a slacker and a candidate for a concentration camp or prison.

The need of such reforms was great before the war began, for the right of the people to work at lawful civilian occupations in time of peace was being flouted by the unions and with the encouragement of the Government, including the Supreme Court. But the whole people were not aware of the situation and it took some time to educate them and Congress. Now, however, they know and Mrs. Roosevelt had better realize that they will never accept conscription for work as a patriotic duty, subject to union taxing powers and the intrusion of union bosses, most of them ignorant, cruel men and women, into their private affairs.

I, too, but with some reluctance, am inclining to the idea that this will be a very long war, that it will be necessary to draft, or anyway, to compel labor eventually, and that it were better to anticipate this situation than to be too late, as our side has been so many times in this war. Way back in January, New Zealand, ordinarily a very free country, authorized the minister of national service to draft any person for work in defense industries and our danger is no less than hers in the presence of the same enemies, although hers is closer geographically.

But I doubt that in New Zealand the government permits racketeers and political padrones to bully and actually rob the workers of millions of dollars and throw their money into the political funds of candidates whom the individuals may oppose. Unioneers from the British countries who visit the United States are amazed and incredulous when they read and hear of the corruption of the union racket here, but Mrs. Roosevelt's Government is responsible for that corruption and the political exploitation of captive workers because it has fought every reform and the reformers, too.

Canadian Draft Act

By Janet R. Keith

A Broad And Flexible Measure

NO CANADIAN can call the government's new selective service program half-hearted. It is truly a bloodless revolution; it is the most sweeping change ever introduced into Canadian life by any Parliament. Announced quietly with no fanfare or shouting, it will affect drastically every home and every business in the country. Without taking the final step of conscription for overseas service, it almost insures that every man and every woman will be absorbed into a maximum war effort.

The principle underlying the new regulations is the "negative compulsion of restriction," meaning that Canadians will be compelled to get into war jobs because they won't be allowed to do anything else.

Young men between the ages of 21 and 30 are the class most directly affected. If they were unmarried or childless widowers in the summer of 1940, they are likely to be called up for four months' military training. After training they can be posted to any place within Canada or the territorial waters thereof "as the Minister of National Defense shall from time to time require."

Previously young Canadians between 21 and 24 years were liable for compulsory military service. The new ruling extends the age limit to 30, and also provides for a lottery system. All available men up to the age of 30 will be grouped together for lottery purposes. Instead of lots being drawn on a national scale, as they are in Washington, it is expected that a board in each military district will be responsible for raising a certain number of men.

But the most drastic regulation of the new plan makes it virtually impossible for any man between 17 and 45 to get a job in a non-war occupation. If a man has a job now he can stay where he is for the time being. But if he gives up his job he can either go into munitions factories or into the armed forces. Before long this ruling will leave a tremendous number of vacant civilian positions which will have to be filled by women or old men. It is too soon yet for Canada to realize the far-reaching consequences of this regulation. Managers of every type of business, from taxi stands to funeral parlors, from bakeries to laundries, will soon be smack up against the problem of trying to carry on without hiring any man between 17 and 45 years of age, unless he has a certificate of discharge or rejection from the armed forces, or a special permit for employment signed by a national selective service officer.

There will be appeal boards set up across the country to hear objections from individuals, companies, and government departments. It is inevitable that there will be dozens of complaints, hardships and minor injustices. But the basic principle is right. The government is dealing vigorously and courageously with the biggest problem in the war effort, and most Canadians are just in the mood to get behind vigorous action of any kind.

Canadian women are coming into their own as the country's most valuable source of "man power."

Farmers should be satisfied with the new plan. For months they have been complaining that their sons and their hired help were being drafted into the reserve army. From now on no farmer, farmer's son, or essential agricultural worker can be called for compulsory military service. He may leave the farm to enter the armed forces if he wishes, but he can't leave to go into any other work except seasonal employment in basic industries like lumbering and fishing.

Professional technicians may be moved by the government from non-essential to essential industries. Employers of such men are obliged to let them go and to reinstate them after the war. Later this ruling may be extended to all skilled workmen. Organized labor is ready to cooperate in this scheme, although labor officials feel that the plan doesn't allow for sufficient consultation between labor and government. They also point out that there is no guarantee that women replacing men will receive the same wages as the men were paid.

As director of national selective service the government has appointed E. M. Little, 42-year-old industrial engineer and personnel expert. His department will have the power to compel employers and government departments to give exact information on numbers employed, wage rates and working conditions. By April 1, a complete report from every Canadian employer will be in the hands of the selective service commission. After that things should start to happen fast.

The armed forces are pleased about a further regulation. Men and women previously rejected for military service will be given free medical care if they guarantee to enlist as soon as they are eligible. But there is still one big question mark. How will the army get the 100,000 men it needs this year, the air force 80,000 men, the navy 13,000 men? A lot depends on the coming plebiscite, which will ask the Canadian people whether they are willing to see conscription for overseas service introduced. If the people vote "yes" the new draft by lottery will supply the armed services with all the men they need. If the people vote "no" there may still be a man power problem in Canada.

LANSBURGH'S DEPARTMENT STORE HAS CONVERTED THESE DELIVERY TRUCKS INTO AMBULANCES. VOLUNTEERS STAND BY

Department Store Trucks Converted Into Ambulances

In these days when instances of complacency are blared about, it is good to find a clear-cut example of "mobilization on the home front."

This is the case of several Washington stores which at their own expense have equipped their delivery trucks with materials by which they can be converted readily into ambulances.

That's something for which this city may be deeply thankful some day—if an air raid comes, for example.

The matter of conversion has been so systematized that a truck which delivers silk stockings and knickknack shelves can in the space of four minutes be ready to deliver wounded human beings to hospitals.

Each ambulance will have a driver and two volunteers from either the Red Cross or the American Women's Voluntary Services.

In addition to about 25 truck-ambulances, some 50 more trucks will be made available by city stores and other groups for "property" transportation purposes.

Army Takes Over Swank Miami Hotels

Fashion Authorities Give Views on Their Favorite Ensembles

The weekly Fashion Forum, usually appearing at this time, will be resumed next Saturday. Write Miss Driscoll about your personal style problems.

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor

THE EASTER girl of 1942—how should she look? In order to get an idealized preview of the Easter fashion parade, this question was posed to experts on women's wear, including a few of those on Connecticut Avenue, the main scene of the Easter parade.

Jane Driscoll

Some of these fashion authorities see Miss or Mrs. Easter as a trim suited model and others as a picture of perfection in a sprightly print dress with a dark coat. Here are a few of the ideal Easter ensembles as outlined to The Post Fashion Editor in response to the question: "For what type of Easter outfit would you vote?"

Alfred Pasternak says: "The softly tailored suit, which has been a tradition with our house, is important this season when women want to look as feminine as possible. It is not severe or harsh, but deftly draped to the figure." He pointed out that suits are being done in a new way this spring, and that is why we do not mind seeing a woman in a suit. She no longer looks as if she had on a uniform.

Major Role for Accessories

Accessories play a major part in keeping that feminine appearance, believes Mr. Pasternak. He thinks a frilly and fragile chapeau—but not a foolish one—softens a woman's appearance in a tailored suit and gives a man a lift. "A woman used to depend on a classic hat to keep her tailored suit tailored, and now she goes to feminine hats to soften her softly tailored suit," he said. If a woman wants to look pretty, this expert thinks there is nothing more feminine looking than a frilly lingerie trimmed jabot blouse.

Mme. Rosa Reiss says: "From a style standpoint we have to dress according to the weather in Washington. On a day like this one (sunshiny with a mildly crisp spring breeze) a bright print dress under a dark lined coat is right. The print looks cheerful when you take your coat off in church."

With the print dress and dark coat, Mme. Reiss believes in a stunning handkerchief felt hat—very soft and thin. "Felt, rather than straw, is more flattering to the face. I prefer big brimmed straws later on for wear with large prints and chiffons. Even a silly flower laden hat is right for Easter; in fact, a woman needs a whole hat wardrobe this spring." Mme. Reiss suggests that accessories be coordinated in color, however, and a good way to choose them is to match the hat, bag and gloves to a basic color in the print. She likes matching shoes too, when possible—or, they may be dark like the coat.

Miss Cole's View

Miss Gretchen Cole says: "I think there is nothing smarter than a fine all-wool gabardine suit, hand-stitched. Beige is a good color with a white blouse." Miss Cole suggests that the hat be matching color gabardine, trimmed with white flowers—or any other style that is feminine and decorative. She also likes beige doeskin gloves and snakeskin or antiqued alligator shoes. "The suit should be plain and tailored," she explained, "but soft in design in a two or three-piece version."

Besides the popular print dresses, coats and suits, recent statistics from local department stores show that these also will be seen in the Easter parade: redingotes, simply tailored with V neckline effects; soft one-piece dresses, both with gored and pleated skirt; jacket dresses with braid trim—jackets fitted in below-the-hip length, and jacket-dresses with white, color, or print at the neckline. Jacket dresses are also selling in button-down-the-front styles and strictly tailored versions. While navy is the most popular color, aqua, dusty rose, pastels and black are also right.

Trim But Feminine Is the Marching Order of This Year's Easter Parade

THE TAILORED SUIT—This type suit in beige is the ideal Easter costume, according to one local fashion expert. Actress Ellen Drew models it here in an all-rayon fabric resembling wool gabardine. She selected it for her personal trousseau

THE LIGHT COAT — Appearing in the Easter parade and late into summer will be coats like this soft yellow wool topcoat with a cashmere finish. Actress Elizabeth Fraser wears it here with a collarless neckline and gay costume jewelry

THE DARK COAT—A print dress under a dark coat is the right choice for Washington weather in one authority's estimation. This wool crepe coat hews to the color scheme in dark coffee bean brown or other rich coffee colors

THE SPRING PLAID—Pastel plaids will be the selection of many a chic woman who wants a little variety. This one is blue and beige wool with notched patch pockets. It is worn with a blue wool topcoat and lynx-dyed fox collar

Beauty, Fitness Go Together, Chorines Find

By Ida Jean Kain

IF THIS were an "advice to the 'teen age" column, I couldn't think of better examples to cite than the beautiful young girls forming the chorus of some of the outstanding Broadway shows.

They don't have to be told there is no percentage in gadding about to too many parties, staying up until all hours, or, generally speaking, trying to be the life of your particular gang. That, they tell me, is the way to last about a year in the highly competitive show business.

Purely from the standpoint of self-preservation, they follow the same rules your mother suggests to you: Plenty of sleep, a good diet, and the outdoor activities which make for the fresh type of beauty that is demanded of showgirls and models.

Mary Haworth's Mail
is not appearing today as Miss Haworth has been called out of town. It will be resumed Tuesday.

Sensible Beauty Rules

One of the most beautiful and ambitious of these youngsters is Helene Hudson, a Hazelton, Pa., girl, who, according to the average stage-struck viewpoint, has already achieved success. She not only has an enviable part in the musical "Banjo Eyes," but is one of the most popular models in Manhattan.

Although she earns her bread and butter dancing and modeling, Helene is determined to win fame as a dramatic actress and is waiting for a break. "I don't mind the wait," she told me, "because I am learning something all the time. When my break comes, I'll be able to do much better."

All her spare time is spent in studying singing and in dramatic work. And, no matter what your bent may be, Helene said tell you that voice makes a big difference and not to let the way you speak be a handicap.

"Anyone can learn a lot about acquiring a pleasant speaking voice simply by listening to the radio. But there is one point I have learned about singing that would apply to speaking: Most people think singing has to be forced and they tense their throat muscles. The muscles that should be tensed are those of the hips and legs. The tummy should be pulled up. But shoulders, chest and throat muscles should all be relaxed."

Breath Control Exercise

Her favorite exercise for breath control is this: Stand with hands on hips, pull stomach up and straighten the back, and fill your lungs to capacity with air. As you do this, expand both the diaphragm and the ribs in back. If you are unused to oxygen in large doses, limit yourself to about 10 counts at the beginning. Gradually increase to 50 counts.

It's almost unnecessary to add that she follows a set of calisthenics to keep her figure trim and slim in the middle. A lovely figure is one of the requirements for any model and it pays, literally, to take calisthenics.

To come back to the moral of this article: She gets from 8 to 10 hours' sleep a night, drinks her quart of milk a day without having to be reminded, and eats plenty of fruits and vegetables. As a result, she never misses a day's work—and that is important to any boss, whether or not he is a producer.

Paint Gay, Amusing Furniture By Utilizing Odds and Ends

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

FLIPPANT painted furniture by that glib artist, Peter Hunt, suggests all sorts of new ways with made-over and makeshift furniture. He'll take a chest of drawers and decorate the front of it with beads and suspenders, with necklaces and garters and hairpins. He'll decorate a table top with plates and knives and forks . . . or else he'll paint pitcher and glasses or coffee pot and cups on his table tops. He uses anything that comes to mind for motifs and makes it look gay and amusing and casual, painting in free-hand effect and mixing in Pennsylvania Dutch tulips and hearts. Sometimes he seasons the design with a verse or a quip written in with his paint brush.

This furniture can be bought through leading stores, and considering it's hand painted, it's not too expensive. And for those who can afford it, we say buy it ready done with the inimitable Peter Hunt touch lingering over it. But don't get an inferiority complex if you can splurge for a splash of the Hunt brush . . . He is doing a lot for the American creative spirit by inspiring the rest of us to go and do likewise. Anybody with a facile hand at drawing easy free-hand sketches can achieve some amusing things with painted furniture.

Hand-Me-Downs

Lucky for Americans in this war era of scarcities that we like such informal furniture because it is the easiest kind to makeshift and make-over—and it can be mixed with good pieces of modern or early American as the budget expands. Painted furniture made of odds and ends and seasoned generously with imagination can be achieved with old tables, chests, cupboards, beds or whatever . . . hand-me-downs from more affluent relations or pick-ups from the junk shops.

Or if the man of the household is good at carpentry, or if your handyman is clever, you'd be surprised what jaunty furniture can be made with plywood. An excellent type of table on the old sawhorse principle is nothing to snub in these times . . . fact is, it really looks all right in an informal room. Benches aren't hard to make at home, either, and a really capacious desk can be achieved by setting a slab of plywood across a pair of two-drawer filing cabinets. Bed headboards can be screwed on studio couches . . . or bunks can be built in.

Gay vs. Sober

Put your tongue in check and be flip when you decorate furniture—or else be sober and oh, so true to tradition. Paint such pieces white or in any bright color or leave them in natural wood finish. Pennsylvania Dutch motifs, early American designs, Swedish or South American or Indian designs will all supply ideas for the decorations. You'll find motifs to copy in books at the library, in wall papers and in chintzes or out of your head.

Filigree Jewelry Returns

Fine metal filigree, a big jewelry fashion in the First World War, may make a sentimental journey into style again. Mrs. Averell Harriman is wearing a big pear-shaped brooch of gold filigree with many small diamonds lighting up the lacy pattern of the metal. She pins it to the shoulder of a wine-colored dinner jacket trimmed in picturesque black silk braid and worn with a long black wool skirt.

Your Personal Success

Letter Writing

TODAY it's more true than ever that keeping friends depends a lot on how you write letters! For war scatters everyone—into the Army, into war work.

If you agonize over each word in letters of course you'll put off writing, then desperately send a "duty" hodgepodge—"It's been raining . . . how are you . . . I'm all right." Friends are chilled.

You could so easily do better! You might learn the simple trick of making the most of things.

Raining? Very well. Write "There's a gentle drizzle today—Spring coming?" or "The rain today makes me think of the time you and I got drenched on our crazy picnic. Remember?" Little things, but interesting, and with a me-to-you warmth!

In writing new friends, even clever letter-writers feel stiff, but you need not. Just avoid the mistakes that give people a poor impression.

"Dear Friend" is used only in circulars and lined paper is just as bad. In all letters, including business ones, avoid abbreviations such as "saw your ad for a typist."

You can get dozens of helpful tips from our 40-page letterwritting booklet. Explains letter etiquette and has 35 sample business and social letters, including love letters—to use as guides in your correspondence.

Pearl Harbor Hero, Wife In Capital for Brief Stay

Former Miss Shirley Lindall, Navy Daughter, Visits Parents While Husband Convalesces

By Elizabeth Henney

Washington, for lo these many weeks, has been harboring a naval hero and his wife. Lieut. (j. g.) Ernest H. Dunlap, jr., hero of Pearl Harbor and holder of the Navy Cross, is here for treatment at the naval hospital, and Mrs. Dunlap, the former Miss Shirley Lindall, is visiting her parents, Commander Albin L. Lindall, United States Navy, and Mrs. Lindall.

Wounded during the action at Pearl Harbor on December 7, the Dunlaps came to Washington, when Lieut. Dunlap was sufficiently recovered to travel. On March 13, President Roosevelt awarded the Navy Cross to Lieut. Dunlap and on March 19 the quiet presentation ceremony took place in the office of the hospital, where with no fanfare, Rear Admiral Charles M. Oman, and Capt. Robert E. Hoyt, read the citation and pinned on the medal.

Lieut. Dunlap, though still in the hospital, expects to be recalled to active duty sometime in the near future. Mrs. Dunlap, who with her mother, is filling in the time with concentrated Red Cross work, is quiet-voiced, calm and courteous to questioners, but a bit disinclined to talk about Pearl Harbor at all. The wording on Lieut. Dunlap's citation, however, explains that reticence and tells the story pretty completely. It reads:

"The Navy Cross was awarded and presented to Ernest H. Dunlap, jr., Lieut. j. g., U. S. N., for distinguished service in line of his profession, exceptional courage, coolness and devotion to duty during the attack on the fleet in Pearl Harbor, T. H., by Japanese forces on December 7, 1941.

"When Lieut. (j.g.) Dunlap found that his services in the foretop as Spot One on his ship, were not required, he joined the secondary battery, supervised the manning of guns and organization of ammunition supply and maintained an accurate fire on low flying aircraft until seriously wounded by the explosion of an enemy bomb. Despite his wounded condition he assisted with the wounded until he himself collapsed."

Signed by Frank Knox.

Shuns Festivities For War Work

No stranger to Washington, Mrs. Dunlap would have been the center of a round of festivities had she announced her presence here to her friends, but since her arrival two interests have taken up her time completely; spending every moment allowed by hospital regulations with her convalescent husband, and filling in every other crevice of time with work at the Red Cross.

Though she has been a Navy girl all her life, her father is in the naval medical service and has been here with the naval dispensary for some time, Mrs. Dunlap's "career" as a Navy wife has so far been brief and full of crises.

In the first place, when June, 1941, arrived, and her fiance (who graduated from Annapolis in 1939) was eligible for marriage (the Navy has the "no marrying for two years after graduation" rule), he was stationed at Pearl Harbor, and she was back in Newport, R. I.

Furthermore, her father, who was on duty at the Naval War College, couldn't get leave, so—she crossed the ocean alone, and became the bride of Lieut. Dunlap on June 1, at the Central Union Church in Honolulu. Life was approximately calm for a few months, and then bang, came Pearl Harbor.

Whole Family Expert Equestrians

Tall, slender, brunette, with brown eyes, Mrs. Dunlap is an athlete, sportswoman and equestrienne supreme. For years she has ridden in horse shows and to-the-hounds, and it was while her father was M. F. H. of the St. Margaret's Hunt Club, during his tour of duty at Annapolis, that she met her future husband. All of the family are great riders, by the way, including her only brother, Albin L. Lindall, jr., who is now attending Virginia Military Institute.

Another recent visitor of the Lindalls at their home in the Gen. Scott Apartments, was Mrs. Ernest H. Dunlap, sr., mother of Lieut. Dunlap. Mrs. Dunlap came up from Birmingham, Ala., for the recent christening of the cruiser, the U. S. S. Birmingham at Norfolk, Va. Mrs. Dunlap, sr., represented the Navy mothers of Birmingham at the event.

Dr. Padilla Honor Guest At Dinner

Augmenting his full official business schedule with an equally full official social schedule, visiting Mexican Foreign Minister, Dr. Ezequiel Padilla, was guest of honor at a dinner last night given by the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, Nelson Rockefeller.

A stag dinner, the party took place in the Rockefeller home on Foxhall Road. Among the guests were the Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, the Undersecretary of Finance of Mexico, Raymond Beteta and the economic adviser to the Bank of Mexico, Luciano Wichers.

Dr. Padilla, by his own request, is looking forward to a quiet weekend. On Monday night, however, he will be the guest of honor at a banquet to be given by the Pan American Union. Wednesday he will leave for New York, where he will again be an honor guest at another "good neighbor dinner."

Raymond Beteta, who came to Washington with Dr. Padilla, will remain in Washington and open an office here. He was joined in the Capital on Thursday by his wife and daughter, Nora Patricia. They are taking a house here.

Engagement Is Announced At Dinner-Dance

Announcement was made at a dinner-dance last night at the old Beaver Dam Country Club of the engagement of Miss Betty Jane Eisele, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eisele, of Chevy Chase, to Christopher Riner, jr., son of Maj. and Mrs. C. C. Riner, also of Chevy Chase.

A large reception and dance followed dinner at 7 o'clock. Among the guests at the dinner were Mrs. C. C. Drake, wife of Gen. Drake, who is now in the Philippines, and her daughter, Miss Jane Drake, and Col. and Mrs. M. B. Humphrey.

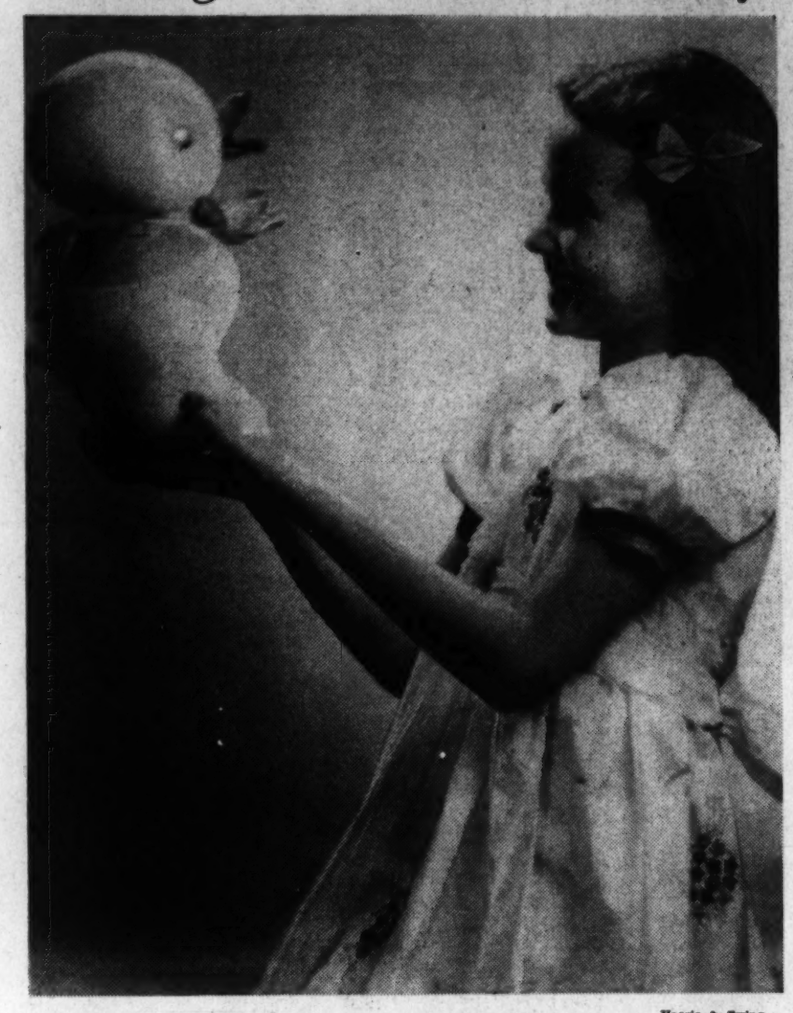
Both the bride-elect and her fiance will be among the ranks of the June graduates, she from Hood College and he from the University of Pennsylvania. No date for the wedding has been set and plans must remain tentative as Mr. Riner may enter the Navy upon his graduation.

Breakfast Party Will Precede Wedding Today

The last social send-off before the wedding of Miss Volinda Lewis and Lieut. (j. g.) Hughes Call this afternoon at Christ Church in Georgetown will be a wedding breakfast at 11 o'clock this morning to be given by Miss Gertrude Good, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Good, at their home on Rockwood Parkway.

Today's bridal couple have been partied right and left, almost daily, during the past two weeks, leading up to the wedding. The bridal party will be among the 30 guests at this morning's last fete, and also invited are Mr. and Mrs. Reilly Adams, of Indianapolis, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. John Witten, Miss Anne Sterrett, Capt. Cameron Brown and Lieut. William Whyte.

Waiting for the Easter Bunny



Harris & Ewing

Little Liana DeBayle, daughter of the Minister of Nicaragua and Senora de DeBayle, holds a wooly chick left by the Easter bunny for her last year as they wonder what he'll have in the way of surprises this season.

Elizabeth Benson, Home From College, Gives Luncheon

Spring holiday time, packed full of fun and parties and the greeting of old friends, is at its zenith this weekend with scores of young people in town bound to fill every moment with feverish activity.

Today will find quite a group of the young ladies at Birdwood, the Chevy Chase home of Miss Elizabeth Polk Benson, who arrived in Washington just day before yesterday from her freshman studies at Wellesley College.

Honor guest at the fete, which will be a luncheon, will be Miss Anne Curzon-Howe, and the guest list includes Miss Selma Ertegun, Miss Barbara Vickery, Miss Peggy Tuckerman, Miss Janet Clapper, Miss Cynette Allen, Miss Mary Lane Latimer, and her guest from Montgomery, Ala.; Miss Mary Ellen Baer, Miss Betty Warden, Miss Mary Howard Gillespie, Miss Hallie Jones, Miss Louise Riggs, Miss Clover Brown and Miss Frances Kay.

Miss Benson plans to spend the week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore B. Benson, but will leave Friday for Dartmouth College, where she will be the guest of James Dick for Green Key weekend, which includes the junior prom among its festivities.

Miss Ann Wickard Here for Easter

Miss Ann Wickard, daughter of the Secretary of Agriculture, and Mrs. Claude Wickard, arrived in Washington yesterday to spend the Easter holidays with her parents in their apartment at the Westchester.

Miss Wickard, who is a sophomore at Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind., is active in the undergraduate newspaper there. She will return to her classes the first part of next week.

Back From Florida

Mrs. Clarence W. Grosner is again at her home in Massachusetts Park, having returned yesterday from Florida, where she spent six weeks at Miami Beach.

New Polish Envoy to Cuba, Wife Returning Soon for Capital Visit

Expected to return soon for a visit in Washington are the newly appointed Polish Ambassador to Cuba and Mme. Bolishaw Wienawa, who were here last week as guests of Mme. Elvina Orlicz-Drezser, Col. and Mme. Wienawa came to this country some time ago from Rome, where he was serving as Polish Ambassador at the time of the Nazi invasion of Poland.

In his new post, Col. Wienawa will be accredited also to Santo Domingo, Haiti and Puerto Rico. A well-known playwright and poet, Col. Wienawa was also a distinguished member of the military circle in Warsaw, and it was there that he was closely associated with the late Gustaw Orlicz-Drezser. It was there, also, that he and his wife first became friends of Representative and Mrs. Charles Dewey, the former of whom was then serving as American adviser to the Bank of Poland, and of Gen. Sikorski, now Poland's Prime Minister. While in Washington last week, the Wienawas were tea guests of Representative and Mrs. Dewey and spent much time talking over old times they had enjoyed together in Poland. Later, Col. Wienawa lunched with Gen. Sikorski at the Polish Embassy.

After a brief visit here with Mme. Orlicz-Drezser the middle of this month, the new Ambassador and Mme. Wienawa will go to Havana, where she will visit them later in the season. Mme. Drezser has as her guest now Mrs. Dorothy Green, who with Mrs. Janet Robinson arrived yesterday from New York for a visit of a few days. Mrs. Green is the daughter of Mme. Irimescu, wife of the former Rumanian Minister here.

Members of Foreign Section Honored At Dinner

The Air Attache of the Turkish Embassy and Mme. Ariburun and the Military Attache of the Embassy and Mme. Aydinalp entertained at dinner last evening in the Shoreham Blue Room for members of the foreign liaison section of the War Department.

In the company were the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun, who presided at the dinner; Col. and Mrs. James F. Olive, Col. Lawrence Higgins, Mrs. Frances M. Anderson, Col. and Mrs. Theodore Babbitt, Col. and Mrs. Arthur E. Sutherland, jr., Col. and Mrs. Lauris Norstad, Maj. and Mrs. Kenneth McIntosh, Capt. and Mrs. Frederick N. Leonard, Lieut. and Mrs. Davis O. Harrington and Lieut. and Mrs. Sherman B. Joost, jr.

Also the counselor of the Embassy, Orhan H. Erol; the Second Secretary and Mme. Kutlu, Mr. and Mrs. S. Eranil, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Dicker, Zubeyir Aker, Miss Ismet Sanli and Dr. Vahdi Sabit.

Mrs. Gann Entertains

Mrs. Edward Everett Gann entertained at a small dinner last night in honor of Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, who has been widely feted here, during her visit from Kansas City.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih, returned yesterday from Rutgers College, New Jersey, where he spoke on Thursday at a United China Relief luncheon. On Thursday evening, he was at Wesleyan University, in Connecticut, to speak before the Honors College, at a banquet.

The Egyptian Minister and Mme. Hassan entertained last night at a small and informal dinner, one in a series they have been giving.

MRS. GEORGE CARTER, of Chester, Pa., announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Henrietta Irwin Carter, to Richard Dulany Taloe, of Baltimore, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Gwynne Tayloe, of Middleburg, Va.

Mr. Tayloe was graduated from Woodberry Forest and Lehigh University and is now connected with the Davison Chemical Co., in Baltimore. The wedding will take place in June.

Mr. and Mrs. Waldemar Christian Bendt-Bendtsen are expected shortly at her place near Leesburg, following completion of their wedding trip.

The former Mrs. Frances Allen Lindsay and Mr. Bendt-Bendtsen were married March 14 at the Royal Poinciana Chapel in Palm Beach, Fla., with the Rev. John Edward Charlton officiating. Mrs. Jacques Maisch Bichenauer, of Miami, was matron of honor and Bond Collins was best man. Jules S. Bache and Mr. Bichenauer were the only witnesses.

Tyson Gilpin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth N. Gilpin, of Boyce, who graduated from Princeton in February, has enlisted in the United States Army and departed for duty at Fort Hancock, Sandy Hook, N. J. Mr. and Mrs. Gilpin, who passed the winter at Boca Grand, Fla., have opened their residence in Clarke County.

MR. AND MRS. J. Richardson van Dyke, of New York, are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son, John Washington. Mrs. van Dyke was formerly Miss Nina Carter Piper, of Marshall, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Roger Lambdon had as guests over the weekend Col. and Mrs. Daniel Mallon and Capt. and Mrs. H. L. Taylor, of Petersburg, Va.

Lieut. Paul Mellon, U. S. A., and Mrs. Mellon have arrived at their home near Upperville from Fort Riley, Kans., where they will be for a few weeks pending Army orders.

'The Male Animal' Gains New Stature at the Earle

Henry Fonda, Olivia de Havilland and Cast Of Comedy Aces Score a Tumultuous Laugh-Hit; Roxyettes Are Welcomed Back in Stage Revue

EXPLOSIVELY AMUSING as it was on the stage, "The Male Animal" is even more uproarious on the screen.

The flexibility and scope of the cameras have given the Warner Brothers' picturization of the Thurber-Nugent comedy hit now at the Earle a breadth, sweep and fluidity that brings full value to the comic, sociological and romantic ramifications of the three-ply plot that was never, it seems, completely realized behind the footlights, hilariously funny as the stage piece was.

There is enough substance in the story of "The Male Animal" to supply the groundwork of three run-of-the-mill celluloids. It plays around with the biological idea of a male's tearing his rivals to pieces in defense of his right to his mate; dips humorously into a casual discussion of the American freedoms of thought and speech; has a tremendously good time harpooning the juvenility of mature men caught up in the frenzy of an annual football rally, and even has time to dally a bit with adolescent campus love. All of this is patterned into a tightly woven fabric of boisterous and spontaneous fun that at one time or another is pretty certain to tickle the risibilities where they are most alive, no matter how diverse the amusement tastes of the assembled spectators.

In rushing along as furiously as it does, the action sometimes gets proportionately noisy, but, even so, doesn't reach the tumultuous pitch of the vociferous approval it inspires in an audience. And the whole merry business is played right up to the last ampere of high voltage by a cast stuffed tight with vitamins.

The direction of the picture was placed in safe hands. Elliott Nugent, who coauthored "The Male Animal" with James Thurber and played the stellar role on the stage, was the one chosen to put the splendid cast through its best paces. Henry Fonda, in the original Nugent role of the professorial worm that turned, also turns in a ne plus ultra performance. As his enchanting young wife, who cannot quite forget an earlier romance with the all-time all-American, back at Midwestern for the rally, Olivia de Havilland, lovelier than ever, contributes one of her sprightliest and most effective portrayals and, as her present and former admirer, Jack Carson likewise does one of his best and most buoyant jobs. Ivan Simpson continues in his original role of Dean Frederick Damon and Eugene Pallette adds weight in more ways than one to the part of the fascist trustee. Herbert Anderson shares with Mr. Fonda the high comedy of the famous drinking scene and Don DeFore makes a laughable dunderhead of the husky who doesn't know for nothing off the gridiron. Minna Phillips, Regina Wallace, Jean Ames, a pert Joan Leslie, and Hattie McDaniel add generously to the general delirium.

The Roxyettes Win a Welcome

The Earle's new stage bill is designed primarily to welcome the Roxyettes back to the boards after their month's vacation. They justify the enthusiasm that greets them by presenting a series of more than usually spectacular routines, costumed with seasonable beauty. Among the others on the bill, the Arnauts and Molly land in first place by their eccentric fiddling and an elaboration of the "Loving Birds" whimsy that so long has been identified with the name of Arnaut. Carol King, one of the more gifted of the ballerinas, pirouettes her way to favor in a spectacular number and The Coeds—eight girls and six boys—blend their vocal harmonies to best effect in a particularly pleasant arrangement of "The White Cliffs of Dover."

The prevalent defense film, "Fighing the Fire Bomb," and an especially interesting newsreel, stressing the presence of an A. E. F. on leave in London and the solemn observance of Holy Week at the United States Military Academy at West Point, complete a superlative Easter bill.

The Worm, So to Speak, Turns!

Tuneful 'Mr. Bug Goes to Town' Tops Metropolitan's Easter Bill

By Richard L. Coe

For Easter week the Metropolitan has a bill that will keep the youngsters fastened to their chairs from one showing to the next while their hungry parents cast about for sustenance. Chief attraction is a full-length color cartoon, "Mr. Bug Goes to Town," while a brief but novel lure is offered by George Pal's "Puppetoon," "Jasper and the Watermelons."

"Mr Bug Goes to Town" is the most successful cartoon feature to come from the Max and David Fleischer Studios in Florida, that group of artisans whose ill fortune it is that they live in the same era as Walt Disney. Be that as it may, their comedy is pleasantly diverting, their characters are new, if sometimes reminiscent, and their music is exceptionally tuneful, exactly as one has grown to expect of the songs of Hoagy Carmichael and Frank Loesser. With Kenny Baker to sing it, "We're the Couple in the Castle" is as tuneful a musical interlude as the year has brought.

According to time-honored custom, the wee animals of the world about us are no better than us humans, which, if you're in a pessimistic mood, really is too bad. They, too, have their housing problems, their thwarted romances, their vested interests.

Which brings us to the chap in the vest, one C. Bagley Beetle, a stuffed-vest if ever there was one. He's a powerful landowner in a rare, undeveloped section just off a city street occupied by "humans." These thoughtless "persons" walk through the once-peaceful lowlands on which dwell insects who have the misfortune to resemble "humans."

Of these insects, the likable ones include a Buddy Ebsen-like hero, Hoppity, the Grasshopper. He's in love with Honey, the Bee. He's not too bright, but he's brave, which is said to be as much a virtue in the insect world as in the human.

Threatening this romantic alliance Bagley, the Beetle, and his two henchmen, Swat, the Fly, and Smack, the Mosquito. They do their durndest to promote the Beetle-Bee match; humans step in to build a giant skyscraper on the peaceful lowlands. But, it turns out, some humans aren't so bad, especially humans who write songs like "There's a Couple in the Castle" and let insects live in their penthouse garden.

Among the assortment of insects who so fortunately resemble humans is Jeepers Creepers, a solemn snail who finds no good in all this moving about. But he gets reconstructed.

The Carmichael-Loesser score further boasts other good tunes: "Katy Did, Katy Didn't;" "I'll Dance at Your Wedding;" "Boy, Oh Boy!" and "Bee My Little Baby Bumble Bee."

"Jasper and the Watermelons" is a color cartoon with the novelty of puppets in place of line drawings, a device that gives the added curiosity of depth to such minutiae. This looks like the first of what should be a long-lived if painstaking sideline to The Youngest Industry.

Other supplementary films at the Metropolitan include "At the Country Fair," one of the "Speaking of Animals" series; a reel of Richard Himber and his music, the OCD's film "Fighting the Fire Bomb" and a sincerely moving newsreel shot of the West Point Chapel Choir.

Kop the Spotlight!

Hollywood, Calif., April 3. As proof that Mack Sennett's was the greatest school of all, four former Keystone cops—Ray Enright, Bill Seiter, Eddie Cline and Earle Kenton—are all directing major pictures at Universal. Earle, who's handling Abbott and Costello in "Pardon My Sarong," told me those boys would have gone over big in the old days. Said he, "We shot as long as the script lasted, then yelled, 'Start ad libbing.' That's all the actors wanted to know. Wires had to be attached to Ben Turpin's feet so he could be yanked out of the scene when we'd had enough."

JANET GAYNOR

Janet Gaynor and Adrian had a whirl in New York and Chicago. John Frederics gave them a party, ditto Edna Chase, of Vogue, also Clifton Webb.

When I asked a technician if "Eagle Squadron" was an original story, he said, "Sure. It's 'The Road Back' with air raid wardens."

Ilka Chase was certainly not very kind to pictures or their personalities in her book "Past Imperfect." So now she'd like another picture. And what's more, he'll probably get it. There's a girl who gets what she goes after.

Janet Blair's testing for one of the roles in "My Sister Eileen," which stars Roz Russell.

When Cliff Nazarro asked the theater manager in Akron, Ohio, to pay him off in auto tires, Cliff got the double-talk, instead of dishing it out!

With Jack Benny at Warners, Jello is a must in studio commissary . . . Sailors on a warship have selected Ann Sothern as their "Ideal bundle for bluejackets."

Because her fiance, Lincoln Fogarty, can't come out here, on account of his Navy duties, Ruth Hussey's flinging a breakfast for intimates Sunday morning, and will introduce him to them over long distance.

After the hit of "Porgy and Bess," it was a cinch that "Show Boat" would be revived. Charlie Winninger and Paul Robeson are already working on it.

Broadway Gazette

New York, April 3.

POLITICS: Paul Kern, the deposed Civil Service Commissioner who started the current investigation of Ed Flynn—about the paving of the latter's Belgian courtyard by city workers—threw this sally at City Councilman Joe Kinsley, of the Bronx. It was Kinsley who once had announced: "On the day Paul Kern is fired, there'll be dancing in the street." "Well, I'm fired now," said Kern, "but on the street where there was supposed to be dancing some paving blocks have been removed."

BEATRICE LILLIE

BOOK DEPARTMENT: Ambassador Joe Davies, author of "Mission to Moscow," was discussing international experts. "If an opinion is expressed by a young man, it's called conceit," said Davies. "If the same opinion is expressed by someone older, it's called self-confidence. And when it's expressed by someone of my age—then it's called mature judgment."

SOCIAL NOTE: Hillery Watson, the Imperial Airways official, who came here with Lord Beaverbrook, visited the 1, 2, 3 Club. There Roger Stearn asked him: "When did you see Beatrice Lillie last?" . . . "Not since the raid on the Music Box Club," said Watson . . . "You mean you haven't seen Bea since last September?" asked Stearn . . . "Oh, I wasn't referring to the Blitz," Watson explained. "I meant the police raid on the Music Box Club."

SPORTS DEPARTMENT: Willie Howard was at Lum Fong's and discussed Joe Frisco's love for horse-racing. Willie, himself an inveterate horse-player, revealed that Frisco once had opened his door and found a baby on the doorstep . . . To make sure that Joe would keep the child, the donor had wrapped it in a Racing Form.

LOCAL NEWS: Fred E. Crane, former chief judge of the Court of Appeals, may handle Paul Kern's appeal . . . Otto Klemperer, the conductor, is going to Mexico for some concerts . . . Kay Kyser was signed the other night to appear at the Meadowbrook Club, starting May 1 . . . The current Optimist—Pessimist story is of two Frenchmen. The Pessimistic one said: "I hear that Hitler is planning to occupy all of Unoccupied France." The Optimistic one shrugged, and said: "So let him. We'll just get away to England, and form a Free Vichy government."

MOVIES: When the Group Theater was created in New York, the first play directed for it by Harold Clurman was Paul Green's "House of Connelly." Clurman now is doing his first movie, for Columbia. Paul Green agreed to write the story for him, and went to Hollywood—under a ten-week contract. . . . Green, a Pulitzer prize winner, completed his assignment within the time stipulated. "I can make an excellent screen play out of this, with four more weeks' work," he told Clurman . . . "Unfortunately, our budget doesn't permit it," the director told him . . . Green took the story back home to North Carolina, and there spent four weeks working on that screenplay—without salary.

Fritz Leiber Signed

Fritz Leiber, noted Shakespearean actor, is the latest addition to the cast of "Crossroads," co-starring William Powell and Hedy Lamarr. Leiber will portray a Parisian diplomat in the feature being directed by Jack Conway.

Washington Women Scribes Celebrate

THESE three charter members of the Washington Newspaper Women's Club stage a candle-lighting preview in preparation for the club's tenth anniversary tea to be held this afternoon, 5 to 7 o'clock. Reading from left to right are Miss Katharine Brooks, present president of the club; Miss Marie McNair and Miss Margaret Hart, past president

Nancy Kengla And Fiance To Be Feted

On the eve of the wedding of Miss Nancy Kengla and Edward Hamlin Jones 2d, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Kengla, the parents of the bride-elect, will entertain at dinner for the wedding party and a number of out-of-town guests. The fete will take place tomorrow night at their home at Wakefield Hall, and the wedding is set for 10 o'clock in the morning, Monday, at St. Paul's Catholic Church.

Mrs. DeWitt Jones, of Des Moines, Iowa, the mother of the bridegroom, will be here for both the dinner and wedding, and also her son, DeWitt Jones, who will be best man for his brother.

Other guests will be the bride's attendants, Miss Betty Lou Jones and Miss Helen Marie Watson, both of Washington, and Miss Eileen C. O'Connor, of Forest Hills, L. I. Also present will be Joha Sproatt, of Iowa City; Vernon C. Kohlhass and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Leech Bradshaw, of Washington; and Mr. and Mrs. Edmund L. Barley, of New York City.

Parties for Miss Kengla have already been given by Mrs. Edmund L. Jones and Miss Marion Toomey.

Nancy Ould Sets Wedding Date

Miss Nancy Stewart Ould, whose engagement to Frank Wilton Fields, jr., is announced.

A wedding at Potomac Heights Community Church on April 24 has been decided upon by Miss Nancy Stewart Ould, whose engagement to Frank Wilton Fields, jr., was recently announced by her mother, Mrs. David K. Correll, and Mr. Correll. A reception will be held at the Ould home after the ceremony.

The bride-elect's sister, Mrs. W. E. Eastman, will be her matron of honor, and Miss Katherine Fields, a sister of the prospective bridegroom, and Miss Ellen Neson will be bridesmaids.

Miss Ould attended George Washington University, where she was a member of Alpha Delta Pi Sorority.

Madeleine Evans Will Be Wed to Ensign Estabrook

Capt. Joseph S. Evans, U. S. N., and Mrs. Evans, of Schenectady, N. Y., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Madeleine Evans, to Ensign Carl Galliher Estabrook, U. S. N. R., son of Mr. and Mrs. Watts F. Estabrook, of Chevy Chase, Md.

Miss Evans is a graduate of Smith College and her fiance is a graduate of George Washington University. He is now stationed in New London, Conn.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Harper On Florida Honeymoon

The newly married Mr. and Mrs. Francis Albert Harper, whose wedding was a social event in Washington last month, have joined the Easter colony at the Pancoast Hotel in Miami Beach, Fla.

Mrs. Harper is the former Miss Jean Fairweather Waggaman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd P. Waggaman, of this city. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Harper, of Paris, New York and Princeton, N. J.

Newspaperwomen to Trade Chatter At Club's Anniversary Fete Today

"DO YOU REMEMBER . . . ?" "Have you forgotten when —?" "Oh, my dear, is this your new Easter dress?" "The hat is quite perky and most becoming." No doubt, this bit of feminine chatter will be mixed with nostalgic reminiscing of newspaper scribes as they gather today to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the Newspaper Women's Club of Washington.

The birthday tea from 6 to 7, this afternoon, will take place at the club's headquarters, 1604 Twentieth Street, which was opened a year ago on the first day of spring by the First Lady, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who flew from New York to Washington especially for the occasion, and who was the first to fit her own key in the lock of the door.

In April, 1932, the two founders, Miss Margaret Hart and Miss Katharine Brooks, named an organizing committee and recruited charter members for the organization which now numbers 112.

This afternoon's party will also mark the anniversary of the forming of the club's fellowship fund, established for the benefit and mutual aid of newspaper women in Washington. In addition to its fellowship fund, the organization continues its good works by maintaining a bed at Children's Hospital.

Besides Mrs. Roosevelt, other honorary members include Mrs. Calvin Coolidge and Mrs. Herbert Hoover. The late Amelia Earhart also held an honorary membership card and on her visits to Washington had her own latchkey to the clubrooms then located at 1406 H Street, which she used as a sort of temporary office.

Through arrangements made by Lee Hart, then secretary of the National Press Club, the group held its first meetings in the lounge of the scribesmen's headquarters in the National Press Building and it was there that Mrs. Hoover was feted at one of the early parties. Some time after that the women's group opened for business at the H Street address. After that it changed 1406 H for 1640 Rhode Island Avenue—thence to headquarters at the Raleigh Hotel—and now to 1604 Twentieth Street.

Back in 1932 the organizing commitee, working with Miss Brooks and Miss Hart, was composed of Mrs. Kate Scott Brooks, later first president and now honorary president; Mrs. May Kearny Ward, Miss Elisabeth Poe, Miss Jackie Martin, the late Mrs. Sally V. H. Pickett, Miss Mabelle Jennings, Mrs. H. Wells March, then Miss Evelyn Peyton Gordon; Miss Esther Prager, Mrs. Vylla Poe Wilson, Miss Elizabeth Kuhn Mullikin, Mrs. Marie McNair, who is now president of the club; Mrs. Jack W. Joslin, then Miss Flora MacDonald, and Mrs. Ray Brennan, then Miss Betty Noel.

Shortly after the constitution had been drawn up, the charter members included Mrs. Leila Bathon, Mrs. Clifton Webb, then Miss Lillian Cutlip; Miss Hazel Edgar, Miss Betty Hynes, Mrs. Mary MacCracken Jones, Mrs. Ann Parks Marshall, the late Mrs. George S. Richard, Mrs. Margaret Vosbury, Miss Margaret Wade and Mrs. Josephine T. Williams.

In 1942 many of the Capital's official set hold associate memberships. They include Representative Frances P. Bolton, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. Jesse J. Jones, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., Mrs. Henry L. Stimson and many more.

Special guests today besides Mr. and Mrs. Lee Hart will be B. N. Timmons, who presented the club with its first chair, and Clifford Berryman, who donated its first picture. On hand also will be Mrs. Timmons and Mrs. Berryman. Other special guests will be Col. and Mrs. Kurt Schiffeler and Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris.

Besides Mrs. McNair other officers of the current year are Miss Elisabeth Poe, first vice president; Mrs. Sophia Pool Kepner, second vice president; Miss Alice Hutchins Drake, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Helen Fetter Cook, recording secretary; Miss Margaret Germond, treasurer, and Mrs. Leila Bathon, historian.

Honor guests include president of Southeastern University, Dr. James Alexander Bell, and Mrs. Bell and Miss Louise O'Neil . . .

Did You Know . . . ?

THAT Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan is the new president of the Washington Council of Church Women? She was elected yesterday at a special meeting of the executive committee called together for the purpose of naming a new president. The duties are by no means unfamiliar to Mrs. Morgan, for until yesterday she was the first vice president of the council. Also, she is on the board of the United Council of Church Women, which takes in approximately 10,000,000 Protestant church women. Mrs. Morgan succeeds Mrs. George A. Ross who died about a week ago.

That Mrs. Laura L. Waters received the $100 defense bond offered as a prize by the Washington Soroptimist Club, of which she is a member. Miss Mabel Boardman, national secretary of the American Red Cross, pulled the lucky slip from the box at the club's luncheon meeting Wednesday. "I'm nearsighted," laughed, Miss Boardman, "so I couldn't possibly see the name." The club voted special thanks to Miss Augusta Uuhl, civics committee chairman, for her untiring work in helping to raise $1000 for a mobile canteen.

Petworth Baptist Bible Conference Opens Tomorrow

A Bible conference will open tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Petworth Baptist Church, Seventh and Randolph Streets Northwest, under the leadership of Dr. W. Hersey Davis, professor of New Testament interpretation at Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky.

DR. DAVIS

Dr. Davis is considered one of the outstanding Greek scholars of the world and is recognized as one of the few great interpreters of the Bible. The public is cordially invited to attend these conferences which will meet twice daily Monday through Friday at 10:30 a. m. and 8 p. m. At the Monday morning conference the Baptist ministerial conference of the city will be the honor guests at the conference, and the ladies' aid of the church will serve lunch at noon for the ministers and their wives in honor of Dr. Davis.

China Missionary Guest Preacher at Pilgrims' Church

The Rev. Dr. P. Frank Price, for half a century an outstanding missionary in China of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, will be the guest preacher at the Church of the Pilgrims on the Parkway at Twenty-second and P Streets Northwest tomorrow at 7:45 p. m. The theme of his message will be: "Light on the Eastern Horizon."

Dr. Price is the author of books printed in the Chinese language, and has for many years enjoyed the friendship of the leaders of that country. Three of his four sons are missionaries to China. Two of them are now in America on furlough. The third, Dr. Frank W. Price, is now working in western China, and has performed important tasks for Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Faithful of Capital Solemnly Commemorate Death of Christ in Good Friday Services

By Robert Tate Allan
The Post Church Editor

Amid a world crucified by tyranny, the Nation's Capital yesterday solemnly commemorated the death of One who, according to the Good Book, came to bring man the more abundant life.

In three-hour services and other observances, worshipers symbolically accompanied Christ on his sorrowful journey from Pilate's House to Golgotha—the Place of the Skull, where he was crucified between two thieves.

His seven last words (remarks), recalled in scores of services, were: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do;" "Today shalt Thou be with me in Paradise;" "Woman, behold thy son. Son! Behold thy mother;" "My God! My God! Why hast Thou forsaken Me?;" "I thirst;" "It is finished," and "Father, into Thy hands I commend My spirit."

In most three-hour services, speakers shared discussions on Christ's last words, among them Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, Methodist resident prelate, who spoke on "The Seventh Word" at Washington Methodist Union services at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church.

"We will never become able to face issues of tomorrow," he told a large throng from all parts of the city, "unless we become realistic in the life of Jesus Christ, where we have the hope of everlasting life."

Other speakers were the Rev. C. E. Wise, pastor of Wesley Methodist Church; the Rev. J. W. Rosenberger, Rockville (Md.) Methodist Church; the Rev. Dr. E. A. Sexsmith, Rhode Island Avenue Methodist Church; the Rev. Dr. Harry Evaul, Epworth Methodist Church; the Rev. Dr. J. Lowrey Fendrich, Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, and Lieut. Col. Fred C. Reynolds, Fort Meade chaplain.

The Rev. Drs. John C. Edwards and Horace E. Cromer, superintendents of the East and West Washington Methodist Districts, respectively; the Rev. Dr. John W. Rustin, host pastor, and the Rev. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of Foundry Methodist Church, also took part.

The traditional "Stations of the Cross" again highlighted the "everybody's Good Friday service" in Franklin Park, Fourteenth and K Streets Northwest, sponsored by the Catholic Evidence Guild for the eleventh consecutive year.

The Rev. Dr. Charles A. Hart, guild moderator, and the Rev. Theophane Carroll, of the Franciscan Monastery, were the principal speakers. Choral music was provided by a choir of religious students from the Carmelite White Friars Hall and the Franciscan Holy Name College, under the direction of Father Angelus, O. F. M.

Large crowds turned out for Good Friday services at the Franciscan Monastery in Brookland, highlighted by the singing of the Passion, veneration of the cross, procession and mass of the presanctified in the morning, and the funeral of Christ last night.

Many firms yesterday excused their employes during the three-hour services, some of the people attending the rites at Epiphany Episcopal Church, in the heart of downtown Washington. The Rev. Dr. Charles W. Sheerin, rector, was in charge. Hundreds of service men, given passes excusing them from duty during the sacred period, worshiped at services.

The congregation of St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square, welcomed home for the Good Friday occasion its rector, the Rev. Dr. C. Leslie Glenn, serving as Navy chaplain "for the duration."

Among scenes of other three-hour services were the Washington Cathedral, Concordia Lutheran Evangelical Church, Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church, Fifteenth Street Christian Church, Georgetown Lutheran, Reformation Lutheran Church, and Memorial United Brethren Church. The service at Reformation Church was sponsored by the Washington Lutheran Ministerial Union.

Several services were held last night. "The Rock," a pageant, was given at Calvary Methodist Church. "The Passion of Our Lord According to St. John," was sung at the Washington Cathedral by its choir of men and boys directed by Paul Callaway, organist.

Dr. Ball to Mark Fortieth Easter Here

On Easter Sunday, 1903, Dr. John Compton Ball visited the Metropolitan Baptist Church as guest preacher. He received the unanimous call of the church in June of that year and has continued to this day. Sunday therefore marks his fortieth Easter in the Capital City. In 1903 he ministered to 361 members, and now he ministers to 2800.

He will speak tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "Royal Resurrection Realities." At 7:45 p. m. the Rev. John M. Ballbach will speak on "You Will Live After You Die If——" There will be a trombone solo at the evening services by Homer Phillips, of the U. S. Navy Band. After the services there will be an hour of old-fashioned hymn singing.

Thursday evening the regular prayer and praise service will be held. The Good News Youth Rally will sponsor Friday evening the Men's Glee Club of Wheaton College, Wheaton, Ill. This is a club composed of 32 voices singing sacred and secular numbers, under the direction of Prof. William Nordin.

NO! Not if you don't stop killing yourself at that machine shop of yours! No wonder you're always tired and run-down.
Well, you'd be tired from overwork, too, doc, if you needed machinists and couldn't get them.
Pardon me, sir, but I think what you need first of all is a "Help Wanted" ad in The Washington Post. That paper will get you help if anything can!
A Post Want Ad! . . SAY, is that a prescription, doc?

Too Many Congressmen?

The number of members of the House of Representatives proved elusive at a District telephone rates hearing yesterday. P. U. C. Chairman Hankin, searching for the number, first suggested 431, then 531, and then 416. With help from spectators the number was finally stabilized at 435.

"Nice to Have Met You"

A stenographer in the dizzily growing War Department dashed off yesterday for a weekend in New York.

"If we're not in this office when I get back," she called to her boss, "leave word where to find you."

War Housing Speed Again Is Promised

Norfolk Navy Yard Losing 600 Workers Monthly Because of A Shortage of Homes

Federal Public Housing Authority officials yesterday promised to speed up the 153-million-dollar prefabricated housing program for war and defense workers, which has been bogged down.

A FHA forecast that contracts for all of the 45,000 projected dwelling units will be signed within three weeks coincided with a Navy disclosure that the situation in the Hampton Roads defense area is extremely acute.

"The Navy Yard is calling from 1500 to 1800 men to work each month and losing 600 a month because they can find no place to live or can't find housing so they can bring their families," the Norfolk Navy Yard public relations officer told The Post last night.

"As I understand it, the delay in construction of the 12,000 prefabricated houses which were supposed to be built in the Hampton Roads area is due to the fact that sites have not been found."

Homes Without Homesites

A San Francisco firm has a contract for 5000 of the 12,000 units, and the Navy public relations officer said, is fabricating the houses at the rate of 24 a day. But there is no place to take any of them for erection. The fabrication is being done at Money Point, near Portsmouth, where the Navy Yard is situated.

On recommendation of Charles F. Palmer, former defense housing coordinator, 153 million dollars was allocated after Pearl Harbor to build approximately 45,000 dwellings for war workers. The job was given to Federal Works Agency, but turned over a month ago to the newly formed National Housing Agency, of which FPHA is a branch.

Admissions yesterday by officials of the agencies involved that the program is far behind schedule, with no more than 10 contracts signed, came less than a week after The Post revealed a bad situation at Indianhead, Md. Work has been suspended there on 186 houses and of the 400 completed fewer than 50 are tenanted by employes of the naval powder factory.

Expected to Move Fast

While FWA authorities were inclined yesterday to blame the housing agency for the delay, the latter's spokesmen refrained from recriminations.

"The program will be put over," one of them said. "From now on it will move fast. Arguing over who is at fault won't make it go faster."

Another factor brought into the picture was the possible effect that the antipathy of union building trades have had to the vast housing enterprise. Reports are current that the local Alley Dwelling Authority's own $18,900,000 demountable housing project is being hindered by opposition of unions because a minimum of labor is required for erection.

John Ihlder, executive officer of the Alley Dwelling Authority, was out of the city yesterday and unavailable for comment.

Firms Without Experience

One builder, who recently retired as a Federal housing consultant because of dissatisfaction over progress, told The Post that at least two-thirds of the "letters of intent" —preliminary to written contracts— issued on the 153-million-dollar program went to businesses which had never had any experience in building or erecting prefabricated houses.

Another builder's representative, who feared that the relatively young prefabricated-demountable industry will receive a bad setback because of the present confusion, placed the blame on a too hasty issuance of letters of intent for jobs that were too large for the companies' capacities.

Instead of giving the contracts to firms far removed from the dwelling sites, facilities of lumber mills, furniture plants and millwork shops in the locality can and should be converted into house prefabrication centers, he declared.

Allergic to Wool, Virginia Enlistee Ousted by Navy

Special Dispatch to The Post

Danville, Va., April 3.—George Maurakis, rejected enlistee, has come home, a highly disappointed man.

Maurakis was eager to go. He said he enjoyed his American citizenship and wished to do something for the country. Then he had an old grudge against Hitler because the village of his ancestors was laid waste in the invasion of Greece.

But the Naval doctors found that Maurakis was allergic to wool and every time he put on a uniform he suffered. They gave him serums but the allergy remained untamed. So he was discharged from the Navy and he is home again—a disappointed man.

Letts Extends Axis Probe Jury For 3 Months

Justice F. Dickinson Letts yesterday signed an order extending the authority of the special grand jury on Axis agents for three months.

Special Prosecutor William Power Maloney reported to the justice that the grand jurors have not completed their investigation of the unlawful operations of Germen and other propagandists and those working with them.

Form Ride Clubs, Save Tires, Gas, Young Urges Car Owners

An appeal to car owners to canvass their neighborhoods and find passengers to share their cars going to work in the mornings was made yesterday by John Russell Young, speaking both as District Commissioner and as United States civilian defense coordinator for this region.

"Remember," he admonished motorists, "the average citizen cannot replace his tires when the present ones run out. Invite your neighbors to ride downtown. Ask them to return the favor. Pool your cars and save."

The share-your-car movement was first broached in January when it was thought that the air-raid wardens could make the neighborhood surveys and assign workers to riding clubs. However, this form of organization was discarded as impractical and the matter was turned over to the Department of Vehicles and Traffic.

Printed appeals are to be circulated by the Council of Personnel Administration throughout all Federal and District agencies and all other drivers are urged to cooperate.

Pointing out that not only does the shared transportation save fuel and rubber, but also helps to relieve traffic congestion, Young said: "There must be a home front to back up our boys on the battle fronts of the world. The chance to help is no further away than our own community."

The ride clubs have been initiated not only in the District, but in communities all over the country. It is a part of the highly touted Pontiac plan, which Washington traffic officials hold parallels the program begun in Washington last fall. Its essence is voluntary sharing. "Make it a clubby, congenial affair and the results will be easier for us all," Young said.

Hains Point Tea House Goes on Wartime Menu

The Hains Point Tea House opens for the season today with a "modified wartime menu," the Welfare and Recreational Association of Public Buildings and Grounds announced.

Formerly picknickers, bicyclists and other visitors to the Point could obtain complete chicken, steak and seafood dinners. But this season, only sandwiches, hot soup, desserts and beverages will be served.

"The simplified selection," explained the association, "has been made necessary by the need for conserving tires and delivery equipment and by the fact that all available chefs and other skilled restaurant workers are needed to serve warworkers in the new cafeterias and lunchrooms which the association has opened up in various Government buildings."

20 M. P. H. Blackout Speed Limit Advised

A blackout speed limit of 20 miles an hour for all except emergency vehicles was recommended yesterday by the Office of Civilian Defense in a booklet on "War Traffic Control."

Emergency vehicles should be marked with a large white "E" on the front, sides and back, the booklet said.

If any area becomes a theater of military activity, it was declared, military authorities will be in control of traffic. This same rule is true in the event of evacuation necessity, it was said, but all communities were urged to study evacuation facilities for their area and to prepare maps with possible evacuation routes.

D. C. Asked to Yield Land for Dormitories

The District was asked yesterday to give up the lots south of the Municipal Center on Pennsylvania Avenue for a site for defense workers dormitories. The District Commissioners said they were willing to comply with the request, but asked what about the $36,000 per year the lots brought in as parking concessions.

Chairman Frederic A. Delano, of the Park and Planning Commission; W. A. Reynolds, commissioner of the Public Buildings Administration, and J. C. Nichols, of the Planning Commission, who approached the Commissioners on the deal, assured them that some arrangement could be made whereby the District would not lose all of this revenue.

Delano revealed that the Government was still contemplating the erection of dormitories on the Union Station Plaza and on ground east of the Mellon Art Gallery.

The Pennsylvania Avenue property, on which the remaining wings of the centralized District Government buildings will be erected, would remain vacant for the duration of the war anyway, as priorities cannot be obtained for the construction.

The Commissioners, however, feel that, even vacant, it is serving a purpose both in its contribution to the annual budget and as one of the central areas for off-street parking.

Navy's Model Plane Leader Will Speak

John H. Williams, in charge of the Navy-sponsored model plane building program in the District, will give a talk on the subject at 2 p. m. today at the Children's Museum of Washington, 4215 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

Morgenthau Resigns As Assistant Warden

William T. Kruglak, deputy air raid warden of the Kalorama area, yesterday announced the resignation of Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the United States Treasury, from his post as assistant zone warden of the Kalorama area.

According to the announcement, Morgenthau has been directed by the President to report to the White House in case of an air raid or similar emergency, which would necessitate severance of his post as warden in his home district.

Fire Auxiliary Lags in D. C. Defense Effort

As far as statistics are concerned, Washington's "civilian defense army" is beginning to look pretty good, with the auxiliary fire-fighting force probably lagging farthest behind.

The fire auxiliary, one of the most important protective services, needs both volunteers and equipment, according to the March report of the District of Columbia Office of Civilian Defense.

Of 1215 fire fighters enrolled, 573 have completed their training and the others are now in classes. At least 800 more are needed. Equipment is promised from the national OCD, which has 100 million dollars with which to make purchases.

Other report figures showed that: 23,008 air raid wardens have been assigned to training, 4506 auxiliary policemen have been trained and assigned to duty, 816 persons are trained for emergency transportation service, emergency medical volunteers total 3280, 1982 persons have volunteered for messenger service.

Emergency housing and feeding personnel now totals 3747. Eighty-five men and 19 women have enrolled for work with decontamination squads, while 360 persons are in training as rescue units. More than 8000 trained workers from labor groups are available as clearance crews and have their equipment.

More auxiliary policemen are needed also, a goal of 8500 having been set. This goal is based on the theory that each precinct should have six volunteers for each regular policeman. Some of the precincts have almost reached this. The greatest lag is at precinct number one, the report showed.

Thief Takes $62 From Pants of Man Having Suit Fitted

While Lewis B. Flohr, of Vienna, Va., was having his Easter suit fitted at a downtown department store yesterday, a thief stole more than the price of a suit from his pants pocket.

Flohr reported to police his wallet was taken from a dressing room on the second floor of the store. The billfold contained $62, he said.

Police continued to question a 20-year-old Civil Service Commission employe in connection with the theft of $1147 in credit union funds.

Detective Sergt. Frank Ashley arrested the youth after D. S. Davidson, treasurer of the employes' loan fund, reported the money stolen from a locker at the Civil Service Building.

Two Hiking Clubs Plan Jaunts Tomorrow

An 11-mile hike from Keys Gap to Bluemont, Va., will be taken by members of the Wanderbirds Hiking Club tomorrow. The group will leave the National Theater by bus at 8 a. m.

The Capital Hiking Club will meet at the end of the Cabin John car line at 10 a. m. for a trip through Cabin John Park to Stoneyhurst Spring and back to Glen Echo.

Granted Highest Award

Geophysical Union Honors Capt. Heck For 38 Years' Service With Geodetic Survey

The American Geophysical Union last night honored Capt. N. H. Heck, assistant to the director of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, for 38 years of distinguished service with the survey.

CAPT. HECK

Rear Admiral Leo O. Colbert, director of the survey, presented Capt. Heck with the William Bowie Medal, highest award made by the Geophysical Union, at exercises held at George Washington University.

W. C. Lowdermilk, president of the union, declared that science has the job of making a survey of the post-war world to prevent future wars.

Lowdermilk, who is assistant chief of the United States Soil Conservation Service, declared that science did not receive enough Governmental support for national defense work when other nations were preparing for aggression.

The United States is developing a long range weather forecast system for its fighting forces that is expected to match the efficiency of Hitler's secret system, Charles F. Sarle, assistant chief of the weather bureau's technical services, told the meeting.

The establishment of secret means of making long and accurate predictions of weather, Sarles said, is the only explanation for the ideal weather conditions attending many of Hitler's chief military moves, including the clear dry weather for the mechanized push into Poland, the low countries and France, low visibility when the Nazis surged into Norway and the heavy fog through which Nazi warships escaped from a French port recently.

In no other war, Sarles said, had military success depended so much on accurate forecasts.

The William Bowie Medal was named after the late William Bowie, who served with the survey for 42 years. This was the fourth annual award.

Admiral Colbert cited Heck for work in many fields of geophysics (earth physics), particularly in the field of earthquake research. Capt. Heck developed the wire drag method of locating obstructions to navigation and while assigned to the Naval Experiment Station at New London, Conn., during World War I, developed methods of making use of sound waves traveling through water.

A resident of Washington since 1922, Capt. Heck lives at 3421 Northampton Street Northwest. He is 60 years old.

Auto Club Sees Pressing Need for Accident Probe Squad in D. C.

Strong opposition to the suggested abolition of the Police Department's accident investigation unit was expressed officially yesterday by the District Division of the American Automobile Association.

Washington I. Cleveland, manager, who previously had announced his personal disapproval of recommendations by a special police investigating committee calling for discontinuance of the A. I. U. as presently constituted, said the A. A. A. division's advisory board had officially voted its unalterable opposition."

Speaking for the board, Cleveland said the police committee's proposal to do away with the unit "with the understanding that it be established on a squad basis if and when personnel becomes available" was "highly illogical."

Claims Fallacy

"The committee's recommendation," he said, "is based upon the contention that the unit as now organized 'is inadequate to undertake a comprehensive and complete program of accident investigation and accident prevention work.' This contention is apparently based upon the fact the unit is so limited in the number of cars and men assigned to it that only two-thirds of the accidents can be investigated.

"The American Automobile Association most vigorously protests against a conclusion based on such reasoning. During the past year 180 men have been added to the police force and another 90 are expected to be added in the near future. Despite this increase, not one additional man has been assigned to the Traffic Department. In the meantime there has been an increase of over 50 per cent in the fatal traffic accidents in the District of Columbia.

Traffic Force Depleted

"Due to the abnormal conditions brought about by the war, the traffic force has been depleted to assign men to the White House and to other national defense duty. Notwithstanding these drawbacks, the accident investigation unit has established a remarkable record of convictions in over 90 per cent of the cases brought to trial and an especially meritorious record in solving hit and run cases."

Commenting that four additional cars and 22 more men and equipment would bring the unit up to the accepted standard, Cleveland declared:

"The fact that the unit, because of lack of facilities, has not been able to do its most effective work is no reason to abolish it. As the report contains no criticism of the unit's work, which has admittedly been excellent, it should be supplied with sufficient facilities to do the job assigned properly . . .

"Let's give the unit a real chance."

The special police committee's report is now being considered by the Commissioners' advisory traffic council's legislative and enforcement committee, which will report to the full council next Thursday.

Donations Hike Blood Bank Fund by $151

The Children's Hospital blood and plasma bank fund was increased yesterday by $151.78, representing checks presented by M. J. Uline and the nursing alumnae of Columbia and Children's Hospitals.

The Uline donation comprised 10 per cent of gross proceeds of a professional hockey game played at Uline's Arena on March 8 and amounted to $101.78.

Sponsored by the American Legion, Washington Bridge League and The Post, the 1942 campaign will make possible the operation of the Children's Hospital blood, plasma and serum bank for the remainder of this year.

Jailer to Be Picked To Replace Rives, Called to Army

A city jailer will be appointed Tuesday to replace for the duration Capt. Thomas M. Rives, who is entering the Army as a major on April 16.

The penal committee of the board of welfare will make the nomination from a panel of three names: E. Allen Green, assistant general superintendent of District penal institutions; C. O. Botkin, superintendent of Lorton Reformatory, and E. J. Welch, assistant superintendent at Lorton.

The District will lose another official this month when Assistant Corporation Counsel William S. Abell goes into the Navy procurement office as a lieutenant, junior grade. Abell, whose leave becomes effective April 13, has been with the corporation counsel's office for a year.

First Issue of Filipino Magazine Is Printed

A new monthly magazine, the Filipino Reporter, made its appearance in Washington yesterday under editorship of Cayetano C. Nagac, of the George Washington University Medical School faculty.

The periodical, which describes itself as "the spokesman for the 75,000 U. S. A. Filipinos," is published at 2422 K Street Northwest. Subscribers and advertisers are being sought.

Lieutenant Killed in Action

WIDOW LIVES IN TAKOMA—Lieut. Arthur Gustafson, of the United States Navy, has been killed in action, probably in the battle of Java, his wife, Mrs. Eva Gustafson, of Takoma Park, Md., was notified. These pictures of the couple were made in the Philippines shortly before Mrs. Gustafson left Manila in 1940. Mrs. Gustafson, now living with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh M. Smythe, at 7 Grant Avenue, said she had "always felt he would come back." They were married in July, 1939, at the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church

Postlude

Bach St. John Passion Sung At Cathedral

By Ray C. B. Brown

John Sebastian Bach's "The Passion of Our Lord According to Saint John" is sung in Washington Cathedral on Good Friday night. Choirmaster and organist: Paul Gallaway. Assistant organist: R. Wayne Dirksen. Soloists: John Jameson (The Evangelist), tenor; Edwin C. Steffe and William E. Coyle, barytones; Don M. Burnett, Stephen Grey and James Waldo, tenors; Edward G. Alexander, basso.

Washington Cathedral held a reverent audience last evening for the presentation of Bach's "The Passion of Our Lord According to Saint John" by the choir of men and boys under the direction of Paul Gallaway. Attendance was large, partly because of the appropriateness of the performance to the day and partly because postponement from Palm Sunday had attracted more attention to the event. There was impressive dignity in the singing of the choral work, and one was moved by the earnestness and fervor of the singers. In observance of the custom in Bach's time, no women participated, the soprano and alto passages being intoned by the boys' choir.

BROWN

While Passions had been composed in Germany before Bach by Bartholomaeus Gese, Heinrich Schuetz and John Sebastiani, the form employed by Bach for this service was a new one and was dictated by Dr. Salomo Deyling, head of spiritual affairs in Leipzig. Dissatisfied with the way church music was arranged during Holy Week, he gave implicit directions to the cantor about the Palm Sunday and Good Friday services:

"Your best singer, who can pronounce clearly and well, must sing the words of the evangelist in recitative, and, in order to produce more impression and life and variety, the other persons of the story must be represented by other singers, and the Jewish people by a chorus. At the chief points in the story there will be pauses, during which, by means of an aria, the congregation shall lay to heart what they have heard; and that all of us shall be refreshed from time to time, there shall be well-chosen verses from all the known hymns, in which the congregation can join. Now, your business is to carry all this out in a connected and artistic manner."

The St. John Passion, composed in 1723, is probably the first of the five Passions which Bach is said to have written, and of which only two survive. That it was his initial attempt at carrying out Dr. Deyling's instructions one surmises from the fact that he borrowed some words for the arias from Reinhold Keiser's setting of a religious poem by Barthold Heinrich Brockes which had been greatly admired. Keiser's work had been produced in 1712, and the same text was afterward used by Handel, Mattheson and Telemann.

Although the St. John Passion is not as magnificent a structure as the St. Matthew Passion, composed in 1729, it is nevertheless permeated with Bach's religious sincerity and touched by his genius. Particularly notable for harmonic beauty are the chorale, "Thy will, O Lord our God, be done;" the aria "I follow Thee also, my Savior, with gladness' and the chorale, "Within our inmost being."

170 Marriage Permits Issued at Rockville

The office of the clerk of the Circuit Court at Rockville issued 170 marriage licenses in March, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Lester R. Bogley, license clerk.

The total was two below February's record and 22 fewer than were obtained in January, but was somewhat above the monthly average for 1941.

Housing Bill Compromise Is Approved

Conference Report Accepted by Senate, House Expected To Act Next Week

The Senate yesterday accepted the conferees' report on the District area war housing bill, authorizing appropriation of 30 million dollars for dwellings to be occupied by Federal war workers in the Washington area and 20 millions for necessary public works.

House approval of the report is expected early next week, enabling the measure to go to the White House.

While the report leaves to the administrative branch of Government the task of allocating the approved funds, the measure carries with it Congressional sentiment that at least five million dollars of the 20 millions for public works should go for expanding hospital facilities in the District.

Representative Lanham (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the House conferees and of the Public Buildings and Grounds Committee which held two series of hearings on the measure, said that his group favors construction of temporary dormitories for single Federal war workers with some of the 30 millions.

Erection of both temporary and permanent single dwelling units also has been approved by the House group.

Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, was chairman of the Senate conferees. Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, introduced the conference report to the Senate yesterday.

Navy Relief Gains $30,000 Toward Goal

The Navy Relief Society has received contributions totaling $30,000 in its campaign to raise $75,000 in Metropolitan Washington and surrounding counties, it was announced yesterday by George A. Garrett, director of the volunteer campaign committee.

The $30,000 total, received in a week of campaigning, does not include contributions received by volunteer workers in the Government departments. Since these sums have not yet been tabulated, it was pointed out that group solicitation covering the city's business establishments, it is just getting under way.

"The amount raised thus far is decidedly encouraging," Garrett declared yesterday. "Many public spirited persons and organizations, with no solicitation whatsoever, have fallen in line without cause. We have every reason to believe that we eventually will go over our quota—but will need the support of civic minded Washingtonians to gain this goal."

The drive, part of a national campaign to raise five million dollars for the society to use on behalf of needy Navy families, will continue here until April 11. Solicitation in Government departments will continue a week beyond that.

Stimson Explains Barricading of Van Ness Street

Assurance by Secretary of War Stimson that the closing of Van Ness Street, adjacent to the Bureau of Standards, was done on Presidential order today "closed the issue" with District Commissioners.

The Commissioners had protested the action when the street was barricaded several weeks ago without advance notices. Residents of the neighborhood first opposed the closing when the provost marshal placed an armed sentry at each end of the street.

"The nature of the installations at the Bureau of Standards and their location with respect to Van Ness Street, which makes them vulnerable to sabotage, warrants the action taken," Secretary Stimson's letter said.

He added that residents of the area would be "only too willing to undergo this inconvenience" after they realized the situation.

Land Army Head Resigns, Hits 'Bickering'

In order that it may be free from "bickerings," the women's land army started by the American Women's Voluntary Service should be adopted by some Government agency, Mrs. R. Ernest Dupuy declared yesterday in resigning from her position as the army's chairman.

Mrs. Dupuy, wife of an Army officer, said that both bickering and divisions of personal interests are "seemingly inescapable from volunteer operation of private agencies."

In her letter of resignation to Anita Phipps, A. W. V. S. chairman, Mrs. Dupuy pointed out that she had come to the organization last September with the plan for utilizing volunteer women workers to help out in the farm labor shortage situation. Classes were started at the University of Maryland and the plan proved feasible, she said.

Miss Phipps, who insisted that the 3000 A. W. V. S. members in Washington work together "entirely without bickering," issued a statement praising the work of Mrs. Dupuy and expressing regret over her resignation.

Clippings show that women who enrolled for the farm land army classes did not always stick through the course, less than half completing the work. The classes inaugurated by Mrs. Dupuy after a survey showed the Department of Agriculture and farmers did not want women volunteers who knew nothing about the farm.

The Department of Agriculture has expressed no particular desire for a women's army, but the United States Employment Bureau is said to have gone through its files to determine the number of persons who might be available for it.

A women's land army such as operates in England, with four weeks of training being provided by the Government, and the farmer paying the woman helper, is considered only as a remote possibility for this country, most farm experts say.

The Youth Fellowship of the East and West Washington Methodist Districts will hold a service at 6:45 a. m. at the Sylvan Theater on the Washington Monument Grounds.

The Young People's Society of the Presbyterian Church of the Pilgrims will have an Easter breakfast at 7 a. m. in the parish hall, followed by a worship service addressed by Frank Sanders, one of the congregation's boys on leave from camp in Vermont.

Takoma Lutheran Church will sponsor a sunrise communion service tomorrow at 6:30 a. m. at Seventh and Dahlia Streets Northwest, conducted by Roland Will, president of the Senior Luther League.

'Unreality' Is Subject For Christian Scientists

"Unreality" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow, at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. Sunday school is at 11 a. m. All are cordially invited to attend the church services, including the Wednesday evening meetings at 8 o'clock.

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "No servant can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon." (Luke 16:13.)

Five Services Slated at First Congregational

Five services will mark Easter Sunday at the First Congregational Church. For fkour years Dr. Charles G. Abbot, has been preaching lay sermons on a scientist's viewpoint of Immortality. Tomorrow this world-famous scientist, Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, and president of the First Congregational Society, will give his fifth sermon at the 9:30 church service. Copies of his sermon entitled "The Foundation of a Glorious Hope," will be available after the service. The full A Capella Choir of 50 voices will be on hand to provide Easter music, directed by Ruby Smith Stahl. Organ music will be played by Paul DeLong Cable.

"The Easter Surprise" will be the Rev. Howard Stone Anderson's sermon topic at the regular 11 o'clock service.

The showing of "The King of Kings" at the church will terminate tomorrow with three presentations a 3, 5:30 and 8 p. m. This two-hour picture beautifully portrays the life of Christ. Admission is free, although a silver offering will be taken.

Washington Devout to Attend Two Easter Sunrise Services

Vice President Heads Distinguished Guests At Arlington Rites

By Robert Tate Allan
The Post Church Editor

The glorious message of the Resurrection will ring from under the canopy of the sky and in floral-adorned churches tomorrow, as Easter is celebrated throughout Christendom.

Easter will be greeted with sunrise rites at Arlington Amphitheater, Fort Lincoln Heights, and services throughout the day in local and nearby Protestant and Catholic Churches.

Vice President and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace will head the list of distinguished guests at the twelfth annual Easter sunrise service at Arlington, sponsored by the Grand Encampment of Knights Templar of the United States.

The sermon will be delivered by the Right Rev. Dr. James W. Maxon, Bishop of the Diocese of Tennessee of the Episcopal Church, and a knight of the order.

Buglers from Fort Myer will sound reveille at 7 a. m. At 7:15 a. m., the column of white-plumed knights will form at the west gate of the cemetery. Then, led by the United States Marine Band, it will move to the amphitheater, where the service will begin at 7:30 a. m.

The Rev. Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives and grand prelate emeritus of the Grand Commandery of Knights Templar of the District of Columbia, will conduct the service. He will be assisted by the Rev. Dr. John C. Palmer, also a Knight Templar and grand chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Masons of the District of Columbia.

A Knights Templar Quartet from Washington Commandery, No. 1, of the District will lead the singing, and music will be by the Marine Band.

The service was originated by the grand commanderies of Knights Templar of Virginia and the District and was conducted by them.

Thousands are expected to attend an Easter sunrise service on the heights of Fort Lincoln under the sponsorship of the D. C. Organized Bible Class Association. It will begin at the break of dawn—6:46 a. m.

There will be congregational singing led by the famed Homer Rodeheaver, augmented by a choir of 75 voices with trumpeters directed by Charles Dana Beaschler, choir director of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, and the sermon will be preached by the Rev. Dr. Peter Marshall, pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

Space will be available for 3000 cars, Bible Class Association officials announced.

Foundry Methodist Plans Two Sermons

The Foundry Methodist chancel will be banked with lilies and roses and palms for the two identical services at 10 and 11:30 a. m. tomorrow. Easter anthems will be sung by the Foundry Choir with the Hallelujah Chorus as the closing number. "The Reign of the Risen" is the subject chosen by Dr. Frederick Brown Harris for his Easter sermon. A large number of members will be received at the morning services.

Bible Class Group Sponsors Program At Fort Lincoln

No Tickets Required At Epiphany Episcopal

Breaking a precedent of many years' standing, there will be no admission tickets to the 11 o'clock services tomorrow at Epiphany Episcopal Church.

"Realizing that our city is full of many people who have never been here at Easter before," said the Rev. Dr. Charles W. Sheerin, rector, "we want to announce that no tickets will be required, so this year we are abolishing a practice of former years of issuing tickets to parishioners or friends."

An overflow audience will be accommodated in the parish hall, where a public address system has been installed. The auditorium seats 1000, and the hall at least 1000.

"WHO IS ON THE LORD'S SIDE?"
. . . FRANCES R. HAVERGAL . . .

Who is on the Lord's side?
Who will serve the King?
Who will be His helpers
Other lives to bring?
Who will leave the world's side?
Who will face the foe?
Who is on the Lord's side?
Who for Him will go?

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS
This noted woman hymn writer never sat down deliberately to write a hymn. She waited till her inspiration came, and then wherever she was jotted down her thoughts. Though she was never physically strong, she was gifted and beautiful, and every hymn is full of her great spiritual strength and loveliness.

River Rd. Presbyterian To Mark Anniversary

The congregation of River Road United Presbyterian Church tomorrow will mark the fifth anniversary of the first service in the chapel. The pastor and choir will appear for the first time in their new vestments, and new members will be received.

In five years the church has become self-supporting, and the only debt now is on the parsonage. Cecil B. DeMille's film, "King of Kings," will be shown Monday and Tuesday at 8 p. m. at the church, River Road, Forty-fifth and Fessenden Streets. The Rev. Virgil M. Cosby is pastor.

Union Mission Dedication Tomorrow

The newly completed John S. Bennett memorial building, practically doubling the accommodations of the Central Union Mission and its Children's Emergency Home, will be dedicated at services tomorrow at 7:45 p. m. in the enlarged chapel at 613 C Street Northwest.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will make the dedicatory address and many of the Protestant churches of the city, which helped contribute to the building fund, will be represented by their pastors at the services. The Rev. Freeley Rohrer, president of the mission's ministerial council, will deliver the invocation.

Mrs. Jean Bennett, who was appointed superintendent of the mission after the death of her husband on September 1, 1937, yesterday announced the details of the dedication program and said the mission will keep "open house" for its friends on Monday from 3 to 7 p. m.

The president of the mission's board of directors, E. H. DeGroot, jr., will preside and Homer Rodeheaver, noted evangelist, will lead the singing. William Ramsey, who has served the mission on its board for 57 of the 58 years of its existence, will deliver the dedicatory prayer.

Mrs. Bennett and the presidents of the three women's organizations which are affiliated with the mission will take part in the services. They are Mrs. William H. Ramsey, of the Women's Guild; Miss Marjorie Webster, of the Evening Auxiliary, and Miss Betty Brown, of the newly formed Junior Guild.

In addition to the Children's Emergency Home, the mission operates Camp Bennett and a 237-acre farm near Brookeville, Md.

Mr. and Mrs. Bennett came to Washington in 1915 and in the years that the latter conducted the mission it grew steadily in size and importance in the work it is doing for homeless men and children. Mrs. Bennett has been carrying on since her husband's death in cooperation with the supporting agencies.

Rev. Angus Dun Talks Tomorrow At St. John's

The Rev. Angus Dun, of Cambridge, Mass., will preach tomorrow at the 9:30 service of Morning Prayer and 11 o'clock Festal Service of Holy Communion at St. John's Church, Lafayette Square.

REV. DUN

Dr. Dun has been associated with the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, since 1920 and dean since 1940. He was born in New York City, is a graduate of Yale and of the Episcopal Theological School, and is now one of the outstanding theologians of the Episcopal Church. His most recent book is "Not By Bread Alone," which was the presiding bishop's choice for Lenten reading this year.

Other services for the day are 7:30 a. m., Holy Communion with choir; 8:45 a. m., Holy Communion; 3:30 p. m., children's service; 4:45 p. m., Holy Communion in French; and 8:00 p. m., evening prayer, the Rev. John G. Magee, preacher.

Evangelist Begins Services Tomorrow

The Rev. Anthony Zeoli, evangelist, will commence a series of special services at the Nonsectarian Tabernacle, 6440 Piney Branch Road Northwest, at Georgia Avenue, tomorrow at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m.

Famed for his knowledge of the Bible and his ability to quote Scripture from memory, Zeoli is known as "The Walking Bible."

He will speak tonight at 10:30 o'clock over Radio Station WINX on the Chancel Steps broadcast. He will also be heard tomorrow at 9 a. m. on the Church of the Air program over Radio Station WOL. Both of these broadcasts are sponsored by the Nonsectarian Tabernacle and are under the personal direction of Dr. John McNeill.

The Nonsectarian Tabernacle choir, supported by other talent, will lead the congregational singing at every service.

Bishop Freeman to Give Easter Sermon

The Bishop of Washington, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, will celebrate Holy Communion and preach at the 11 o'clock Easter Sunday festival service of morning prayer, Holy Communion and sermon in Washington Cathedral. The dean of the cathedral, the Very Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, will fill the pulpit for the 4 o'clock evensong.

In addition to the 11 o'clock service, Holy Communion will be celebrated at 6, 7:30, 8:30 and 9:30 Easter morning. Special Easter music will be sung at all Sunday services, with the exception of the 6 and 8:30 services, by the cathedral choir of men and boys, under the direction of Paul Callaway, organist and choirmaster, and the junior choir, under the direction of R. Wayne Dirksen, assistant organist. Accompanying the choir at the 11 o'clock festival service, the great organ will be augmented by a section of trumpets, trombones and tympani.

Universalist Services

The congregation of the Universalist National Memorial Church will sponsor an Easter service of the Golden Cross tomorrow at 12:30 p. m., with church school scholars taking part and the Rev. Dr. Seth R. Brooks presiding. The church school will broadcast over WINX at 4:05 p. m.

Barron's 68 Leads Land of the Sky Golf Open

Picard Cards 30 On First Nine Holes, In 4-Way Deadlock For Fourth Place

By the Associated Press

Asheville, N. C., April 3.—Herman Barron, of White Plains, N. Y., the Western Open champion playing in his first tournament in three weeks, grabbed the half-way lead today with his second straight par-busting round for a total of 137 in the $5000 Land of the Sky meet.

The rotund New Yorker uncorked an early 68, three under par, and saw it stand up under the pressure of a host of late starters.

Lawson Little, former United States Open champion who was tied with three others for the lead at the start of play today, was in second place two shots back of Barron but the scoring fireworks were provided by Henry Picard, of Oklahoma City.

Picard shot a scorching 30 on the first nine holes but faded to a 38 on the back nine. His 68 placed him in a four-way tie for third place with Defending Champion Ben Hogan, Jimmy Demaret and young Bill Nary, pro at Bing Crosby's Rancho Santa Fe Club in California.

Has Steady Round

Hogan carded a 69 today. Demaret, getting his second eagle in as many days on the 512-yard seventh hole, also had a 69. Nary, a strapping blond youth, put together two rounds of 70.

Coleaders with Barron and Little at 69 after the first round, Byron Nelson and Jimmy Hines slipped to 73 and 75, respectively.

Barron had a remarkably steady round, getting four easy birdies before missing the eighteenth green for his only bogey.

Picard shot his outgoing 30 against par of 35 by dropping putts on the first, third, fourth and ninth holes and getting home in two on No. 7. But his blazing putter cooled off on the road home. He three-putted No. 11 from 20 feet and took a big six on No. 14 when he hit a tree and three-putted a second time.

Prepster Sets Two Records In A.A.U. Swim

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., April 3.—An 18-year-old schoolboy wonder, Alan Ford, of Mercersburg (Pa.) Academy, who did his first swimming in the Panama Canal, broke two records as he captured the 220-yard free-style race, a feature of tonight's National A. A. U. championships.

The sandy-haired Ford churned through Yale's natatorium in 2:09.3, three-tenths of a second faster than it's ever been done, to beat Howie Johnson, of Yale, by a margin so close that there wasn't any difference in their times.

Also in the spotlight was the brilliant 300-yard medley by Adolph Kiefer, of Chicago, who broke the accepted American record for the event as he became the first champion to repeat.

Yale Far Ahead

Yale's mighty squad, rolled up a topheavy margin of points in the struggle for its first National A. A. U. team championship.

Kierer's 3:28.2 cut six-tenths of a second off the accepted American record made by Johnny Higgins, of Providence, R. I., in 1936, but was dimmed somewhat by the fact that the great Chicago ace has a 3:28.1, which he did some months ago, awaiting official recognition.

Ford, whose home is in Balboa, Canal Zone, and who plans to enroll at Yale next summer, led most of the way in the 220, sharing it only for a second with Johnson in the home stretch, only to pull away as they finished in a foam.

The time snipped the pool mark of 2:09.6, made by the University of Washington's Jack Medica six years ago, and the meet standard of 2:10.3 recorded last year by Otto Jaretz of the Pasadena (Calif.) A. C., who failed to qualify in an upset this afternoon.

Jim Cousilman, of St. Louis, an Ohio State freshman, succeeded Michigan's Jim Skinner, who didn't defend his title, as the 220-yard breast stroke champion. His time of 2:39.4 was a second off the American record, but easily bested Skinner's 1941 clocking.

Shoot Slated Today At Washington Club

The Washington Gun Club will hold its regular weekly shoot today over the club traps at Thirty-fourth Street and Benning Road Northwest.

Prizes will be awarded in defense stamps in the program's two events, at 25 and 50 targets, beginning at 2:30. Visitors are welcome to try luck, using their own fowling pieces on the skimming clays. If guns are needed, the club offers to supply same.

Davis Shines As Navy Beats Cornell, 4 to 1

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, April 3.—Sophomore Jack Davis, Navy's southpaw pitcher, limited Cornell to four hits and struck out 10 batters today as the Middies copped their first baseball decision of the season, 4 to 1.

Davis, who closely resembles Bob Feller, also lined a double in the second inning which scored Catcher Lefty Lavrakas with Navy's winning run.

The youngster's lone walk of the game cost him a shutout when he passed Lou Daukas in the fifth. The Cornell first sacker took third on Ronnie Stillman's single and scored on Lee Turner's fly.

Cornell's defeat was its fourth in as many starts. Navy dropped its opener to Harvard yesterday.

Eleven Crews Invited to Poughkeepsie

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., April 3.—Six college and university crews have been invited to complete in the annual Poughkeepsie Regatta in addition to the five regular members of the Intercollegate Rowing Association, Capt. Thomas S. King, U. S. N., chairman of the board of stewards announced today.

Capt. King said the invitations had been issued some time ago, contingent on whether the regatta would be held this year. The event, climax of the Eastern College rowing season, is held annually in June.

Invitations were sent to Princeton, Rutgers, M. I. T., Wisconsin, Washington and the University of California, Capt. King said. All are former competitors in the regatta.

Navy, Cornell, Syracuse, Pennsylvania and Columbia are members of the association.

Wildlife Benefit Skeet Shoot Set Here Tomorrow

The Elks Skeet Club will hold a shoot for benefit of the Federation of Wildlife tomorrow, starting at 9 a. m. and continuing until dark. Admission will be 50 cents and all proceeds will be turned over to the federation for conservation work.

Among the outstanding shooters scheduled to be on hand to vie for brassards to be awarded winners of all classes are R. M. Watson and Clayborne Woods.

George Deyoe, the club's best shooter, national champion and captain of the All-America skeet team, will not be on hand. Deyoe has joined the Navy with rank of lieutenant to teach skeet shooting.

Nats Will Unveil Buck Newsom Today

Bobo Will Pitch Against Phils; Starting Washington Line-up Also in Dress Rehearsal

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Orlando, Fla., April 3.—The Nats' first full-dress rehearsal for the 1942 season has been programmed for tomorrow at Tinker Field by Manager Bucky Harris. All hands who have won regular roles will be in the line-up against the Phils.

Buck Newsom will make his pitching debut for the Nats, and for the first time this season Harris will have on the diamond the complete infield which will start the season.

After a siege of injury and sickness, Bobby Estalella and Frank Croucher will take up jobs in the same infield combination. Estalella will be at third base, and Croucher at second. Rookie Bob Repass will be at shortstop and Mickey Vernon at first.

Harris will muster all three of his regular outfielders for tomorrow's battle. George Case and Bruce Campbell have always been available but Stan Spence, in centerfield, will be celebrating his return to the line-up after a week-long siege with the dentist. Jake Early will do the catching.

Harris Figures It Best Line-Up

"This is the ball club that I'm depending on to put us in the first division," said Harris. "It looks like the best we can do at every position. Croucher's arm isn't well yet, but he's trying to play the soreness out of it. I'm keeping him in the line-up, because he needs to look at some more pitching before the season opens."

The Nats have been a tremendous success in the Grapefruit League even with only the occasional services of Estelella, Croucher and Spence, and Harris visualizes a vast improvement in his club's batting attack henceforth.

"I didn't realize how much we'd miss Estelella's bat until he was out of there," said Harris. "He's a threat when he walks up there with a bat in his hands. He may be no great third baseman, but I'm willing to go along with him in exchange for the hits he'll make.

Spence has been one of the major

Hoya Golfers Lose Opener To Duke, 22-5

By the Associated Press

Durham, N. C., April 3.—Duke's golf team opened its 1942 campaign with a 22-5 victory over Georgetown University today. It also was G. U.'s first match. Sophomore Bill Golfthorp was the pacesetter for the Blue Devils. In his first time out for the Duke linksmen, Golfthorp toured the Hope Valley layout in 68, 2 under par.

Also taking a leading part in the Duke victory was Grover Poole, one of North Carolina's top amateurs. In the No. 1 match, feature of the afternoon, Poole captured all three possible points from Tom Halligan of the Hoyas. Bud Sharkey accounted for most of the losers' points when he took three from Jack DeWitt in their singles match and then paired with Halligan to get an even split with Poole and DeWitt in the twosome.

The results:

Poole (Duke) 3, Halligan 0; Sharkey (Georgetown) 3, DeWitt 0; Golfthorp (Duke) 3, Rohrey 0; Nunn (Duke) 2½, Myer ½; Garrett (Duke) 3, Donohue 0; Chapman (Duke) 3, Cussek 0.

Poole-DeWitt 1½, Halligan-Sharkey 1½; Golfthorp-Nunn 3, Rohrey-Meyer 0; Garrett-Chapman 3, Donohue-Cussek 0.

Feller & Co. Defeat Spider Nine, 13 to 1

By the United Press

Norfolk, Va., April 3.—A great aggregation of former baseball stars—including Bob Feller, Sam Chapman and Ace Parker—paced the U. S. Naval Training Station to a 13-to-1 victory over the University of Richmond ball club today.

Feller pitched the first three innings for the Gobs—the U. S. Naval Training Station—allowing the only Richmond tally to cross home plate. Little "Sonny" Wholey proved that big names meant nothing to him as he drilled the Iowa speedball artist's Sunday pitch down the third-base line for a double which drove in the only Spider run.

The big offensive gun for the Gobs was Vincent Smith, former American Association player, who blasted out a mighty homer with two on in the first inning. He followed Sam Chapman, former star outfielder for the Philadephia Athletics, who had been an easy out from third to first with bases loaded.

The naval unit sported $150,000 worth of pitching talent in Feller and Freddie Hutchinson, for whom Detroit paid $50,000 a few seasons ago. "Hutch" had a few difficulties from time to time, but managed to squeeze through without mishap.

Feller was a little wild, as usual, but said his fast ball was better than ever and his curve ball unusually sharp.

The game was played before 5000 spectators, mostly Navy personnel, and followed impressive ceremonies which featured an address by Rear Admiral Manley H. Simons, commandant of the Fifth Naval District.

Old George Earnshaw Takes Over Baseball Team at Jacksonville Naval Station

Former A's Hurler Now Commissioned Officer in U. S. Navy

Today, at the Naval Air Station, Jacksonville, Fla., Lieut. George Earnshaw, who along with Lefty Grove, was an ace flinger for the Philadelphia Athletics in the pennant-winning years of '29-'30-'31, is aiding another victory drive.

A well-known figure among baseball men a decade ago, the "Moose" came up to the majors from Baltimore in 1928 to join former Oriole teammates, Lefty Grove, Joe Boley, Max Bishop and Jimmy Foxx. He stayed to help win Connie Mack's last three pennants, moved on to the Chicago White Sox in '33 and then finished up in '34 with Brooklyn and St. Louis in the National League.

Always a work horse, big 6-foot-4 George had his best year in 1929, winning 24 while losing 8. He won 86 games from 1929 through 1932. their job. Baseball is their relaxation.

Bill Kennedy, Kvasnak, 2 Others Leave

Sensational Rookie Sent to Minors for Seasoning; Anderson Is Given Release

By a Staff Correspondent

Orlando, Fla., April 3.—Second Baseman Eddie Lyons and Pitcher Bill Kennedy were the major casualties when the ax fell today on six members of the Nats' squad. The players were apportioned, three each, to the Nats' Chattanooga and Charlotte farms.

Lyons, 18-year-old sensation of the Nats' camp, reverted to the Charlotte club in company with Outfielder Alex Kvasnak, another minor sensation among the rookies, and Pitcher Bill Zinser.

To Chattanooga, in addition to Kennedy, went Pitchers Ray Scarborough and Arnold Anderson. The latter has been advised by his Iowa draft board that he will not be inducted for "at least two months."

No Good on Bench

Manager Harris was apologetic for the release of Lyons and Kennedy declaring that normally they would be retained by the Nats. "They may be back with us before too many months, because they've showed me a lot, but they wouldn't improve on the Washington bench. They've got to be playing ball."

Kennedy, the only left-hander on the Washington staff, had been one of the more impressive rookies in training camp with his consistently clever performances, but Harris feared he would be set-back in his thus far promising efforts to master his control unless he saw plenty of action.

On the face of it Harris chose to string along with Rookies Hardin Cathey and Bill McCullough, in preference to Kennedy. Both Cathey and McCullough own more pitching poise than the left-hander.

Can Be Recalled

Lyons is definitely tabbed for future reference by Harris and may be called back in a hurry if Croucher does not fill second base specifications. The boy has impressed Harris as a better hitter than Croucher, but Harris is eager to have him playing regularly so he can polish his fielding.

Kvasnak is Scout Joe Cambria's most recent "find" and in his brief trial with the Nats he demonstrated that he can hit, run and field. A sore throwing arm has been hampering him. "We'll always know where to get Kvasnak if any of our fielders fall down on us," said Harris.

Ed Madjeski, rookie catcher out of the Florida State League, will be retained by the Nats as a third-string backstop, Harris announced.

North Carolina Nine Blanks Maryland, 6-0

Chapel Hill, N. C., April 3.—North Carolina's varsity baseball team gained sweet revenge in a couple of ways here today in the first defense of its Southern Conference championship.

In beating Maryland, 6-0, the Tar Heels squared accounts with the Terps which were one of only three Southern Conference teams to defeat the Tar Heels in 1941. The victory also came at the expense of husky Bob Smith, No. 1 pitcher of the Old Liners, who was the chap that pitched the 5-to-4 victory over Carolina at College Park last spring.

Smith was stingy with his hits in today's battle for he set down the conference title holders with only five safeties. But the Tar Heels hit at the opportune moments and rang up an impressive victory.

Henry (Bo) Reynolds, hard hitting centerfielder, was the only Carolina player to get more than one hit off Smith, but both of Reynolds' blows were big ones. His screaming triple in the fourth scored "Dub" Johnson, first baseman, with the first run, and his long home run to right field in the sixth brought Johnson, who had preceded him with a single, all the way around for two more tallies.

V.P.I. Nine Wins, Splits With Ohio

Blacksburg, Va., April 3 (AP).—Virginia Tech used three hurlers today to turn back Ohio University, 8 to 5, and split the two-game series. The Ohioans scored a 7-to-6 win in ten innings yesterday.

Joe Moody, Don Yepsen and Ken Fussell, who shared the mound duties for Tech, allowed six hits, while the Gobblers were getting eight off Maldovan and Burdette, but walked nine batsmen. They were frequently in trouble, but came through in the pinches. The Bobcats had 14 men left on base.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., April 3.—This has been a notable week in baseball, what with the American League's No. one and No. two zanies, Buck Newsom and Gerald Walker, figuring in trades. The eagerness with which the Nats and Reds snapped up Newsom and Walker, respectively, was matched only by the unreluctance of the Tigers and Indians to get rid of 'em.

POVICH

Down through their big league careers, Newsom and Walker have been managerial headaches, but otherwise they have little in common. Walker's daffiness has been confined to the hours between 3 and 5 p. m. when he is in uniform. Newsom's after-dark escapades constitute the cross his succession of managers have borne.

As a ball player, Walker is not quite bright, as his scatter-brained base running for every club he has played with attests. But out of uniform he is an astute fellow who in the off season operates the most prosperous drug store in Orlando and is a solid citizen of the communit. Walker rarely has been credited with a smart play in baseball, and Newsom has been rarely charged with a dumb one. That's another difference.

Big Newsom, who for several years has been profaning one of the great pitching arms of baseball by his refusal to stay in condition, shames the likes of Walker with his shrewdness on the ball field. When the ball game starts, Newsom may be fat and tuckered, but he brings onto the field a very good baseball brain. Newsom can be accused of much, but there can be no quarrel with his baseball sense. There may be little that is rational about Buck's idea of physical fitness between pitching assignment, but on the ball field he knows the score.

Greenberg Booed on Account of Walker

Walker, on occasion, has been a hero for the Tigers, the White Sox, the Nats, and Indians, and he may be a popular fellow, too, with the fans of Cincinnati, but thus far even his successful exploits on the bases have been more daring than smart. He has a way with the fans, though. Hank Greenberg was telling about that the other night.

"Some ball players would be booed out of the park for doing the things that Walker has done," Greenberg was saying, "but somehow the fans loved him. I remember a day when Walker was on first base and I was on third. There was one out. Gerald was fooling around, taking too much of a lead, and suddenly the pitcher trapped him off base with a quick throw to first. Gee started for second and he led the whole Cleveland infield a merry chase when they had to run him down.

"There was nothing for me to do, but to try to sneak home on the run-down, and I started to run. They shifted the play from Walker and got me at home. Gerry of course reached second safely, but I was out because of his stupid play. I was booed on my way back to the bench, and when the inning was over, Gerry got a big hand from the fans. It started me to thinking that what I needed was a little of Walker's color."

Walker Was Hero and Also 'Bum'

Our favorite Walker story concerns his 1934 world series episode when, in the seventh and decisive game between the Tigers and the Cardinals, Walker was sent in as a pinch-hitter in the ninth. He was presidential timber in Detroit when he opened the ninth with a hit that put the tying run on base, and a minute later he was a low form of bum with the same Detroit fans who had just given him a terrific ovation.

Walker likes to tell the story on himself. "My family was down in Mississippi listening to the broadcast of the game when I went to bat in that ninth inning," he relates. "My two little boys, Pat and Mike, were washing the family car with the radio turned on when the announcer said I was being sent in to pinch hit. The next thing they heard was all that noise when I singled, and I want to tell you those two kids were happy.

"Then a half minute later, they heard those 55,000 fans send up a loud groan and it came over the radio that I was picked off base. Pat and Mike weren't surprised, I guess. They just looked at each other and said, 'that's our pop.'"

The Baseball Season Opens: A Preview

New York, April 3.—Here's a myopic preview of the 1942 baseball season:

Six owners will come down with sore arms and gawk necks while waving flags on opening day and trying to check the box office count at the same time . . . Wes Ferrell will announce his comeback . . . the Dodgers will lose two out of the first five games and MacPhail will renew vigorous efforts to trade Dixie Walker . . . Joe Gordon, battihg .019 for the spring season, will win the opening game for the Yanks with a nonchalant home run in the eighth . . . Ted Williams and Joe DiMaggio will be booed by a rasping minority which in turn will be booed by thousands . . . The Cards will have some kind of bad break, and won't get hot until too late in the season . . . Wes Ferrell will quit baseball.

CONSIDINE

Buck Newsom will be traded to the Browns, then will be drafted by the A's, then sold to the Cubs, then to the Braves—pausing only long enough at each place to say, "This is where I've always wanted to pitch" . . . The mighty hosts of baseball will play an All Star game that will bombard the sports pages and the air lanes, and raise almost as much money for service relief funds as Joe Louis made in two minutes and 56 seconds . . . The Phils, realizing the futility of attempting to attract baseball fans, will stage military drills. If an outstanding drill-master is developed thereby, he will be sold to Phil Wrigley for $75,000, unless General Manager Jimmy Gallagher handles the deal, whereupon the price will be $100,000 . . . "Reports that Wes Ferrell will return to baseball could not be checked at press time."

Double Vision Works Both Ways

Paul Derringer's double vision—on which count he sued some firm and collected $1000—will force him to protest repeatedly to umpires that the enemy has more than one runner on each base. He will be comforted, however, whenever he looks around and sees those eight Cincinnati infielders backing him up . . . The Indians will sink so rapidly that Bos'n's Mate Feller will be mustered out of the Navy by his draft board, upon its realization that he had many, many dependents . . . Bill Werber, who is an insurance man on the side—even though some of his slumps might indicate that it is baseball which is his true avocation—will write a record-breaking number of policies among his fellow Giants, as soon as those National League hitters begin leaning against Giant pitching . . . Judge Landis will step in heavily when winning ball clubs, with rising attendances, begin to welsh on their announced intention of letting in uniformed soldiers and sailors gratis.

Even with an ailing limb and a jaded batting eye, Johnny Mize won't represent the biggest financial debacle of the era. That title will go to Dick Wakefield, the University of Michigan outfielder to whom the Tigers paid a $50,000 bonus to sign. Wakefield couldn't make the grade in spring training camp; and probably soon will be drafted into the Army . . . Brooklyn fans will boo Mel Ott, who betrayed them by succeeding Bill Terry, whom they really enjoyed booing . . . Clark Griffith and Don Barnes will be hospitalized for strained back muscles after taking bows for speeding up national defense by playing more night games . . . Hank Greenberg will become a second lieutenant and climb a little closer to the $50,000 salary he left behind him . . .

Gordon Will Get Mad, Bat .794

With the Yanks too-too bored with success, the hustling White Sox will make a determined bid for first place, about July 4. Gordon, hitting .198, then will bat a .794 during a critical Yankee-White Sox series and the Chicago bid will dissolve . . . So will Gordon . . . For the first two months of the season, DiMag, Williams and Cleveland's Lee Fleming will have a stirring three-way race for the batting lead. Fleming will drop back, when the pitchers wise up to him, and from there to the tape it will be Williams and DiMag with few points separating them—and with each striving mightily (and successfully), to stop the rasping sounds from the rear . . .

Casey Stengel's reputation as funny will be further dimmed by the counter-performances of his Boston Braves—after the Cards miss the pennant, Sam Breadon will place Branch Rickey on the market, for $150,000, stamped "guaranteed by the seller of Dizzy Dean, Joe Medwick and Johnny Mize" . . . Organized baseball will let slip another opportunity to hire Babe Ruth as a good will ambassador and send him on a tour through defense factories, schools, community groups, clubs, etc. . . . For different editions of the same paper, Connie Mack will say (a) the Yanks are the greatest team he ever saw, and (b) the Yanks are not the greatest team he ever saw . . . The first bomb (Let's pray it never falls) will cancel all night games and send more minor leagues into bankruptcy . . .

The winners? That's too obvious. The Yanks and Dodgers, though this time it will be the Yanks who'll have trouble. The feature of the World Series will be that Buck Newsom, who will pitch the opening series game for the Yanks, will be traded in midseries to the Dodgers.

St. Louis Cards Trample Tigers Fourth Straight Time, 9-5

Fuchs, Rowe Touched for 16 Safeties

Cooper Shackles Detroit Until 8th; Yanks and Dodgers Beat Service Men

By the Associated Press

Lakeland, Fla., April 3.—The St. Louis Cardinals made it four straight today over the Detroit Tigers in their nine-game spring series by hammering Rookie Charley Fuchs and Schoolboy Rowe for 16 safeties and a 9-to-5 victory.

Fuchs, regarded as the rookie find of the Detroit camp, was rapped for nine hits and six runs over a five-inning stretch, but Rowe might have gotten by unscored on except for two errors by Shortstop Billy Hitchcock in the ninth that gave the Cards three more runs.

Morton Cooper, Cardinal right-hander, permitted only one Detroiter to advance as far as third in seven innings, but the Tigers slapped him about in the eighth for five safeties, including two doubles and five runs. The inning was the biggest the Tigers have had in 20 Florida engagements.

Dallas, Tex., April 3 (AP).—The New York Giants broke the Cleveland jinx today, stopping the Indians, 5-1, in a game that was halted after seven and a half innings to enable the teams to catch a train.

It was the first victory for the Giants in their last five games against the Tribe and their second in eight contests of the barnstorming series.

The Giants scored all their runs off Joe Krakauskas, who walked nine men in the six innings he worked and yielded seven of the nine Giant hits, including a homer by Hank Leiber.

Brave Regulars Win

Sanford, Fla., April 3 (AP).—Jim Hickey, farmhand pitcher from Abington, Mass., went the full distance today while hurling the regulars to a 7-3 win over the Yannigans in the Boston Braves' last intra-squad practice game of the spring season. He gave the opposition 11 hits.

Phils' Hans Lobert Happy Despite Shadow of Cellar

Veteran Manager Doesn't Have to Worry About First Place, So He's Having Good Time

By Judson Bailey

Associated Press Sports Writer

Deland, Fla., April 3.—The most cheerful manager in the major leagues is 61-year-old John (Hans) Lobert, blustery bow-legged boss of the Philadelphia Nationals.

Considering that his club is an absolute cinch to finish in the cellar again, Lobert might be expected to act like a martyr bearing up nobly under a burden too heavy for other men to carry.

Instead he is a combination Dutch uncle and big brother to an assortment of very old and very young ball players who are trying just as hard, and having just as much fun, as any of the pennant contenders this spring.

The boys run and frolic, make mistakes, miss signals and occasionally surprise everybody including themselves with some good baseball. If a couple of the fielders drift close together for a bit of conversation during batting practice, some other player is sure to scream, "Hey, break up the Elks' convention."

Hans Spurs His Boys On

Usually Lobert's voice can be heard above all the rest. He is always spurring somebody to run a little farther and a little faster and within the bounds of his age, he is as active as any of the youngsters.

He sheds worries like the Florida sun dries up the dew. Today, when names of his regulars came up for appraisal, it seemed that every one was ill or maimed, or just out of a sick bed.

But was Lobert downcast?

"Why, this isn't so bad," the manager declared with a shrug. "Every club gets this kind of trouble in the spring. It's better to have the boys get sick or hurt during the training period than it would be after the season starts."

The fact is that Lobert, whose playing career goes back to the days of that other "Hans," John Honus Wagner, is as tickled at getting to be a manager as a kid is with his first toy, or a young man is with his first chance in the big leagues.

Always Had Ideas

Lobert has been with Philadelphia as a coach since 1934 and he always has had ideas. He has wanted to let the young players run. Let them make their mistakes and profit by them, let them get fun out of the game which of necessity is a serious business for older players and pennant-contending clubs. Now he is getting to try his ideas.

Libert has been around a long time and is not kidding himself or his friends. He knows he is with a poor ball club that must make a nickel here and save a nickel there and finish last.

As long as there have to be Phillies (that is the name on their training uniforms in spite of the club's edict that they are to be called Phils), then Lobert is the perfect man for the job.

Navy Relief Pin Tourney Starts At Hyattsville

Bowlers all over the Metropolitan district are signing up for the Naval Relief handicap tournament scheduled to start this afternoon at the Hyattsville Recreation alleys. Oscar Hiser, owner of the drives, originated the idea for bowling and reports that duckpinners of both sexes are showing interest by making reservations for either this afternoon starting at 2 o'clock or tomorrow at the same time. Bowlers may enter as late as 8 o'clock tonight with 11 being the last shift Sunday night.

The event costs $2 for the three games with scratch for both sexes established at 130 with a two-thirds handicap. The women will bowl in their own section and have their own prize list, but Hiser is guaranteeing $100 as first award for the men.

Earnshaw 'Hurls' For Navy Team

consecutive scoreless innings against St. Louis Cardinals in the 1930 world series was one of the masterpieces of world series mound performances.

At the Naval Air Station Lieut. Earnshaw, a graduate of Swarthmore College, is a personnel officer. His job is on a full-time schedule, and only late in the afternoons is he away from his work and on the station's new ball diamond.

Already this season the Fliers have defeated Atlanta, champions of the Southern League, 3 to 2, in a ten-inning ball game. Although he has a squad of 26 men, Lieut. Earnshaw still faces problems, for the majority of his players are aviation cadets.

His team has scheduled games with several minor-league clubs, including Jersey City, Jacksonville, Rochester, Birmingham and Baltimore, and with two major-league teams, the Boston Braves and the New York Yankees. Also included on the schedule is a home and home series with Jacksonville's "friendly rival," the Naval Air Station at Pensacola, Fla.

Renowned among baseball men as a story teller, big "Moose" has a yarn for every occasion. Recently he told his team about the last time he appeared in New York with the Chicago White Sox.

"The Yanks were so glad to see us they sent taxicabs to our hotel every day," he cracked. "They wanted to make sure that we got to the ball park, and they never wanted us to leave town."

Realizing that Hank Greenberg, one of the Army's best-known selectees, was at McDill Field, near St. Petersburg, Fla., about 200 miles south of Jacksonville, Earnshaw asked his team manager to write the former Detroit slugger for a game. The manager wrote a formal letter. Time went by and there was no reply.

A little bit disturbed, Earnshaw took the matter in hand. His note to Hammering Henry went something like this: "Listen, you big lug. I hear you have a ball club down there. We want a game. I may not have much left, but I can strike you out three or four times."

The game was set for early in May.

Blozis Competes In Carolina Relays Today

By the Associated Press

Chapel Hill, N. C., April 3.—Three world record holders arrived here today and worked out briefly in preparation for the Carolina Relays tomorrow.

They are Al Blozis, of Georgetown, Dick Vandorpe and Leonard Watson, both of Seton Hall Preparatory School in New Jersey.

Blozis is holder of five world shotput records. His current best indoor mark is 57 feet ¾-inch. Tomorrow he will aim for the world outdoor record now held by Jack Torrence, formerly of Louisiana State.

American League Schedules Going Fast; Got Yours?

The Post's once-ample supply of pocket-sized American League baseball schedules is running low, so if you haven't yours yet, don't delay another day.

To obtain one simply call at the counter of The Post, 1337 E Street Northwest, or send in a self-addressed stamped envelope to the Schedule Editor, Sports Department, soon.

Remember there's no charge, other than mailing costs, but you'd better hurry for there'll be no more after the present supply is gone.

Tom Skinner Rolls 152 High As Mates Win

The District Government League at Brookland saw Tom Skinner, Police No. 1, roll 152 for high single that enabled his mates to win a pair from Police No. 7 and also post team highs of 618 and 1709. Bill Castle's 366 was what Sewer Department needed in taking two from Repair Shop, and Clarence Mitchell's 375 high set was wasted as his Building Inspectors dropped three to Pumping Station No. 2.

HYATTSVILLE

Chet Johnson's 141-362 and Usilton's 369 were top totals in the Businessmen's loop at Hyattsville Recreation with Shroyer's and Youtsey's sharing team highs with respective counts of 566 and 1588. Crowder's 127-346 led the Youtsey boys to a sweep of Gas No. 2, while Sampson's 123-345 sparked Boswell & Turner to a pair over Peoples Drug.

ARCADIA

FORT DAVIS

The Miscellaneous boys in the Navy Yard League at Fort Davis won a pair from F. and A. No. 1 to tie the latter for the league lead. Ed Neiderstrasser sparked the wins with his individual highs of 154-400 and also led his boys to the posting of team highs of 628-1742.

ARLINGTON

The Arlington Recreation boys were led by a 150 single and 367 set by Les Payne, Cohen Bros., while Heflin's No. 2 totaled 569 and 1595 in rolling team highs. Conklyn's Flowers won three from Heflin Plumbers as Fairfax Country Club was whitewashing Suburban Floor Service.

Indians Acquire Buster Mills

Cleveland, April 3 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians acquired outfielder Col. B. (Buster) Mills from Kansas City of the American Association in exchange for Outfielder Larry Rosenthal and cash, Roger Peckinpaugh, Indian vice president announced tonight.

Mills, 33 and a right-handed hitter, is expected to take the place of Gerald Walker, holdout outfielder on the Tribal roster.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt and friend

By the Associated Press

Beverly Hills, Calif., April 3.—Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, 29-year-old millionaire turfman, said today he has applied for a commission in the Navy.

At his apartment here he said he had "no idea whether the application will be accepted or not, but I hope it is, and soon."

If he isn't accepted for the Navy, he will try for another branch of the service, he said. He has asked appointment as an aviation voluntary specialist with the rank of lieutenant, junior grade.

He has resigned as president of Belmont Park and of the Maryland Jockey Club of Baltimore, and as director of the Sarasota Racing Association, the United Hunts Club and the Turf and Field Club. He will retain his racing stable of about 20 horses.

Vanderbilt said it was his understanding that the Navy Air Force needs men for administrative jobs to free pilots for flying duty.

"And if I can be of any help I want to do it," he commented.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, sr. went down with the Lusitania, torpedoed during the first World War. Together with his brother, George, Alfred inherited his father's 30 million-dollar estate.

He became president of Pimlico in 1938 and the following year was named head of Belmont Park. A lover of horses, he spent much of his time getting them in condition to race. The greatest of his thoroughbreds was Discovery, winner of $195,287.

Young Vanderbilt married Manuela Hudson of Monterey, Calif., in June, 1938. Separated in November, 1940, Vanderbilt signed final papers in a financial settlement last winter.

Rovers Win Over Sea Gulls, 7-4, Take U. S. Amateur Title

By the Associated Press

Atlantic City, N. J., April 3.—The New York Rovers defeated the Atlantic City Sea Gulls, 7 to 4, tonight, to win the championship of the Amateur Hockey Association of the United States. The victory deadlocked the Rovers and the Washington Eagles for first place in the final standings with six victories and two defeats each, but New York won out by scoring 47 goals to 41 for Washington in the competition between five Eastern Amateur Hockey League teams.

Opening Bid's Closing Rush Wins Belair Purse at Bowie

Pays $11.50; Wahler Rides A 'Triple'

By Walter Haight

Bowie, Md., April 3.—W. W. Crenshaw's colors, victorious yesterday when Dare Bunny won, were in the winner's circle again today, this time after the featured Belair Purse, a battle of five and a half furlongs. Opening Bid, shipped here from Agua Caliente, showed a liking for the Maryland climate and staged a bold closing rush that forced E. K. Bryson's Mar'sman into second money by three parts of a length. Third in the group of seven 3-year-olds was Henry H. Hecht's Firebroom.

Apprentice Jockey C. Wahler shared honors with the winning colt, turning in a masterful ride. Wahler came back with victories in the last two numbers on the card to score a triple and bring his total for the two days to four triumphs.

Opening Bid, which paid $11.50, is trained by F. J. Baker, who was known as "Red" in his jockey days. Baker will be remembered as the boy who rode Jim Dandy to victory in that horse's 100-1 triumph over Gallant Fox and Which One. He has been conditioning horses on the West Coast for some time and this is his first meeting in the East.

Indian Sun set most of the pace in the feature with Don Diveto closest. The other boys rated their mounts and when the top pair faltered, Marksman went to the front. Opening Bid had only one horse beaten at the stretch turn, but he closed with a rush that could not be denied. Firebroom also moved strongly but was slightly bothered by Opening Bid.

Jockey Henri Mora, who rides with success in Maryland, put up a strong finish to win the first race with the Blenheim Farms' Four Stars. The 2-year-old came to the outside after being in trouble to end a front-running duel between Ariel Beam and Fresh Money. Four Stars won by a length and Ariel Beam took the place by a like margin. A dozen juveniles competed in the half-mile test and Four Stars paid $7.30.

Belair Colt Held Highly as Kentucky Derby Candidate

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Apache, owned by William Woodward, is shown pulling up after a morning gallop at Aqueduct track. Trainer Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons is high on the good-looking son of Alcazar, who was raised in nearby Maryland on the Belair Stud Farm. The exercise boy is Joe Donellan, who has been with Trainer Fitzsimmons for 17 years. Apache is Fitz's main hope for the Derby, scheduled May 2

Selections at Bowie

Dear Al:

I told you earlier in the week that Longshot Reilly died during the winter and his selections were a thing of the past. But on opening day, what to my wondering eyes did appear but a "longshot Reilly card." Although I smell the hand of some enterprising Baltimorean in this thing, it has me wondering if genial old Reilly could be sitting up there in the sky somewhere picking horses as usual and relaying his selections to the printer by way of some spiritualist. But all joking aside, the card had two winners. I almost made a deal with Reilly once to write his life's history. He was a public handicapper for more than 40 years. The high point of his career came in Canada one day when he picked every winner on the program. His customers were so enthused that they carried him to the train on their shoulders. Like those who bought his selections, Reilly was in and out of the money many times. His financial status could easily be told at any given time, however, for when he was in the dough he had his fingers loaded with clusters of diamonds. It was said that he was not quite as lucky in love as with the horses. Reilly was easy to touch when he had it. For years Longshot used to sell his cards on the trains out of Washington and Baltimore. He gave a speech in each car, always concluding with "I don't tell no lies about it." One day I told him that he was using the word "no" incorrectly, and that the right word was "any." For about a week Reilly said, "I don't tell any lies about it," but it wasn't long until he was off the beam again. However, every time he saw me getting in the car he remembered, used the word "any" and smiled But in the next car he would go right back to "no." Jack Reilly was O. K. in my book and I hope he is O. K. wherever he is.

BILL.

First race—BRIGHT AND EARLY, despite 119 pounds, looks like the goods in the day's opener. Likes the track and needs only a ride. The entry of REAL BOY and HIBLAZE has a chance in company as cheap as this. MR. JIM has worked well over this track.

Second race—PHARIEN gets a modest weight assignment for this sprint and I'm going to string along. SOLAR STAR is reported fit and will be in the thick of contention. GRENADIER to take care of the others.

Third race—OOMPH could be the right one in this rather open affair. Fits in nicely and is reported to be a good juvenile MAEJAMES has had education and is dangerous. Has a first-time starter, BLEEDING HEART, as an entrymate, BURGOO KING for the show end.

Fourth race—ZACA ROSA was scratched yesterday to await this and appears to have a lock and key on the purse. ASK AUNT ADA has keen early speed and will like the five and a half furlongs. CHUCKLE for the show money.

Fifth race—HAPPY LARK was a world beater here last fall and she might take the top and never look back. DESIGNATOR did a swell job by running second in the Rowe Memorial. Featherweight should give WEATHERITE a chance.

Sixth race—OMISSION was closing fast in the Rowe and appeared ready to go this longer route. I'm forced to string along with the Victor Emanuel representative despite the 123-pound package. CAPE COD outsprinted the top one but may be second best in this. MAECHANCE for the show.

Seventh race—BOSLEE gets 97 pounds and thus rigged may turn back this kind. NAVY and BELLE D'AMOUR to account for the place and show.

Eighth race—LEE'S JIMMIE gets in light and I'm going to take my chances with this plater. HELEN'S LAD and WHITE SAMITE for the other cash positions.

Best bet—ZACA ROSA.

Apache, Fitzsimmons' Derby Hope, Is 'Glamour' Horse

Woodward Colt Appears Promising Bet in Classic; Fitz Likes Chances

By the Associated Press

New York, April 3.—Until the beauty contest judges vote otherwise, the glamour boy of the 1942 Kentucky Derby field has to be Apache, a big brown colt now doing his work and taking his oats in the long barn just off Aqueduct's backside.

He's by several country blocks the best looking Derby eligible in these parts—on looks alone.

A husky fellow, with the strong spreading quarters vital for speed, he's tall and leggy like Omaha, who came out of the same stable to become one of the turf greats, and boasts a long body, a sign of ability to travel over a stretch of ground without stopping for gas.

What's more, he has Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons in his corner, and you don't have to take a vote to know that the sage of Sheepshead Bay is quite a bit better than bad at getting those gallopers fit for the big spring showings.

Now, Mr. Ftiz isn't saying right out in meeting that the colt who picked up a neat $15,075 last year and finished up by knocking off Devil Diver in the Remsen 'cap, is going to run off and hide from those other fellows at the Downs May 2, just like Omaha, Gallant Fox and Johnstown did for Sunny Jim in the last dozen years.

Is Confident

"But," Fitzsimmons told you today as he watched the brown beauty whirl through his early-morning stuff, "I'm more confident, at this stage of his career, that he's fit for the Derby 1¼ miles than I was of Johnstown at this time three years ago."

This is like saying you're going to like next Monday's better than today's turkey, because Johnstown was under a full head of steam and on an express schedule the day he grabbed the necklace of roses.

"Sure," Mr. Fitz agrees, "I know Johnstown had speed, because he was like his daddy, Jamestown, one of the fastest. But until the Derby I didn't know how far he could carry that speed. His breeding and his conformation didn't show it. Take Apache now. He looks a little like Omaha, with those good quarters and shoulders and the long legs and body, and he's bred to run all afternoon."

Apache's workouts up to now have proved it, too. Since Mr. Fitz returned from Florida about three weeks ago, the years still sitting pleasantly on his grizzled frame, the son of Alcazar as been moving right along. He's already galloped the full mile and a quarter four times and has breezed three-eighths in 35 seconds, which is not exactly tarrying along the way.

It would be a nice thing if Apache won this one for his old man, too. Alcazar was a pretty fair English horse, winner of some $40,000 and several big stakes before Owner William Woodward brought him over here for stud.

A few months ago he joined the Army—going into the Remount Service to help build our Cavalry Apache's dam, Flying Song, is by Sir Gallahad III, the line Woodward has made famous in American stake history.

So, since breeding always has played a big part in the Derby, you can't say the folks didn't do right nobly by this youngster.

Bill Knickerbocker Purchased by A's

Phoenix, Ariz., April 3 (AP).—Connie Mack today bought Bill Knickerbocker, 31-year-old second baseman, from the Chicago White Sox to fill out the Philadelphia Athletics' infield.

Knickerbocker, obtained at the waiver price of $7500, will join the Philadelphia squad at El Paso tomorrow. He has a major league batting average of .278.

"I think this is the best break I've gotten in a long while," Mack commented. "I feel now that our infield . . . will be pretty good."

Rider Smith Ill; Mowgli May Not Race

Special Dispatch to The Post

Upperville, Va., April 3.—Weather conditions tomorrow will determine whether Mowgli, Mrs. Crompton Smith's wonder horse, will run in the Rokeby Challenge Bowl race for gentlemen, which is the feature of the Piedmont Hunt point-to-point races, scheduled to be run at Rokeby, estate of Lieut. and Mrs. Paul Mellon, near Upperville. Smith, who always rides Mowgli, is suffering with a bad case of Laryngitis, following a cold he contracted at Warrenton point-to-point races. If the day is stormy, Smith will not ride. If he doesn't ride Mowgli will be scratched. The two are a combination hard to beat. Winners of three consecutive point-to-point races and second in another is their record so far.

Should Mowgli be scratched, the program is still alluring, with some of the best cross country horses in the East listed. Scheduled also to race are Kitty Fid, Big Charley, Beaufast, Fanny Adams, Netope, Border Warren, Scarlet, Response, Dunlad, High Pinnacle, Dilate, Indian Duke, and Cautious Tom. Other entries may be made at the post.

The 5½-mile flagged course is one of the best in the country. It was marked at noon today and competitors have been allowed to walk the course since that time. From advantageous points, most of the races can be seen by spectators. Second Lieut. Paul Mellon, recently has returned to his Rokeby estate commissioned as a Cavalry officer, for a short furlough, and he and Mrs. Mellon will be on hand to welcome the crowd who will attend.

Additional entries are expected to be in the heavyweight race for men, which has four listed at present. These are Nemo, Ralph Boy, Big Charley and Beaufast.

The first race on the program, the ladies race, will be called at 2:30 p. m. Six entries are on the card for this race. Copper Queen, Truckman, Metom, Keeline, Sun Alv and Gone Away.

R. B. Young will be the starter, and the paddock judge is W. B. Watkins.

Maryland University Show Lists 15 Classes Today

Valliant Horsemen to Carry Cup of Water Over Jumps; Program Opens at 10:30

By Anne Hagner

Fifteen well-balanced classes may have something to do with the long list of horses set to show at the University of Maryland Riding Club Horse Show at College Park, Md., today, but several hundred spectators will be on hand for the express purpose of seeing local horsedom in a most unusual event.

Brave entrants in the open horsemanship class will ride over four 3½-foot jumps, carrying a mug of water. Judging will be on the basis of seat, hands, general control of the mount over the entire course—and how much water is left in the mug when the course is completed.

More normal classes are for pony hacks and jumpers, pony knock-down-and-out, bridle path hacks, maiden jumpers, ladies' hunters, student hacks, pairs of jumpers, hunter hacks, triple bar, handy hunters, open jumping sweepstake, working hunters and knock-down-and-out.

Humphrey S. Finney, editor of The Maryland Horse, and Capt. Boris Wolkonsky will judge the card, which begins at 10:30 a. m.

Particular emphasis will be placed on the triple bar event, for which most of the open jumpers will be shooting, and the working hunters' outing, for which Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the university, has donated a handsome challenge trophy.

Entries have been assured from virtually all important local barns, including Charles Carrico's Recall, Margaret Cotter's Rocksette and King Rock, Bobby Lee's Bonne Fille, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Bradley's Night Flight, Mrs. Gardner Hallman's Boot Jack, George Lawrence's Tiger Annie, Eva Rabbitt's Jack's Queen, Eddie Talbert's Crusoe and Good Friday, Charles Fletcher's Nanette, Mrs. Lee Counselman's Kristi, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel E. Bogley's Ringmaster, Anita Mammele's Caddy's Trump, Joseph Pozehl's Randle's Way, Anne Hagner's Show Girl, David Martin's Cateer, Sligo Riding School's Cody, and many others.

Nats Unveil Buck Newsom Against Phils

surprises of the Nats' camp. The chunky center fielder who batted only .232 with the Red Sox last year has been making a mockery of that figure with his solid clouting in the Grapefruit League. He has hit the Nats' only two home runs of the spring season and otherwise has been belting the pitching solidly.

"One of the pleasant surprises about Spence," says Harris, "is the way he has been tying into left-handed pitching for a left-handed batter. I was afraid that we might be a little bit too left-handed in our batting order against southpaws, but Spence's hitting is a great comfort. And he is the best defensive center fielder we've had since Sammy West was in his prime."

The Nats have two years to run on their contract with the Orlando Chamber of Commerce for the use of Tinker Field as a training base.

With Clark Griffith's permission, the Orlando folks have extended an invitation to the Philadelphia Athletics to share Orlando with the Nats next year as a training ground . . . Advance sale of tickets for the Nats' opening game in Washington against the Yankees, on April 14, has hit a new high, Griffith Stadium officials have advised the Nats' owner . . . Griffith restates emphatically that Buck Newsom will not be sold or traded unless he flops as a Washington pitcher . . . Bob Repass has slumped in his Grapefruit League hitting, but he is still making the fancy fielding plays which leave him unchallenged for the Nats' shortstop job . . . Ossie Bluege will shortly be given a player's status . . . Harris plans to use him at third base for defensive purposes late in any game in which the Nats have a narrow lead.

3 A.A.U. Titles Split Evenly By Boys Clubs

Three Boys Club teams split the trio of championships available last night as the annual A. A. U. Basketball Tournament went through the final round on two Washington Boys Club floors.

At Eastern Branch Georgetown Branch, W. B. C., took the 105-pound crown with a well deserved 32-24 triumph over Eastern Branch. The winners were led by Western and Mallon, with 12 and 11 points, respectively.

At Central Branch winner of the 120-pound title was the Central Americans, who nosed out their clubmates, the Senators, by a 28-24 count. In the 135-pound finale the champion was Alexandria Boys Club, which managed for the most one-sided of the night's triumphs by smashing Hayes A. C., 41-9.

Lew Diamond May Land Turner Job

Promoter Joe Turner is expected to name Lew Diamond, veteran fight manager and promoter, as his new matchmaker to succeeed Gabe Menendez, who has enlisted in the Army, in the next few days, it was learned last night.

Diamond, manager of Gus Lesnevich, world's light-heavyweight champion, has promoted in Tampa and Miami and is well acquainted with all phases of the boxing game.

It is believed that Diamond was recommended by Mendez before his departure for Tampa, where he is to be inducted next week.

Turner had originally planned to make his own matches, but if he can come to terms with Diamond this weekend Diamond will take over in time to make final arrangements for a boxing show scheduled at Riverside Stadium, April 20.

A Billy Murray-Carl Guggino match has already been made, and Turner is planning to close another eight-rounder for a double windup.

Corpl. Bud Ward Gets Leave for Golf Play

Spokane, Wash., April 3 (AP).—Corpl. Marvin (Bud) Ward has been granted a furlough to permit him to play in the annual Masters golf tournament at Augusta, Ga.

Mother Is Slain In Same Way as Florence Buzzell

Farmington, Me., April 3 (INS).—State police tonight investigated the death by shooting of Mrs. Mary N. Campbell, 58, mother of 20-year-old Florence Buzzell, whose death last June was under strikingly similar conditions.

Body of Mrs. Campbell was found in a barn on her farm, a .22-caliber pistol bullet wound in her head. The pistol was at her feet.

The Campbell farm is 6 miles from the Chesterville home of Mrs. Campbell's son, John, where the body of Florence Buzzell was found, a .32-caliber pistol wound in her head and the pistol lying at her feet.

Fred G. Wheeler, wealthy middle-aged Farmington cattle dealer, was acquitted last December 3 on a charge of murdering Miss Buzzell, whose education he admitted financing. Florence's death has remained a mystery.

Glen Echo to Open Today—Restreamlined

Glen Echo Park will open its thirty-second annual season at 1 p. m. today. Workmen have been busy for the past month renovating the amusement center and making it ready for the opening day.

According to a press agent's announcement, the entire park has been "restreamlined." Admission and parking is free. Dancing facilities are provided every weekday night from 9 o'clock until midnight.

Nazis Kill 16,700 Reds, Berlin Says

Berlin (From German Broadcasts) (Saturday), April 4 (AP).—The 257th Brandenburg Infantry and the Ninety-seventh Upper Bavarian Light Infantry Divisions have killed more than 16,700 Russians, captured 2250 and destroyed or captured 60 tanks in repulsing 472 Soviet attacks during the past few weeks, the Berlin radio said today.

Film Queens Help Six Jilted Soldiers Forget Home Girls

Hollywood, April 3 (INS).—Six girls back home were shorn of their glamour today.

The girls were the ones who jilted six boys now serving the Army at Camp Callan.

The boys' blues were effectively chased by six other girls, all under contract to Universal Studios.

The six actresses, Janet Blair, Marie Wilson, Irish Adrian, Marjorie Lord, Dorothy Moore and Helen Blizard, took the boys on a sight-seeing tour of Hollywood, luncheon, swimming, a dinner-dance, bowling and roller-skating to help make them forget the girls back home.

The boys were Corpls. John Zane, Philadelphia; Richard Mills, Bonneville, Mo.; Louis Grossman, Muskegon, Mich.; William Moore, Rockwell, Ia., and Joe Neal, Dearborn, Mich., and Private James Canfield, Birmingham, Ala.

Hollywood learned about them when they won the kitties of "Love Insurance, Ltd.," a Camp Callan institution which pays off to members who lose their girl friends.

Dutch Skipper Tells How Sub Sank U-Boat in Battle

London, April 3 (INS).—A rare incident of warfare—a battle between submarines—was reported today by Lieut. Comdr. J. F. Van Dulm, commander of a Dutch submarine which sank a Nazi U-boat in the Mediterranean last fall. The Dutch crew polished off the German vessel with two torpedoes, and then surfaced to pick up the enemy sailors. Van Dulm added:

"The prisoners objected when we removed their lifebelts. They said they might be sent to Canadian prison camps and would need their lifebelts.

"I told them they would be perfectly safe in a British convoy, and that made them mad.

Berlin Claims 41 Allied Warships

Berlin, April 3 (Radiocast Recorded by U. P., New York).—The high command asserted today that in February and March German warships and planes sank 41 British and American naval vessels, including a British cruiser of the Leander class, and damaged 37 others, including 10 cruisers.

Delilah W. Duey Burial Will Be At Chester, Nebr.

Funeral services for Mrs. Delilah W. Duey, 67, widow of David C. Duey, who died at her home, Silver Spring, on Thursday, after an illness of five months, were held yesterday at the funeral home of W. Reuben Pumphrey, Bethesda. The Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of Foundry Methodist Church, Washington, officiated and burial will be at Chester, Nebr.

Mrs. Duey was the mother of Mrs. Fern D. Scheider, supervisor of Montgomery County high schools, and she also leaves the following other children: Mrs. Helen D. Neville and David Guy and Paul C. Duey, all of Silver Spring; Glen W. Duey, Baltimore; Mrs. Pauline Luttermosher, Venezuela; Dr. Harold A. Duey, King City, Calif.; J. Carl Duey, Berkeley, Calif. She is also survived by a sister and two brothers.

Mrs. Duey was a native of Illinois and had lived in Montgomery County about 12 years.

Yippie! Wahoo! Gibson's Rodeo Opens Today

Bronco-bustin', lariat-throwin' cowboys will ride hard this afternoon at 2:30 at Riverside Stadium as they open the world champion rodeo in a nine-day stay. Another performance will be given at 8:30 tonight, 10 per cent of the gross receipts going to The Washington Post's blood bank fund for Children's Hospital.

Led by Hoot Gibson, rodeo star, a cast of more than 100 persons will participate in 23 events. Gibson and his wonder horse, "Dusty," will feature some fancy routines, while the fur is expected to fly when "Doodler," the Brahma bull is led into the arena, and the cowboys try their skill with the bronchos and bulldogging Texas Longhorns. Then, too, there will be colorful cowgirls and Dorothy Dunston, singer of cowboy ballads.

Incidentally, today is the sixtieth birthday of Foghorn Clancy, veteran showman, who is in for a big surprise tonight.

Matinee performances will be held on Saturdays, Sundays and next Wednesday, evening shows nightly, extending through April 12.

War Fronts Don't Bother Birds, Says Lecturer

Many a soldier at the front wakens to the song of birds, Dr. Arthur A. Allen, Cornell University ornithologist, told members of the National Geographic Society in an illustrated lecture at Constitution Hall last night. Birds quickly become accustomed to the noise and confusion of battle.

Dr. Allen showed close-ups of 40 or 50 different species and in addition played records of the songs of more than 20 birds. In the past seven or eight years the speaker has recorded the songs of some 72 different birds on film, later transferred to disk records.

Cigarette Firm's Head Asks Higher Tax on Product

And Carl B. Robbins, president of the Axton Fisher Tobacco Co., made news yesterday when he asked the House Ways and Means Committee to increase cigarette taxes "as one of the least painful methods" of raising 500 million dollars in new revenue.

He added that "the Government needs the revenue and we believe the taxes on cigarettes should be raised."

Under questioning by committee members Robbins said tax increases on cigarettes in the United States and other countries have never shown any effect on sales.

Warning Bullet Of Army Sentry Wounds N. J. Boy

Teaneck, N. J., April 3 (AP).—A Tenafly youth was critically wounded tonight, Prosecutor John K. Breslin, jr., said, when an automobile in which he was riding failed to halt at an Army command and a sentry's warning bullet ricocheted off the highway and struck the boy in the back.

The youth was Raymond Lufkin, 16. The sentry's name was not disclosed.

The shooting occurred near the scene of an accident on March 26 in which one soldier was killed and nine injured when an automobile mowed down a column of drilling soldiers.

Easter Sales Top Records For Season

By the Associated Press

New York, April 3.—Dun and Bradstreet reported today pre-Easter shopping topped sales records for the season, crowds of Christmas rush proportions jamming the stores and buying heavily of spring ready-to-wear clothing.

Cash purchasing, the trade review said, was particularly heavy, demand concentrating on wool clothing and other staples but spreading widely into other lines.

Some retailers, the trade review said, called the increased business "unhealthy," fearing that it might lead to a slump in the heavily-purchased lines later.

Night Openings Noted

Department and specialty stores accounted for most of the largest gains. Anticipatory buying increased volume in such lines as yard goods, knitwear and shoes.

Sales of men's suits, which were at record highs, showed some decline at mid-week, the report said, although turnover still was large in topcoats and furnishings.

The survey took note of night openings by a number of stores in defense centers, and retail promotions that stressed conservation of packaging and discouraging hoarding.

18 to 22% Heavier

Sales gains over 1941, excepting in automotive lines, were continued. On the whole, the rise over last year was estimated at 18 to 22 per cent, partly attributable to the fact Easter was a week later in 1941.

Regional percentage gains were: New England, 20 to 24; East, 18 to 23; Middle West and South, 16 to 24; Southwest, 15 to 22; Northwest, 14 to 20, and Pacific Coast, 20 to 25.

While demands on wholesalers were less than in preceding weeks, activity in most lines surpassed usual expectations. Retailers continued to take delivery of spring merchandise and wholesalers commented on the virtual absence of cancellations even on orders for which shipments had been delayed.

A. T. & T. Reports Gain Of 105,300 Telephones

New York, April 3 (AP). — The American Telephone and Telegraph Co. today said there was a gain of 105,300 telephones in service in its principal subsidiaries last month.

The gain in the previous month was 107,300 and in March, 1941, it was 123,500. The gain this year totaled 322,100 as compared with 371,300 in the first three months of 1941.

By Jerome Barry

How easy, it seemed, to slip the poison in a malted or cheese on rye. It could be the perfect crime. And in the case of Jeremiah Maddux, it almost was. Death missed two victims before it caught up with Jeremiah and it took some brilliant detective work to solve the lunch counter murders.

Here's a Post novel you're sure to enjoy. It's a mystery story told in the humorous soda jerker's jargon.

She Flies Through the Air With the Greatest of Ease—

Glamour has come to the circus. The one thing the big show lacked has been added by the hundreds of chorus girls and ballet dancers who are now performing under the big tent. What is a girl's life like in the circus? New dances, death-defying stunts, ballet numbers, all must be perfected before the show starts on tour. Parade takes you to Sarasota, Florida, and shows you the girls practicing for the coming season.

And So Does He!

Outstanding athlete of the current season has been Dutch Warmerdam, pole vault champion of the world. Seemingly unaffected by the law of gravity, Dutch practically breaks a record every time he lifts his body off the ground. Parade in Sunday's Post shows you what happens when Dutch keeps his feet on the ground.

ALSO IN PARADE . . . Rebuilding England's Bombed Cities; Spring Hat Fashions; New York's Prison Without Walls; Cartoons; News Capsules.

Milton Bacon, who tells homespun stories of the heroism of unknown people in America's small towns on Columbia network's 'God's Country," which you hear over WJSV every Saturday at 11:15 a. m., has one to tell on himself wherein he is by no means the hero.

It concerns his newspaper career, which ended in a blaze of glory—well, at least a blaze.

Bacon—it was then "young Bacon"—was a printer's devil for the old Carthage, Miss., "Democrat." One of his duties was to fold the newspapers on an old-fashioned folding machine and to burn the trimmings left over after he evened off the edges of the sheets.

One day someone had removed the wire basket in which he usually burned the trimmings, so he just threw them at the back of the newspaper building and touched a match to them.

There was a lively wind blowing, and in no time at all the drugstore next door was burning fiercely. It burned to the ground, as did the rest of the block—except the newspaper building.

The Carthage "Democrat" came out next day with the headline, "DEVIL STARTS FIRE," and that same day young Bacon was started on his way to look for another job—preferably one which had nothing to do with matches.

"God's Country," in addition to Bacon's stories, also features folk songs by Burl Wes, who probably has a wider collection of them than anyone else in the country.

Contract Bridge

"I won't bore you with the gory details of the argument, but here are the facts," writes contributor L. Z. concerning a slam hand which featured the Blackwood convention. The cards and bidding are presented in today's box. Here is what L. Z. says:

Today's Hand

WEST DEALER

	♠ J 10 9 ♡ 7 3 ◇ A Q 8 6 4 2 ♣ 9 4
♠ A 8 6 5 3 ♡ 8 6 4 ◇ K 5 ♣ A 7 3	NORTH WEST EAST	♠ K Q 7 4 ♡ A 2 ◇ None ♣ K Q J 8 6 5 2
	SOUTH ♠ 2 ♡ K Q J 10 9 5 ◇ J 10 9 7 3 ♣ 10

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 ♣	1 ♡
1 ♠	2 ◇	3 ♠	4 ◇
4 ♠	Pass	4 NT	5 ◇
5 ♡	Pass	6 ♣	6 ◇
Double	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: A ◇.

"The argument started when my partner led the diamond ace. I claimed he should have known that the opponents had none. But this is really immaterial, as six—in fact, seven—could be made with any lead. The real bone of contention is this:

"I claim that my pass after the six-spade bid was a request for partner, if he could not set the hand, to bid seven diamonds. He claims that he could not tell from his cards whether he could or could not set the hand, and also he had no way of knowing that the opponents were blank in diamonds, or that I was possibly short-suited in their suits, and says that I should have been the one to bid seven. It is also his claim that where there is no score and neither side is vulnerable, there is no such thing as a sacrifice bid.

"Of course a seven-diamond bid might have induced the opponents to go to seven spades, which cannot be defeated. This point did not come up in the argument. I believe, however from the bidding that it should have been very easy to determine that there was a freakish distribution and that, therefore, taking a set would be worth while. As the cards lay, a contract of seven diamonds would go down four tricks, a set of 700 points, with a possibility of being set only three tricks if the diamond finesse was taken, a loss of 500 points. Either set would have been worth it, in my opinion, and that is where the argument stayed."

It is surprising that East and West did not find the grand slam; cue bids in diamonds and hearts by East surely would have done it.

While a save at seven diamonds might have been extremely profitable over the six bid, it cannot be considered seriously because of the peril of pushing the opponents to a grand slam which can be made.

No sacrifice bid can be weighed by the price of the set alone; always the defenders must have in mind the result if the adversaries are forced into a successful game or slam contract. If there is no possible assurance of defeating the opponents at the higher and more profitable bid, the sacrifice should not be attempted.

North was wise to pass; no argument can be found to support South's claim.

The lead of the diamond ace was a poor choice against a small slam, with two tricks needed for a set. A heart lead would be bettter strategy, with the hope of establishing a heart trick and then possibly capturing the ace of diamonds.

U. S. Not Urging Vatican to Snub Japs on Envoy

By the United Press

President Roosevelt yesterday refuted reports that the United States, along with Great Britain, has urged the Vatican not to exchange diplomatic representatives with Japan.

He said at his press conference that he understands discussions are under way which would give Chungking, as well as Tokyo, representation at the Holy See. Transportation difficulties, he said, may make it impossible for the United States to have a permanent representative there.

Myron C. Taylor, former chairman of U. S. Steel Corporation, now is the President's personal representative to the Vatican. He was in this country when it entered the war and has not returned to Rome.

Policeman Still Suspended After Traffic Conviction

Policeman Wilburn A. Shepherd, 37, station clerk at the Tenth Precinct Station, remained under suspension last night following his conviction in Traffic Court of passing a red light.

He was sentenced to pay a $50 fine or go to jail for 30 days by Judge John P. McMahon after pleading guilty to the accusation which had been substituted for a driving-while-drunk count.

Shepherd was arrested at New Jersey Avenue and B Street Southeast Thursday night after his automobile struck a taxicab and was made to post $500 for his release. Sergts. Carl G. Darnall and Ray Aggelson, police night inspectors, suspended him.

Policemen L. A. Hartnett and R. P. Herlong, of the accident investigation unit, placed the drunk-driving charge against Shepherd. At a hearing before Assistant Corporation Counsel Glen A. Wilkinson yesterday, the latter decided there was insufficient evidence to support the charge and preferred the traffic light charge.
